part of the State is decidedly unfavorable to creating the commission, which, it is feared by many, would be interested with too great authority as the bill now stands.

A bill was passed in the Assembly Wednesday providing for the immediate distribution of the railroad main stem tax for the support of the public schools, which is now being held by the treasury office for litigation and amounts to more than two millions of dollars. The school boards throughout the State are holding back their appropriations until they ascertain what they are to get from the tax, and some action is taken from the general school divisions may be crippled and improvements in the various counties delayed.

The Atlantic County representatives introduced measures in both branches of the Legislature this week which will be of great interest to the several townships of the county. They provide that a Township Committee be authorized to require that all vehicles used for sol-

(MAY'S LANDING RECORD.)

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., SATURDAY, MARCH 27, 1937.

It is generally conceded that the mushroom hat, so called, is the most unbecoming and most ridiculous creation of feminine headgear that fickle fashion ever inflicted.

"Wall street looks upon the Payne bill as determining the law of the land, and the law of the land is to be expected in the pending revision of the tariff and discounts changes that will be made to increase the tariff and discounts. Wall street is not avaricious and is not afraid of serious injury to the trusts from tariff readjustment. Knowing the worst that is to be expected, financiers and business men can account the better treatment that they confidently expect from Congress. Therefore there will be no panicky conditions or serious slump in Wall street if the bill is passed. Wall street is being put through the legislative mill, and when the word goes out Congress and the financial market are taken by surprise, already prepared itself in part for the changes, will speedily adjust itself to new conditions. A great revival of trade next year is expected."—London Post-Telegram.

There are so many attractions at Atlantic City that every taste can be satisfied. Of course the ocean plays are the rendezvous of the general public, but the delights of the stroll on the Ocean Promenade supersede all other pleasures. There is about the hotels and business places along that wonderful promenade a never-ending source of delight and entertainment. In all the resorts along the Atlantic coast there is nothing to compare with its great highway of travel, and the daily crowds to be seen there morning and evening afford a magnificent study of human nature.

The Obliging Reformer.

By STELLA CADMUS.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

There was no use denying that Sydney Gerald was a dandy. He had wealth, good looks, youth, and was a society favorite. Now and then he went hunting or yachting, but most of the time he simply dawdled. That meant his club, the races and society. He was accounted a catch, but no one caught him. He didn't really try to dawdle, but pursued his lymphatic way simply because there seemed nothing else to do.

"See here, you good-for-nothing," said the widow of the late Hon. Charles Spofford one evening at a reception as she drew him down to a seat beside her. "I have a duty to perform."

"I wish I had," he replied.

"People are saying you have no energy, no ambition, no aim in life. You have too much money—too much time on your hands. You are throwing your years away."

"Tell me what to do," replied Sydney, yawning.

"Get married."

"Too much trouble—too many emotions."

"Take a trip around the world."

"Too much change of scenery."

"Ah, I have it," exclaimed Mrs. Spofford after a moment's pause. "You are rich. Why not turn philanthropist? Not in the way of hospitals or asylums, but go among the poor and give a few of your dollars to alleviate distress and misfortune. You don't know the real people as I do. There is no day that I am not feeding the hungry and giving out alms. Only this afternoon I gave a one-legged man half a dollar, and you ought to have heard his words of gratitude."

"Just so," replied Sydney Gerald, with a bit of a smile as he thought of the many one-legged men he had tossed quarters to.

"Try it for a few weeks—for three months. It may lead to your becoming a reformer. At any rate, it will rouse you up and give you something new to think of. It is positively sinful for you to be dawdling along this way."

"Yes, I think so."

"If you should turn out to be a reformer I shall take most of the credit to myself. Three months, Mr. Gerald—try it for three months, and at the end of that time I will arrange for a little gathering to hear your report. It cannot fail to be interesting. You will have a hundred different incidents to relate. Don't you feel a new and strange ambition already?"

"Yes, I think I do. Yes, I think I will turn reformer. I may not make a success of it, but I'll make a try."

The relief of the Hon. Charles spread the news. As Sydney Gerald did not entirely drop society while fitting himself for a reformer, he was lauded and quizzed on numerous occasions by numerous people.

Only a scanty few credited him with the necessary energy to pursue the object, and the most that was predicted of his efforts was the depletion of his purse without corresponding gain. There was a great deal said about the unthankfulness and ingratitude of the world in general, but it didn't seem to affect him much.

"You know, you must not look for too much gratitude," cautioned Mrs. Spofford.

"No, I shan't."

"You will feel that you have done your duty, and your conscience will reward you."

"Just so."

"Many and many a time I have given pennies and got never a word of thanks. In fact, I have got black looks as the wheels of my carriage happened to throw a little mud, but I drove on feeling that I had made the world a trifle better. That feeling must be your reward."

"Yes, I shall look for it."

When the three months had expired Sydney Gerald announced his readiness to report. A score of ladies gathered in the drawing room of the Hon. Charles' widow. There were no men among them. "Charity and reform did not touch that sex."

When he was ushered in it was remarked that he seemed to have acquired energy and gained ambition, and there was great curiosity as to what he would report.

"Ladies, I beg to say," began Sydney, "that in my ignorance of how to go to work I began my investigations in the house of a wealthy lady. It came about almost by accident. I found that she was in arrears to all her servants and that tradesmen were clamoring for their bills. I relieved the distress. I gave each servant two months' back pay and paid each tradesman something on account. I have a memorandum of her name."

Here Sydney Gerald paused. Mrs. Spofford turned pale, but her nerve was with her, and she managed to force a smile.

"By accident again," resumed Sydney. "I turned a corner one evening and bumped against a young woman in tears. I was a stranger, but when she understood that I had taken up the business of reformer she told me the cause of her distress. She was a seamstress."

"She had worked a week on a gown for a well-known lady and on carrying it to the house had been told that she must wait a couple of weeks for her pay. She was going home penniless, hungry and the rent unpaid. The lady in the case brought a diamond tiara next day that was mentioned in all the papers. She could have paid the bill a thousand times over, but she needed the diamonds first. I paid the seamstress."

There was an uneasy movement up and down the room, and for some reason all eyes were directed on Mrs. Somerville. She was conscious of the fact, but with a sang froid that did her credit she put up her lorgnette and stared at a picture on the wall.

"I happened in at a milliner's," said Sydney, with a smile. "Queer place for a man to be, but I happened. Can't say that I was looking for a hat, but in searching out subjects for reform you have to drop into various places. Milliner a nice little widow. All her capital in the business. Just received a letter from a wholesale house threatening suit on bills overdue. Her customers all rich, but they didn't pay cash down. Don't pay it three or six months. In fact, they didn't pay for a year or so and only when forced to. I have seen many of the hats that were bought there that way. Relieved the distress and passed on."

Every lady in the room except the Hon. Mrs. Spofford had on an expensive hat. Each lady started to look at the other, but gave it up and cast down her eyes with proper modesty. They might not all have known the milliner referred to, but they had thoughts. After a painful silence Mr. Gerald continued:

"Happened to meet the butler of a house where I frequently call. Just happened, you know. Down in the mouth, looked bilious. As would be reformer I spoke to him and got his story. Lady of the mansion hadn't paid his wages for five months and had borrowed his savings besides. He dared to speak to her about it, and she had sent him packing. Saw the same lady buying a $800 ruby ring the other day."

Every lady in the room helplessly glanced at the hands of every other lady. A poodle dog belonging to one of them seemed to be the only thing in the room at ease.

"Happened to call on a florist," said the obliging reformer when the silence had endured to the painful point; "just happened so. One of his statements of accounts sent out to a lady had been returned with a very sharp note. The account was two years old, and because he sought to collect it the debtor informed him that she should take her patronage elsewhere. It was only one charge on a discharged coachman, discharged for hitting that he wanted his wages. Helped him out with a five dollar bill. Happened to run across a governess in the same fix. That's all. Good evening, ladies."

For two minutes after the reformer disappeared no one spoke. Then one lady after another rose up to go and, turning to the honorable widow, worked up a smile and said:

"Isn't Sydney Gerald just too charming for anything? And how awful of people not to pay their bills!"

Balzac's Refuge.

Admirers of Balzac who visit Paris will be interested in a museum specially devoted to souvenirs of the writer. It consists of the quaint old house and garden in the Rue Raynouard, at 47, which he inhabited many years and where he wrote a number of his best works. Curiously enough, the house recalls one of the most difficult periods of his life, when it is said he was hunted and persecuted by debtors to an extent.

He selected it purposely as a sort of harbor of refuge from debt. It has no direct refuge from the Rue Raynouard, and one has first to pass through the hall of another house and go down two flights of stairs to a courtyard below. The house, which is a small building and which the French would only call a "pavillon," is entered from this courtyard and has a little garden at the back. At one side of the garden there is a steep wall down the side of the hill, giving the place the appearance of a little fortress.

The Thumb.

The disparagement of the usefulness and importance of the thumb implied in the expression, "His fingers are all thumbs," seems undeserved in view of the important part the thumb formerly played in the social customs of the people and the very important part it plays in our own lives.

Lord Erskine, in his "Institutes," states that among certain of the lower ranks in Scotland the final settlement of a bargain was always signified by the licking and joining of thumbs.

Selden, in "Titles of Honor," says that kissing the thumb was a mark of servility. The clergy, the rich and the great, were in receipt of this honor from their tradesmen.

From the remotest days of antiquity the practice of licking the thumb has been regarded as a solemn pledge or promise, existing, according to Tacitus and other authorities, among the Goths, the Iberians and the Moors, and it may also be traced through successive periods down to our own times.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

A Tipping Tip.

How to avoid tipping the waiter at a restaurant: When the bill comes, pay it exactly. A certain involuntary expression of astonishment will be visited upon the waiter's face, well trained though it may be. You should then say, saying to him, "I have made an excellent dinner; you manage the establishment much better than the preceding proprietor did." During his rapture at being mistaken for the owner of the restaurant you escape.—Arrogant.

By the Wing of a Swallow.

"The late Francis Thompson, the English poet," said a magazine editor, "had a great love of birds. He once told me a pretty story about a swallow."

"Catching one day in the early autumn a swallow that nested in his garden, he fastened to its wing a piece of oiled paper inscribed with the words: 'Swallow, little swallow, I wonder where you passed the winter?'"

"The next spring the swallow returned to his nest at the usual time. Attached to its feet was another piece of oiled paper with the inscription: 'Florence, at the house of Castelli Cordial greetings to the friend in the north.'"—Washington Star.

"Toothache, eh? I'd have the thing pulled out if it were mine."

"No would-I if it were yours!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.
