of Additional Apparatus
Asked For By Firemen—Better
Protection For Municipality.

Purchase of additional fire-fighting equipment for Reliance Hose Company in order to maintain a high standard of efficiency was decided upon Saturday evening last at a meeting of the Township Committee, when a delegation of firemen, consisting of Dr. H. C. James, President, E. C. Shuman, Chief, and Roy E. Beach, placed before the Committee a list of new apparatus needed by the Company in order to insure first-class fire protection in the municipality. The equipment will be paid for out of the $700 appropriation voted for this purpose.

One of the most important items in the list of new equipment to be purchased is two hundred feet of Standard Pangoon Hose, which will not only enable more lines to be concentrated on a burning building, but also enable many buildings to be reached that are a considerable distance from fire-plugs. Other equipment includes a life net, a 20 gallon chemical engine, 10 hand chemicals, shovels, lanterns and a hose cart.

With this additional equipment Reliance Hose Company will have the facilities to fight any fire that may occur in the municipality. The use of the chemicals in extinguishing fires that occur in the interior of buildings avoids damage to furniture and property by water and in many instances fires can be extinguished by their use before flames can be spread and water turned on. In case the chemicals fail to stay the progress of the flames the water can then be used, as is the custom of all first-class fire-fighting departments. The additional equipment will insure continued low insurance rates on property under its protection.

State Aid For Farmers' Fight Against Dangerous Plant Diseases.

A bill, pending for a State specialist on tree and other plant diseases, has been approved by Governor Wilson. It is an act to prevent the introduction and spread of dangerous plant diseases in this State, to authorize the inspection of nurseries and plantations, to provide for the control of health plants and a method for compelling the destruction of infected plants. The executive committee of the State Board of Agriculture is to make the appointment, the officer to be known as the State Plant Pathologist. The bill was prepared by State Entomologist John B. Smith, of New Brunswick, and State Forester Alfred Gaskill, at the joint request of the State Board of Agriculture, the Forestry Commissioner and Senator Duff.

Opera, a Great Success.

"The opera," "King Haden," given Saturday evening last in the Opera House by the company, proved of very successful results, netting $60 for the piano fund of the opera. Aside from the financial success of the opera, it was a bright, pleasing production, reflecting great credit upon Miss Bertha F. Cramer, under whose direction it was given, upon the participants and those who assisted in its preparation. Excellent music was furnished during the intermissions by a trio of violin, mandolin and piano, by Miss Margaret C. Shuman, Joseph Cramer and William Wright, also by the boys' chorus of the High School. Altogether it was one of the most enjoyable entertainments ever given here by home talent.

STRONG TAKEN TO PRISON.

Authorities Believe Letters He Received Were Hoax.

Convicted of murdering his wife last October at Neshanic and sentenced to a term of thirty years in State Prison, William H. Strong was taken to Trenton Monday morning last on the 8:22 express by Sheriff E. L. Johnson to begin his sentence. He protested his innocence to the time of his departure and said he hoped to get a new trial.

Two letters were received by Strong one Saturday morning and another Monday morning just before his departure for Trenton, purporting to come from a negro in Philadelphia who asserted he killed Mrs. Strong and said he would save the State from punishing him by taking his own life. The second letter contained some negro "word," while the writer said was cut from his own head. Little credence is given to the letters by the authorities, who believe they were the work of some practical joker as one arrived on April first. Strong appeared to be much affected by the letters and would be investigated by his attorneys. Robert Strong, his brother, of Pitman Grove, came down Monday to bid him good-bye and stated that every endeavor would be made to have the conviction set aside. So far as is known, no official notice of an appeal has been given by Strong's counsel.

PROTECTION TO WORKMEN

Senator Edge Secures Enactment of Comprehensive Employers'
Liability Law to Become Effective
July 4—Governor Signs Measure.

In the presence of the President of the State Federation of Labor, Governor Woodrow Wilson Tuesday last signed Senator Walter E. Edge's bill providing for a more comprehensive employers' liability law. By so doing he dispenses of a subject which has been a source of much annoyance in past years and has caused numerous bills to be drawn only to meet defeat. The new statute will become effective July 4 next.

The Edge law, which establishes compensation for injured workmen, was carried to the executive office by the Senator accompanied by Assemblymen Walsh and Ford, both of whom had similar bills before the session. Assemblyman Isaac B. Harnish, who worked hard to get it passed in the House, and W. B. Dickson, of the Commission which drafted the act, Senator Edge told of his pride in being sponsor for such legislation and the Governor responded that he was equally proud the bill had passed.

After the executive had signed the measure he gave the pen which he had used to Senator Edge, who in turn handed it to Mr. Ford, President of the State Federation of Labor.

Under the new liability law, any employee may recover for injuries or his personal representatives may recover for his death, damages from the employer by either one of two methods, the choice of which must be made before the injuries are received or the death occurs. The employee may have but one of these remedies and cannot exercise both.

As a part of the contract of employment, in every case an agreement is implied between the employer and employee by which the compensation schedule becomes operative, unless, prior to accident, either party gives notice to the contrary. Where no such notice is given by the employer or employee, the employee recovers compensation according to the schedule in every case of injury, except where the injury is due to his deliberate and intentional act or to his intoxication.

The compensation is fixed in great detail, and in case of dispute a simple procedure is prescribed, whereby the dispute is referred to the Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in the County where the accident happens or in the County where the employee lives. The court renders judgment and this is the end of litigation. Thereafter all proceedings can only be for the recovery of money established to be due by such judgment. This money comes in weekly payments, but where proper cause is presented the money may be commuted by the Judge to a lump sum.

In case either the employer or the employee desires, prior to accident, not to accept the compensation schedule, then recovery is to be had by suit in the courts, as at present, with the exception that the defenses to follow servant and assumption of risk are abolished and contributory negligence is modified to willful negligence and is in every case a question for the jury, so that the power of a Court to non-suit in such cases is taken away.

Mr. Van Rockagan

A Story of 1940

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Mr. Van Rockagan alighted from his carriage, went into his 150 story building and ascended in his private elevator to his summer office on the roof. There, in a room of three quarters, he sat in a chair of gold and jewels imparted a luxurious comfort, while the air was replete with tropical plants.

Mr. Van Rockagan's name would seem to denote a mingling of Dutch and German origin. It is a combination of several names. In the early part of the present century nearly all the colossal fortunes held by individuals were united by death, marriage and other causes in one man, who, when the union was consummated, took the name of Van Rockagan. Unfortunately for the blessings that were to be derived from placing all the wealth in the United States in one man's hands, the railroad interests had been combined by a similar process in another person. This person always wrote his name G. Harrill.

Mr. Van Rockagan put his finger on a million dollar diamond which formed the button of an electric bell, and a page whose triple rows of buttons were blood red rubies, appeared.

"Colonel Whistleton," said Mr. Van Rockagan.

The page made the eastern salutation recently introduced into the country by our wealthy classes for their sons and daughters, and Colonel Whistleton entered. He was in uniform.

"Colonel," said Mr. Van Rockagan, "I hear that young Harrill is to be married. Should he not have children a grave consequence would arise in the financial interests of the United States."

"Indeed," observed the colonel, "What we have been working for more than half a century is, to unite all the property of the country under one hand."

"What does your commercial highness propose?"

"To get hold of the person of young Harrill."

"The courts, Mr. Van Rockagan?"

"Never mind the courts. That is a department of my operations in which you have no concern. My chief attorney will see that the courts do not interfere. He will have an ample fund for that purpose. What I wish you to do is to seize the person of young Harrill—in other words, kidnap him and take him to my place in the great Dismal swamp."

"Is he forewarned?"

"No. He has but a beggarly old fashioned guard of twenty detectives in plain clothes. These he keeps constantly about him."

Colonel Whistleton smiled. "Fortunately the world is ignorant of our legion of a thousand men that I can call upon at any time for my commercial highness' protection."

"You will find Mr. Harrill on his estate in the mountains of east Tennessee. Go and capture him. Take him to the swamp and report to me."

Colonel Whistleton bowed low and backed out of Mr. Van Rockagan's presence.

Young Harrill was playing at golf and just about to make a stroke with his ivory golf stick studded with jewels when he suddenly caught sight of a man emerging from a wood; then another, then another, till men were coming from every direction. His bodyguard, who were scattered about, rallied on him and fought nobly, but without avail. They were surrounded by ten times their number and were put to flight. Mr. Harrill was seized, carried to the road, where an auto train stood waiting, and carried away. Within twelve hours he was a prisoner in Mr. Van Rockagan's stronghold in the great Dismal swamp.

The next morning Colonel Whistleton appeared at his employer's office and, having been admitted, reported that his commercial highness' orders had been carried out.

"Very nice," said Mr. Van Rockagan. "Now starve him."

"Starve him?" exclaimed the colonel. "Yes, starve him. Did you not hear?"

"But, your commercial highness, that would be murder."

"Colonel," said Mr. Van Rockagan, "are you not aware that our ancestors were merely robbers and murderers? They not only robbed the Indians of their lands, but killed so many of them that they are now practically extinct. But what a splendid result! I am following our forefathers' example. Think of the blessings I can bestow upon our people when I shall have become possessed of all the wealth in it. What is one life compared with this desirable outcome?"

"But do you not fear punishment?"

"By whom?"

"The law."

"I have become the law."

"The people will demand."

"Nonsense! Do you suppose I would do what I have done before I had embodied the political machinery of the United States in myself?"

A month passed. One day Colonel Whistleton was called for by his employer.

"I thought," said Mr. Van Rockagan, "that some time ago I gave you an order?"

"You did, your commercial highness, and I have endeavored to carry it out, but now I am unable to do so."

and stop it with the mighty dollar. The colonel shook his head. "Come, come, this matter must be attended to or it may fail. I do not fear the police, the courts, the government in any form, but I do fear this young man's money. Should he find a chance to use it?"

"He would secure your arrest?"

"Colonel, you are a fool. Who dares arrest the owner of three quarters of the wealth of the United States? He might lay an opposition, in what form I know not. He could oppose me and that would make a muddle. I don't want a muddle; it would take up my time."

Mr. Van Rockagan cut the end off a $1,000 cigar and added:

"Go back to the swamp, make another attempt to discover the leak and report."

The colonel withdrew. His superior smoked and thought.

"I wonder," he said musingly, "if these infernal scientists with their new inventions are going to block my game."

Two more weeks passed without a report from Colonel Whistleton, then he appeared one morning in his employer's office and said:

"Watching the prisoner through a keyhole, your commercial highness, I saw him take a tablet from his vest pocket and put it in his mouth."

"A tablet?"

"Yes, a tablet. At any rate it was so small that he held it between his thumb and finger and swallowed it whole."

"Ah! Now we shall get at the secret. Has he lost flesh?"

"Not a pound."

"And he is living on tablets?"

"I am sure he has nothing else."

"How many a day?"

"One. I have had him under surveillance for several weeks, and he takes but one tablet each twenty-four hours."

"Take them away from him. But hold! The secret would die with him. It may be useful to me. Should I have it in my death might not be necessary to me. It costs, say, a dollar a day to feed a man. If a million men could be fed 300 days on a cent a day, there is a saving of $200,000,000. If I can do that I can find a way to moderate him. Secure one of the tablets and bring it to me at once."

Another week passed. The colonel made another report. The prisoner carried no supply of tablets on his person. Moreover, he was not seen to swallow any more tablets.

"Bungler!" cried Mr. Van Rockagan. "You have made him suspicious. He has found a means of supply that you are unaware of and takes his daily meal when you are not observing him. Does he still retain his flesh?"

"He does. If he receives tablets from without it must be during the night, and he must eat them then."

"Go back and watch all night, without and within."

The next report was that during the night a huge bird lit on a chimney leading down to the prisoner's apartments, remained there a moment and flew away.

"Bird he banded?" exclaimed Mr. Van Rockagan contemptuously. "It was one of these newfangled new planes with a man or perhaps a small boy in it. Catch or shoot one of them before he can drop a tablet down the chimney and you'll get what you're after."

A bird was captured just before it reached the chimney. Its wing was broken by a shot, and it was caught in a net. It proved to be a ten-year-old boy. On his person was one of the mysterious tablets.

When Colonel Whistleton brought the tablet to his chief the latter ordered Mr. Harrill to be supplied with food till further orders. Then he sent out at once for Dr. Beckendorf, the scientist in charge of his department of chemistry. When the gentleman arrived Mr. Van Rockagan said to him:

"Analyze that," and he handed the doctor the tablet.

Dr. Beckendorf withdrew and the next morning reappeared with his report.

"That tablet, your commercial highness," he said, "was suggested thirty years ago by a French scientist named Berthelot. It is composed of carbon derived from carboric acid, hydrogen taken from water, with ozone and oxygen borrowed from the atmosphere. Dr. Berthelot declared that such a tablet would supply a man with all the nourishment he needed. But I have never heard of one being manufactured. Doubtless a process of doing so has been recently hit upon."

"Can you manufacture it?"

"I think I can."

"Do so. But never mind. You may fail."

A few days later Mr. Rockagan's financial chief appeared before Mr. Harrill and said:

"Mr. Rockagan possesses your secret, and it will enable him to feed a man on a cent a day or less. He will at once begin a competing road with every one you own, to cost a small percentage of what yours cost, or he will buy your roads at the market price."

One morning it was announced that all Mr. Harrill's railroad securities had been transferred to Mr. Rockagan. "Now," said that gentleman, "we may assume the title of president, emperor or whatever we like."

THE BRIGHT SIDE.

If you have faith preach it. If you have doubts bury them. If you have joy share it. If you have sorrow bear it. Find the bright side of things and help others to get sight of it also. This is the only and surest way to be cheerful and happy.

Shakespeare Censored.

The dramatic censorship in England today, much as it is abused, is very mild compared to what has been known in former periods when many of Shakespeare's plays have been censored. Colley Cibber in his autobiography tells us of one instance of the reveals, who was responsible for the licensing of plays in his days, expunging the whole first act of Cibber's adaptation of "Richard III." on the ground that the distresses of Henry VI. would remind weak people of King James, then living in France. On another occasion "King Lear" was inhibited during the illness of George III. George Colman when reader of plays banned the use of such words as "angel" and "heaven."—London Mail.

A Spanish Dictionary.

The science of dictionary making has made some progress in the past hundred years; if we are to judge by an entry in "The Spanish Journal of Lady Holland." She writes under date February, 1803: "A biographical dictionary of 'Los Hijos de Madrid' is no bad specimen of the roundabout way in which Spaniards do things. The names are arranged in alphabetical order, but, alas, according to the Christian names of the worthies; therefore one might look for an hour for the most celebrated hero in Spain and not find it at all unless one had an extract from the parish record of all the saints under whose protection the parents chose to place him."

An American Invasion.

We have often said that no European army could march far into the interior of our country because it would be annihilated without the necessity of defeating it in a pitched battle. If a German army takes Paris, the conquest is completed. If an army takes London, England would ask for peace as she accepted the Norman after Hastings, but when an English army took Washington it did not take time to cheer before starting back to its ships. If there be disadvantage in having many capitals we are not without compensation to us the taking of Washington would mean no more than the taking of Baldwin or Sopotopy.—Florida Times Union.

The Cannibal.

"And what," asked the cannibal chieftain in his kindest tones—"what was your business before you were captured by my men?"

"I was a newspaper man," answered the captive.

"An editor?"

"No, merely a subeditor."

"Cheer up, young man! Shortly after my chief has finished his perusal of the cookbook you will be editor in chief."

Laughing heartily at his bonnet, the cannibal chief wanted to know if the captive had a funny bone.—Judge.

Chairs in the Dark Ages.

The chairs of the dark ages, modeled partly on those of the Romans, were in keeping with the comfortable dwellings in which the people of the north of Europe then passed their lives. The fawn kings of England are represented as seated on thrones in the form of a box, the ends slightly raised, the bottom advanced to form a sort of foot stool. There is always a cushion to add a degree of comfort and some times a back in the form of a cross-piece or remotely resembling the backs of modern chairs.

Events That Pass Us By.

We can be but partially acquainted even with the events which actually influence our course through life and our final destiny. There are innumerable other events, if such they may be called, which come close upon us, yet pass away without actual results or even betraying their near approach by the reflection of any light or shadow across our minds. Could we know all the vicissitudes of our fortune life would be too full of hope and fear, exultation or disappointment to afford us a single hour of true serenity.

His Majesty's Lost Teeth.

One of the oddest adventures of a king's speech occurred in 1825, when we read in the new biography of Sir Woodbine Parish, King George had lost his false teeth and the lord chancellor, Eldon, who was strongly opposed to the policy the speech contained with regard to the recognition of the South American republics, was obliged to deliver it "with a very bad grace and no enthusiasm."
