BEHIND THE SCENES.

"Four o'clock and ten minutes past. What can delay her—she is really late!"

It was a roomy, comfortable-looking parlor, with a large fireplace, a comfortable sofa, and a few chairs. A woman, dressed in a simple, elegant gown, was sitting on the sofa, looking at her watch. She was waiting for a visitor.

"She doesn't come," she murmured, looking at her watch. "What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Ten minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Twenty minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Twenty-five minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Thirty minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Thirty-five minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Forty minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Forty-five minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Fifty minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Fifty-five minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Sixty minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Sixty-five minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Seventy minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Seventy-five minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Eighty minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Eighty-five minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Ninety minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "Ninety-five minutes past four. What a nuisance!"

She looked at her watch again. "One o'clock. What a nuisance!"
