ASTROLOGY.

THE WORLD AS PERMITTED BY THE WONDERFUL REVELATIONS MADAME PERRIGOT ASTROLOGER.

Madame M. A. PERRIGO.

Who reveals secrets do mortal know. Sure resources to happiness does show, Gives fateful events, catastrophes, crosses in love, loss of relations and friends, loss of money, &c., &c., Even beyond despair. She brings together lost loved ones separated, gives information concerning absent friends or business, restores lost or stolen property, tells you the business you are best qualified to follow, and in what you will be most successful, causes steady marriages, and tells you the day, month and year, gives you the name, likeness and character of the person. She reveals your very thoughts, and by her astonishing powers of astrology, lifts the dark and hidden mysteries of the future. Your thoughts are not in the future—the spirits, stars that traverse or predominate in the conflagration—from the no peace and position of the planets all the fixed stars in the heavens at the time of birth, she reduces the future destiny of man. Call not to consult the greatest Astrologer on earth. It costs you but a trifle, and she never, again, gives a fortune an opportunity. Consultation fee, with likeness, and address, and 25 cents, and if the inquirer be a distance can consult the Madam by mail with equal safety and satisfaction to themselves, as if in person. Call or write. Enclose 25 cents, with all inquiries answered and likeness enclosed, sent by mail, or express. Office always open. The strictest secrecy will be maintained, and all correspondence strictly confidential. Inquirers of the highest order furnished their horoscope then. Write plainly the name, place, and date, and in which you were born, enclosing a small piece of hair. Address, MADAME M. A. PERRIGO, P. O. Drawer, 292 Buffalo, N. Y.

REPARATOR CAPILLI.

Three cents worth of this Dye will make your wig—or false

Beautiful black or brown, and not worth a fig.

Come agg, come youthful, come ugly and fair,

And rejoice in the magic of REPARATOR CAPILLI.

REPARATOR CAPILLI.

For restoring hair which had been from whatever cause lost, and for preventing the hair from becoming thin or falling out, this preparation will have no equal. Its effects are not to be seen in days or weeks, or hair upon bald heads in from two to three months, but in a few days. Numerous testimonials have been received that there is nothing that will force or bring the growth of the hair so heartily. Their number is so great, and the character of the witnesses (many their own correspondents) so near reliable, that it will pay any one who may be in doubt to ascertain the genuine from the spurious. It is invariably in fifteen, and sometimes in less than fifteen days, from the application of the first bottle, entirely worthless, and yet, as it is a vegetable preparation, it contains no injurious properties. As such we would say, for the Reparator Capilli, it will do no harm, but unless it fully complies to our representations, if your druggist does not supply the article, if you will forward it, post paid, together with a receipt for the same, we will refund the money on application, provided the bottle be returned. POETRY.

STAY WITH ME, LORD.

BY EDWARD STRETTLE.

Stay with me, Lord! The night is gathering fast,
The sun is sinking in its crimson rest;
My heart is fainting, I dread the hours before me,
But still must linger on and take no rest.

Stay with me, Lord! My duty lies at every
Pain would I mean upo thy gentle sun;
Oh darkness now, the night is cold and dreary,
And fear is rife—O, stay with me! Lord, from harm

Stay with me, Lord! Thou art my only refuge,
Nor can I find the path my feet must tread;
Hide not my guilt—that know I but too only
For all my counsels are by one addled.

Stay with me, Lord! My lifeful heart is turning,
Back from the thirty road that I should go,
And now in twilight shades are ever horrible,
Nothing to have—nothing to know.

Stay with me, Lord! O! pity me here Thou great Shepherd,
And know Jesus even I cannot see Thee now;
O, Son of God, O, Son of Man, pity my sorrows—
And by Thy hand into my fevered brow.

Stay with me, Lord! I hear the river flowing,
Adown the mountain side, I hear the river roaring,
Take me not now, but still uphold my going
And bear with me—I'm the feeble lamb.

Stay with me, Lord! Paint in the dimmer glooming
Methinks I see fair battlements arise,
And through the jewelled gates have softly streaming
The song of happy souls in Paradise.

Stay with me, Lord! The very humblest mansion,
Where I may wait for Thy blessed rest,
Will be sufficient for my soul's expansion—
Within Thy heaven the very lowest place.

SOLITUDE OF SINGLE WOMEN.—The following contributions portrays the forbearance of woman, a christian virtue rarely possessed by the single female. Perhaps a life of celibacy is florine by the latter from unknown causes:

It is a consolation to which a single woman must make up her mind, that the close of life will come to her as to others, and that there is a solitude, which, only she can bear to be natural and satisfying as that rest which succeeds a well spent life. Not in youth, but which gradually grows into the blessings of our lives; and there is another solitude so full of peace and repose, that it is like a deep sleep in the wilderness at the foot of the holiest of angels:

"Although it too distinct than they seem,
And it may be that the extreme loneliness which, viewed afar off, appears to an unmarried woman as one of the saddest of the inevitable results of her lot, shall, by that time have lost all pain, and be regarded but as the quiet, dreamy hour between the light, and the dark, work-a-day world we from back closing our eyes, to think it over before we finally go to rest, or to look forward to the long and deep, rest to coming.

Unfinished life—a life which has such the most of all the material granted, to and through which he is seed dark or bright, in pattern, and is, or should, be, so traced plainly the hand of the great Designer: simply this is worth living for, and although it may be, and is, the sacrifice of lonely, though a servant's and not a daughter's arm, may guide the falling step, though the world will be strange, only who have been successfully saved by physicians, and found to be [illegible] into eradicating worms, so harmful to children.

Chilblerasing, stomp require immediate attention, and the trouble can be avoided by the tonged stickers.

Symptoms of worms in children are often mistaken. Worms in the stomach and bowels constipation, attended with occasional diarrhea, are of a rare remedy. The combination of ingredients used in making is such as to give the best possible effect with safety.

Sold by druggists in medicines at 25 cts. a box.

LAY SERMONS.

KILLING AN ENEMY.

"That man will be the death of me yet," said Paul Leverings.

He looked worried but not angry.

"Who means Dick Hardy?"

"Yes."

"What has he been doing to thee, now?"

The gleaming eyes was a Friend named Isaac Martin—a neighbor.

"He's always doing something, friend Martin. Whenever I go across that I don't have complaint of him. Yesterday one of the boys came and told me he saw him throw a stone at my new Durham cow, and strike her in the head."

"That's very bad, friend Leverings. Does thee know why he did this? Was thy Durham trespassing on his ground?"

"No, she was only looking over his fence. He has a spite against me and mine, and does all he can to injure me. You know the Hardy farm goes two rod that stands in the corner of my lot, and adjoining his property?"

"Yes."

"Two large limbs, full of fruit, hung over on his side. You would hardly believe it, friend Martin, I was three years in and discovered that he had sawed off these two fine limbs that hung over on his side. They lay on the ground, and his pigs were eating the fruit."

"Why is Dick so spiteful to thee, friend Leverings? I have never heard many one. What has thee done to him?"

"Nothing of any consequence."

"The man will have done something. Try and remember."

"I know what first set him out. I kicked at an ugly dog that ran at me, and he had starved at those, I suppose, was all the while growling about here, and muttering to everything I meet. I'm sure I did not do anything unkindly, and gave him the most tremendous kick, that sent his howling through the sky. Unfortunately, as it has turned out, the dog's master happened to be passing along the road. I never saw a more vindictive face. On the next morning a splendid Newfoundland that I had raised from a puppy, and my shivering at the door, with his tail cut off! I don't know when I felt so badly. Poor fellow his pitcous look reminds me now. I had no proof against Dick, but have never doubted his sacrifice the flatter. In my grief and indignation I had the dog buried in the front of my house."

"That was hasty in that, friend Leverings," said the Quaker.

"Perhaps I was, though I have never repented the act. I met Dick a few days afterwards. His grim of satisfaction on his face I accepted as an acknowledgment of his mean and cruel revenge. Within a week from that time one of my cows had a horn knocked off!"

"What did thee do?"

"I went to Dick Hardy and gave him a piece of my mind."

"That is, thee scolded, but called hard names, and threatened."

"Yes—just so, friend Martin."

"Did any good come of it?"

"About as much good as if I had yelled to the moon, I reckon."

"How has he been since?"

"No change for the better. It grows, if anything, worse. Dick never gets weary of annoying me."

"Has thee ever tried the law with him, friend Leverings? The law should protect thee."

"Oh yes, I've tried the law. Once he has me up for assault and battery, and there is a solitude, which only she can bear to be natural and satisfying as that rest which succeeds a well spent life. Not in youth, but which gradually grows into the blessings of our lives; and there is another solitude so full of peace and repose, that it is like a deep sleep in the wilderness at the foot of the holiest of angels:

A BAD FOUNDATION.

Passing along the street the other day, I saw a crowd collected around an unfinished building. I stopped and soon learned that the wife of the house was killed. Killing, in two men and wounding several others. The questions passed from lip to lip, "How was it?" "Who did it fall?" "Who is to blame?" "The cause is plain enough," said a bystander, as he stooped, pointing to the base of the building, "it was bad foundation—too weak by half for such a wall."

I passed around to the fire as it was tall and stately, of beautiful red brick, with white marble cappings and ornaments—a model house, and noble house, and, but for the terrible gap, pleasant to look upon.

With a sad heart I went on my way. Two sorrowful scenes in their lost account, and wounded sufferers left to drag out weary days and nights, all because somebody had a bad foundation. What folly, nay, what guilt, thus to endanger human life! Ah yes, it is not only thoughtless, but a wicked crime to build on a bad foundation; and yet how many every day are guilty of it.

The school-boy who is quiet, studious, and quiet when the teacher's eye is upon him; who will get the answers of his problems by, "and by;" or from another boy's slate, instead of working out the problem himself, will break rules whenever he can do so without being punished, or who will spend the day in the fields, when he knows he has his parents thinks he is at school, is laying a bad foundation.

The girl who is careless and untidy as to her dress, who is in too much haste to be neat, who is careless, hasty and thoroughly, is laying a bad foundation.

Worse still, the boy or girl who is ill-tempered, who is hasty, rude and thoughtless, is laying a bad foundation.

The boy who turns over for another little hour in the morning, when he knows he thinks it will do just as well, who is ever ready to do anything, unpleasant, to be done, who is ever ready to put off the performance of his duties to-morrow never comes, is laying a bad foundation.

All those boys and girls is builders, and whatever the structure they are erecting—As there are thousands who make sad mistakes; idleness delay, want of regulation, disorder in family affairs, leading to quarrelling, drinking, gambling, falsehood, therefore are all laid in the foundation.

Building upon the sand. Later in life, what should be the strong and noble character of a man, beautiful to contemplate, is found to be a shaky, crazy, and unreliable structure, such as even his friends may look upon with pleasure.—Little Companion.

☞ "EXCHANGE MARRIAGE.—A loving couple in Stonyhurst, Pa., lived in a little house of life when they think "sixteen and twenty" married, and they appointed a recent Thursday evening for the celebration of their nuptials, but unfortunately the bridegroom was detained, and the bride failed to make his appearance with that important document, and after waiting a long time, the minister concluded that he could be departed. Another clergyman was sent for, but, owing to the lateness of the hour he was unable to find a minister, and, unwilling to comply, and the ceremony had to be postponed till the next day. In the meantime, the bridegroom arriving the license appeared, and in due time on the morrow the minister was on his way to the residence of the bride, but, on arriving on the hills of the classic Hinkston creek, the flood had placed an impassable barrier in his way—unable to be about the time, and, consequent of the bridal attendants swam the stream with the license, the bride and groom mounted on rocks, and, near the water's edge, the minister mounted a stump, and from the opposite side of the stream proceeded to sequence the marriage ceremony according to the statutes of Kentucky. Thus, the Rev. Jonathan Cherry, and Miss Sally and Hannah Sheets, both of Bourbon county, made one flesh, and bade go on their way rejoicing.

At one of the colored churches in Mobile the minister having finished his sermon, announced that a collection would be taken up for missionary purposes. The usual formalities were gone through with, and a ten dollar confederate bill. He looked at it for some time with exhibit disgust, and then took a warm look at his congregation over the top of his spectacles. Then clapping the unfortunate bill upon the pulpit cushion, emphatically he exclaimed—"Brederin, I put dis bill right dar on de bible and let the Lord take care of dat bill!"

KEEPING A DIARY.—Among other reasons for keeping a diary, a writer says:—"No doubt whom you look back, you will find many silly things in it: well, you do not think them silly at the time, or possibly you may be humbler, wiser, and more modest for the reading of that diary will convict you (if you are a sensible person now) that probably you yourself, a very little, or a great, while since, were the greatest fool you ever knew."

MR. Bolsy G. Stevens, living on Twin Hill, seventy-four years of age, is healthy and active, but has, during each year of the past ten, been confined to his house, of course "nantinuds, reading it through once in three months. She has already read it six times, and says it improves with each time. It through before the period named expired, for the reader the news kept an account.

—NEW HAMPSHIRE—Beach Adams' family, consisting of himself, wife, six children, and his own sister, four sons in the army, received in pay $3, 83, 90 cents. This paid a small farm and manage their affairs, as they, the family, do, without any assistance on others of them is in the church.

"Oh, ps, Mr. Smith was here this morning, and when ma told him that you would not be home till late, he said her lips were so horny, and that he thought he was a bee, and then he kissed her. They gave me a stick of candy not to tell any one, but I don't think that they'll mind you, you're so well acquainted with me."

A guilty conscience needs no accuser.

A Parisian Story.

A new arrival here, Prince Narishine, possessor of one of the great fortunes which have caused the Russian nobility to be regarded throughout Europe as the modern representatives of Alladin and his fortunate, hopeing to dine a few evenings since with a friend, Prince Dolgoroukoff, visited a hotel most elegant hotel, fitted up with all the appliances of fashionable luxury, was struck by the form of a lady who, alone, was at table occupied the center of the table. Having expressed his admiration of it as a work of art, the waiter informed him that it was seemed to hold it in slight esteem. "If you care so little about it, why not sell it to me?" said the Prince.

"The centre piece matches all the rest of the table," returned Count D., "and I can't sell it to you unless you buy the whole of it," responded the prince.

"Well, I will buy the whole of it," responded the prince.

"But if you want the silver you must take the china also," replied the count.

"Very good, I'll buy the china also," replied the prince.

"I cannot sell you the china unless you buy the tables and chairs," said the count.

"I'll buy all the furniture of the room!" cried the prince.

But the furniture could not be sold without the linens, harness and carriages, and the prince had to buy the whole of the cleared himself ready to buy, but on one condition.

"Name it," said the count.

"It is that I make the purchase the transfer shall be effected this very evening, as I have to leave Paris by the first train tomorrow morning, and I cannot wait for the formal, legal, tiresome, and tedious, and, and, and

THE WAR CLOUD IN EUROPE.

The name by the cable telegraph, looks very warlike. Bismarck has demanded of Napoleon an explanation of the warlike preparations that are going on in France, and if we may accept the language of the despatch, has peremptorily demanded that they shall be discontinued. Whatever may have been the exact terms of the message sent by Bismarck to the French Emperor, it is pretty certain that a crisis is approaching which may result in a gigantic war between the two leading military powers of Europe.—The sudden organization of Prussia, attained by the unprecedented triumphs in the late war, naturally alarm France, whose military supremacy on the Continent is threatened by the most formidable rival it has had since the days of Charles V, of Germany. Napoleon has been frequent because the changes of Germany brought on gain to France. For his full in securing the unity of Italy, Napoleon obtained the desirable provinces of Savoy and Nice. It is currently believed that Bismarck proposed, prior to the late war, to make Napoleon a party to the reconstruction of Germany, and in return for his acquiescence entered the French frontier to its old boundaries on the Rhine.—Napoleon declined the offer; Prussia got along without French assistance, and now feels able to defy France. Napoleon, doubtless, discovered his mistake when it was too late, and foresaw that the struggle must come. The measures for a reorganization of the French army, and the negotiations for the acquisition of Luxemburg, look like preparations for a struggle with Prussia, and the latter power evidently so understands them. The opinion of the Paris Exhibition was taken as a guarantee of the pacific intention of the Emperor. War now would ruin all the expectations of the glory and profit of this enterprise, and there is hardly a doubt that Napoleon has had neither thought nor expectation of war breaking out this year. But it looks as though events had moved too rapidly for his calculations. In Bismarck he has a man to deal with who knows the value of time and will not give his opponent an advantage if he can help it. Prussia may be stronger a year hence, when she has had time to complete the work of Germany unity. But she is now in a better state of preparation for war than France is, with its army but partially equipped and drilled with the new implements of war, and imperfectly organized. France has more to gain by delay than Prussia. Bismarck knows this, and is shrewdly pushing matters to a speedy issue. If Prussia must fight France, she can do it now with much better chance of success than in a year or six months hence. All eyes are now turned on Napoleon, and his position is a critical one; his prestige has been impaired at home by the failure of the Mexican enterprise, by the result of the German war, and by such minor defeats in diplomacy and domestic policy. The French people are also said to be much irritated against Bismarck, and a war with France would be popular with the country. To yield to any demands from Prussia under these circumstances might cost Napoleon his throne, while to take up the gauntlet thrown down by Prussia would be the road to the restoration of his popularity, arousing the military enthusiasm of the French people, and trusting to their traditionary valor, skill and good luck in the field to overcome the odds of the needle gun, and more perfect discipline the Prussian armies would have at the outset of the war. Bismarck is evidently bent on pursuing towards Austria, and we shall not be kept long in suspense,—the question of war or peace will be decided before the close of the coming month.

THE FRUITS OF INDUSTRY.

When we look at the evidences of progress in this country, which strikes the eye at every turn, we are more than surprised at the rapid change which has taken place within a few years; but to the older residents, it must be still more striking. In fact, those familiar with the improvements and stationary condition of the County some twelve years since, can hardly realize its present prosperity. The work of clearing and planting is going on in every direction, and every year is adding to our wealth and population.

At this season of the year, what can be more pleasing to the eye, than fields of newly plowed ground, early vegetation springing, the fruit blossoming in variegated colors, the lively green of promising grass crops, and the well laid out and ornamented gardens. All nature presents a freshness, vigor and thrift, well calculated to make us cheerful and hopeful. The transition from "husband" and barren wastes, to well cultivated fields, has been both sudden and thorough—for townships now produce more than the whole county did some years back.

It is an old maxim, that "one improvement will always produce another," and this is fully verified in the dwellings and farms springing up around us. The former presents a neatness of finish and convenient arrangement, that is in pleasing contrast with the old-fashioned, dilapidated edifices that once sparsely dotted the county. The latter are also an improvement on the old style of outbuildings—being more capacious, and blending utility with durability.

We cannot but congratulate our citizens upon their rapid advancement, and we hail these fruits of their industry as the best evidences of their prudence and good judgment in the management of the affairs of our people. They did fair to make Atlantic county as rich and as prosperous as she ought to be, in view of her many advantages and natural resources.

SUPPOSED HIGHER.—The New Jersey Era learns that a woman was found dead in Smith's alley near Field last out of romance with marks of violence upon her person, which plainly indicated that she had been murdered.

The New Jersey State Agricultural Society.—This valuable institution has recently formed itself into a joint stock association, and solicit subscriptions from citizens of the State everywhere, but particularly in Newark and Elizabeth, as their park is located between the two cities. The shares are twenty-five dollars each, payable in installments of five dollars on each share, every sixty days. We learn that their chief objects are "to build up a very extensive bureau, which shall in time rival in usefulness the Agricultural Bureau at Washington; one which, while its cost are for the advancement of the public good, will yet be a private enterprise; and therefore free from the baleful influences of partisan or political spirit. This bureau will comprise halls in which to hold their annual fairs, and where there shall be a perpetual exhibition of agricultural and mechanical implements and tools, specimens of vegetables, plants and fruits; a museum of natural history, a library of agricultural, geological, horticultural and other scientific works. The means of procuring the best information on the points of improving the breeds of horses, cattle, hogs, sheep, poultry, &c., and of imparting to our State the reputation of the highest excellency in its various stocks. In short, halls where the scientific men of our State, and the distinguished visitors from the State and foreign countries may meet on common ground, for an interchange of thought and the contribution of their knowledge. To open grounds, which shall be second to none in the art of landscape gardening. To build a model track of not less than one mile in circuit, which by its known excellence shall draw to our annual exhibitions the finest horses and the means of settling in our State the best blood of the country.

Persons desirous of purchasing stock can do so by applying to the superintending secretary at the office of the New Jersey Express Company, No 102 Market street.

AGRICULTURE IN NEW JERSEY.—A writer in the Farmer's Gazette says, "Our farmers are now in the full tide of their labors, and are pushing forward with the spring work with unusual vigor. The acreage of winter grain is larger than usual, and the prospect for a good crop is very promising. The acreage of spring grain will be much

ROBERTSON'S PULMONIC ELIXIR

FOR the relief and cure of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, Difficulty of Breathing, and all Diseases of the Pulmonary and Respiratory Organs, and for Hoarseness, the best remedy in use.

Read the following Testimonials:

Brooklyn, E. D., Nov. 1st, 1866.

Mr. Robertson—Dear Sir: I purchased your Elixir for my wife, who was attacked with a very severe Influenza, accompanied with a Cough, keeping her up every several nights together, without rest or sleep. Your Elixir, which you recommended to my wife, has completely relieved her. It has also completely relieved her of the Influenza. By the use of half a bottle of your Elixir, she was completely relieved.

Respectfully, yours, the friend

JOSEPH COLLIER

Being greatly troubled with a hoarse cold, which settled on my lungs, I found a relief in several remedies, which seemed to have little or no effect. I at length tried Robertson's Pulmonic Elixir, which soon effected a cure.
