

1 YEAR IN STATE PRISON FOR ASSAULT ON WIFE

PLEADED GUILTY AT SPECIAL COURT SESSION.

Trial Of Clement and Irwin For Embezzlement Postponed Owing To Absence of Jurors—Other Prisoners Receive Sentence.

William Holland, colored, was sentenced to a term of one year in State Prison at a special session of Criminal Court held here Wednesday afternoon. Lawyer Judge J. M. Gibbs for a strenuous assault on his wife. The latter appeared in Court and exhibited the scars inflicted by a butcher knife on her throat and said she was in a position to testify that her husband had committed the crime. Holland was released on his own recognizance.

The trial of Giles Clement and Percy Irwin, formerly manager and treasurer of the Steeplechase Pier, which was to have occurred Wednesday, was postponed owing to the absence of one of the jurors who had been summoned. The two defendants are charged with having unlawfully converted money received for the sale of tickets. Both sides with witnesses were prepared to go on with the case but Prosecutor George Berg stated that it would be best to try it at a later date.

Charles Pierce, of Minotola, entered a plea of guilty to a charge of larceny preferred by Laura Mick, of that place. His statements, however, were not satisfactory to the Court, who decided not to impose sentence until he had heard the testimony of witnesses. Pierce was remanded to jail.

David Suttle pleaded guilty to the theft of fifty cents worth of coal. He had been confined in the jail awaiting trial since February and was released on his own recognizance.

Entering a plea of guilty to the charge of stealing a bicycle from Egg Harbor City, Frank Smith, colored, was sentenced to a term of three months in the County Jail.

Harry Singsler was charged with stealing a valuable coat from Cecil Brown, sales agent. To impress the court with the truth of his story and received a sentence of six months in the County Jail.

George Longacre, white, a man with a wife and two children, was charged with the theft of a bicycle from the home of a neighbor. He was released on his own recognizance.

James F. McGinnis, an aged man, pleaded

FOREST FIRE NEAR MIZPAH.

Men Fighting Flames.

Fire broke out along the May's Landing-Downtown boulevard near Mizpah yesterday and Deputy Fire Warden Samuel Taylor with a large force of men from Mizpah set out for the scene of the flames in order to stay their progress before they had spread to the surrounding woodland.

The origin of the fire is not known but probably started from burning brush on some neighboring farm. The woods were dry and the flames had soon gotten under headway. Forces of men from Mizpah are assisting in fighting the flames.

Picking Pimple Almost Cost Arm of Young Carpenter.

Cleveland Smith, a young carpenter of Somers Point, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Smith, of this place, is recovering from the effects of blood-poisoning caused by picking a small pimple on his wrist. The injury was slight at the time but on the next morning the arm was swollen to twice its normal size and a physician who was consulted pronounced it a case of blood-poisoning. Fekring tetanus, it ing was reduced and although very painful the injury is now healing satisfactorily. Physicians who saw the wound declared it a miraculous escape from serious consequences.

Home of Carmentown Cripple Destroyed by Fire.

Misfortune overtook Frank Malnoski, a cripple of Carmentown last Saturday, when his house with all its contents was razed to the ground by flames. Malnoski and his wife were working in the field when they discovered smoke arising from their house and contents managed to prevent the barn and other buildings from being destroyed by the fire. A subscription has been taken to defray the unfortunate man.

Orphan's Court Session Wednesday Next.

The regular monthly session of the Atlantic County Orphan's Court will be held here Wednesday next before Law Judge Enoch A. Higbee, when final accounts will be passed in several estates and when the executors petition to the settlement of estates adjudicated as may come before the court.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Shaner and family desire publicly to express their sincere thanks and appreciation for the many acts of kindness shown them during the long illness and following the death of their beloved daughter, Beatrice.

Atlantic City hotel proprietors are to a greater extent than any other agency responsible through their farsighted enterprise and progressiveness for the marvelous growth of the resort in the good graces of the general public. Nowhere in the world can a resort boast of such a number of splendid hostilities, unexcelled anywhere for architectural magnificence and facility of accommodation. The organization of hotel owners has been instrumental in upbuilding the municipality and has headed every movement for the advancement of the resort. Through their efforts civic beauty has been enhanced, municipal conveniences have been secured and entertainment provided for every visitor. In the latter lies the secret of the phenomenal success of the resort, for every man, woman and child can find diversion after the manner which suits each one best. The popularity of the resort, through the continued efforts of the hotel men, who are assuredly the most progressive bonifaces in the world, will continue to increase by leaps and bounds with all classes of people.

It would be impossible to revise the tariff in such a manner as to meet the views of every person on the subject, and all partial criticism of the work of Congress along this line should be taken at a discount. The Republican members of the national legislature are endeavoring to effect a wise and impartial revision that will protect the interests of home trade and guard the welfare of the American laborer. The course of the Payne tariff measure has been marked so far by many a battle among the legislators and it will bear many another scar before it finally becomes a law. That there will be a material change in many of the present tariff rates is certain, where new conditions require a schedule calculated to promote the internal welfare of the people as a whole. Hundreds conflicting interests are contending for recognition. Congress is called upon to exercise a farsighted, accurate, non-partisan judgment in establishing a revised tariff code, a momentous undertaking fraught with imminent interest to the country at large.

Steps have been taken by the Board of Chosen Freeholders of this County towards the improvement of the public highway leading from Absecon to Somers' Point known as the old Shore Road. This road is in line with the projected route of the Ocean Boulevard which is to connect the entire seacoast of New Jersey by one splendid highway. For some time it has been in a deplorable condition, at times almost impassable. This is one of the most used highways in the County and its improvement, at least as far as the Meadow Boulevard, is demanded by rapidly increasing automobile travel from Philadelphia and New York. Absecon City is growing rapidly and is entitled to favorable consideration in the general improvement of public roads. A first class highway to Atlantic City would materially enhance the interests of the municipality and add to the general good roads system of Atlantic County.

Applicants for trial at the special sessions of Criminal Court held each month are more numerous than formerly, a fact highly complimentary to the office of the district attorney and the police authorities, for it indicates that the prisoners entertain small hopes of escaping when they plead guilty. The number of guilty persons who escape punishment for evildoing in Atlantic County is small indeed, a fact that is not taken into account by those who fall into the vigilant clutches of County and City authorities. A trial at the special sessions is more economical than where the defendant goes through the formality of indictment and trial by jury, and almost invariably the ends of justice are reached with equal precision.

The 1909 Easter season in Atlantic City was the greatest in the history of that grand and prosperous seashore resort. Hundreds of thousands of people from all walks of life gathered there to pass the Lenten season, and the final rush of Easter Sunday was the culmination of a Spring patronage unprecedented in resort annals. Atlantic City is destined to still greater development and popularity with the public in the future than it has ever enjoyed in the past, for it supplies a general demand for a national seashore resort.

The work of the May term of the County Courts promises to be light in all branches. The Civil Court docket has been nearly cleared with the exception of a few cases carried over from the last term and the number of cases listed in Criminal Court is less than usual. The exact number of cases will not be known with certainty until indictments are returned by the Grand Jury, but from all indications the labors of that body will not be of an arduous nature.

Good news comes from Washington that the government revenue from customs, internal revenues and other treasury receipts is rapidly increasing, indicating improved domestic and foreign trade. The national deficit has been reduced by $20,000 so far and if business increases within the next two months as it has since the first of March the deficit for the year will be materially lessened.

Grade crossings throughout New Jersey have been better protected during the past year than formerly, due largely to the efforts of the State Board of Railroad Commissioners, who have investigated conditions and recommended improvements to the railroad authorities. With few exceptions these recommendations have been complied with immediately. Grade crossings are dangerous however well protected and the public is bound to exercise reasonable precaution in approaching the tracks. Following the accident at the Estelville Avenue crossing, when an electric express running at high speed collided with an automobile and killed two persons, the commissioners made an investigation and as a result of their recommendations the railroad authorities ordered all trains to pass the crossing at a rate of not more than ten miles an hour. The Commission cannot force the abolition of dangerous crossings directly and the willingness of the railroads to accede to their recommendations has not necessitated any drastic measures. At Hammonton, where an express crashed into a wagon last year owing to the absence of protection at the Twelfth Street crossing, the railroad placed a flagman on guard and installed an alarm bell, and also placed a bell at a dangerous Buena Vista crossing. The Commission has accomplished a good work.

Business conditions in the several County municipalities showed a decided improvement Easter week, owing in part to the holiday trade. Atlantic City experienced one of the most prosperous seasons in its history, the estimated amount expended by visitors, as shown by actual cash deposits in the banks of the resort, aggregating one million dollars. Trade was unusually brisk in the smaller cities and towns throughout the County. While there is always a slight slump in business immediately following the holiday rush, it was not more than ordinarily noticeable this week. Merchants, encouraged by the signs of the times, are preparing for a busy Spring season.

The long anticipated trial of John Andrews for forgery of municipal warrants occurred Wednesday and the self-confessed forger has begun his term behind bars. Andrews violated one of the highest trusts that could be bestowed upon him by his fellowmen and the lack of any extenuating circumstances made the duty of the Court clear. It is to be hoped that the lesson of Andrews' mistake in life will be seriously taken to heart by every young man who holds or is about to hold a position of trust. The old maxim that "honesty is the best policy" holds good under any and all circumstances.

Three years in State Prison is the penalty imposed for turning in false fire alarms by a bill recently introduced in the State Legislature. Atlantic City has had a full quota of these false alarms during the past year and in the opinion of many municipal officials the penalty is none too severe. Those who think it a capital joke to ring the alarm and see the Fire Department dash out will not be so apt to exercise their humorous proclivities in that direction when a severe penalty is attached to the offence.

The division of the State into two game districts has not been attended with success and a repealer of the statute has been introduced in the Legislature. New Jersey is too small for such a division, say many sportsmen, and it tends to make more confusion relative to the game laws. The repealer will very likely pass both branches of the Legislature and become a law.

STATE PRESS COMMENT.

"This week will probably see the finish of this session of the legislature. It has been a rather interesting one, because of the little business of importance that has been transacted up to this time, and of the strenuous efforts made by the democratic members to manufacture political capital to be used in the campaign in the Fall of 1910.

"They have not accomplished much in this direction so far, and there is little likelihood of their doing much more than they have already done.

"The legislature played the 'school fund grab' to the limit, but their misrepresentation of the facts involved in the efforts of Republican members of the legislature to find a reasonable way to replenish the treasury can, we believe, be explained to the people so that they will understand the facts.

"It will be shown, before the voters of New Jersey are called upon to cast their ballots for candidates for legislative honors next Fall, that the democratic cry that the 'relief bill' will result in lower salaries for school teachers, and a lowering of the standard of education in the State, is baseless, pure and simple.

"It looks now as if the law-makers are going to get away from Trenton with a clean and creditable record."—Trenton State Gazette.

"Weather conditions favored the Easter parade at Atlantic City as they had not in the two preceding years, and in size and in color features the moving human exhibit on the boardwalk surpassed all former displays. Under a cloudless sky and with a bracing breeze the human peacocks strutted, finding keen enjoyment in the sartorial function.

"It was a typical American crowd, well-dressed, well-behaved and making the most of his holiday. Not by the widest stretch of the imagination could there be found a 'saturnalia of vice' in Atlantic City; and yet it must be admitted that the 'bishops' law' was openly and boldly violated. Apparently there is no fear on the part of the Atlantic City liquor sellers that Governor Ford will further attempt to enforce that law. Until the Legislature shall give him greater power, the present system of licensing saloons and public houses is done away with, the peculiar Sunday condition will continue. The situation is really beyond Executive control."—Camden Post-Telegram.

"The trolley freight bill has been vetoed by the Governor for several reasons that can readily be obviated by the Senate in which it had its origin. The features objected to are that it confers an unlimited franchise; that it does not give municipalities any authority over the freight that may be carried, and that it might abrogate contracts between cities and trolley companies by which the former have paid a certain percentage of gross receipts for the franchise used by the latter. Those objections Senator Gauger, the author of the trolley freight bill, will endeavor to overcome, and if successful the Governor has promised to sign the measure. Other bills vetoed by the Governor were of local importance mainly, except, perhaps, that of a Jersey City member which proposed penalties for non-payment of water rates. The Hudson city is having a time of it over its water supply, and there ought to be some way to compel delinquent water users to pay up, but the vetoed bill did not seem to meet the case."—Camden Daily Courier.

"The decision of the anthracite miners not to strike gives a feeling of relief to the whole country which vividly remembers the great strike of seven years ago and of the great loss which resulted to the public. Without commenting upon the merits of the case, concerning which there is naturally a sharp difference of opinion, it occurs to nearly everyone who does not belong to the contending parties that some way should be found to amicably and honorably settle trade disputes as they arise. War, whether between nations, or between capital and labor, may sometimes be justified, but not until every other plan of settlement is tried."—Tape May County Gazette.

"New Jersey's financial troubles do not seem so great when we glance across the Delaware and learn that Pennsylvania is called upon to raise a budget of $65,000,000 to meet current expenses for the next two years, and doesn't know where it is coming from."—Mt. Holly Mirror.

Cupid's Pipes

By MARION DEXTER.
Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Jan Vanderstreet was without doubt and by unanimous consent, especially his own, the leading citizen of the little painted village of Dykheid.

Therefore when he imparted to his fellow citizens the information that he had bought a large tract of land in America, where fortunes were to be made in an incredible hurry, half a hundred very substantial and phlegmatic Hollanders marshaled their families after grave deliberation and embarked with him, after selling their queer little painted houses and tulip gardens and cows with true Dutch thrift.

Jan Vanderstreet took with him his wonderful collection of pipes, famed throughout all Gelderland and even beyond that beautiful district. He also took with him what he valued almost as much as his pipes—his very burxom and still blooming wife, his blooming daughter, Ankie, and his blooming orphaned niece, Johanna de Koop.

The only member of the party of Holland adventurers who was not truly substantial, according to sound Dutch standards, was Dirk Van Pelt. Myneer Vanderstreet had frowned on his admission as a member of the solemn exodus. But Dirk had cunningly used such un-Hollandlike haste in putting his entire patrimony of $1,000 into the speculation that he had an interest in it before the more deliberate myneer knew it.

Jan Vanderstreet did not like this at all. The trouble was that Dirk was altogether too fond of Ankie. If the broad shouldered, sturdy, handsome youth had only exhibited enough sense to be fond of some one not in the Vanderstreet family the myneer might have felt quite glad to have him in the party, for Dirk was not at all disagreeable to anybody, with his kind smile and his readiness to help every one who needed it.

Myneer Vanderstreet determined to keep close watch during the voyage. But what could one do on shipboard? Could a worthy Dutchman of five and sixty be expected to go on guard over his daughter when all the men folks were smoking their pipes on deck, telling tales of the past and speculating about the future? Truly not.

The chaperonage of Ankie was therefore left to her mother. But even on shipboard, that industrious Dutch housewife could not be idle, and when one has a huge stocking and a ball of yarn, also a set of knitting needles, in hand it is not always convenient to follow a will-o'-the-wisp of a girl.

Besides, Johanna was always with her cousin, and loveliness was not a third person is present is not so easy to carry on. At least so argued Mistress Vanderstreet, forgetting that there is a language of the eye which expresses as clearly as speech what is in one's heart and that a pressure of the hand may convey an assurance of love just as plainly as if one said aloud, "I love you."

Although Dirk had little opportunity of telling Ankie of his love by word of mouth, that he was her devoted slave and wished for no greater happiness than to call her his wife, Ankie knew what was in his heart, because she returned his love.

By the end of the voyage Dirk knew that her heart was in his keeping, and he determined to wrest from the soil of the prairie a living that would entitle him to old Vanderstreet's respect.

Busy days followed the arrival of the Hollanders in the little low settlement. Ground was broken, teams purchased, grain sowed and houses erected.

The Vanderstreet residence was the most pretentious in the place, but the cottage built by Dirk Van Pelt was as pretty a little Dutch home as any romantic girl would wish.

Vines were planted and soon grew about the porch, a bed of tulips flaunted gayly colored blossoms in the front yard, and a kitchen garden flourished in the rear.

Things soon prospered with Dirk, and after six months of anxious waiting he ventured to call on Jan Vanderstreet to ask for the hand of his daughter. The myneer, with unusual promptness, immediately gave Dirk to understand that he wished to hear no more of the matter and very politely intimated that the doors of the Vanderstreet residence would be closed thereafter to him.

Disappointed, but not discouraged, Dirk went slowly home, telling to himself with genuine Holland determination that he would never give up the girl he loved.

His resolution was strengthened by the sight of Ankie standing at the window holding out a letter, which she dropped and he picked up.

The letter told him that she would be his, with or without her father's blessing, and bade him have patience. Dirk continued to work his little place industriously, hoping to hear from Ankie. But three weeks elapsed before he had an opportunity of talking with her. He left her presence, feeling much encouraged, and fell asleep that night more hopeful. He was awakened from sweet dreams of his love by the cry of fire.

Throwing on his clothes, he rushed from the house. The town was already aroused, and down the streets the people came running in all stages of dress, the clatter of their wooden shoes making as much noise as the modern fire engine.

"It is Jan Vanderstreet's!" some one screamed. "The place is doomed!"

On hearing these words Dirk ran faster than before and outstripped the crowd. When he reached the house he found the family coming out, laden with plunder, and heard Mistress Vanderstreet exclaim: "No more must we go back! It is not safe, and it is better to lose one's goods than one's life!"

"But my pipes! My precious pipes!" cried old Jan, all his phlegmatic restfulness gone. "I must get them!"

His wife seized him firmly by the arm.

"That you shall not do. Everything is at stake. I will not let you risk your life for a set of worthless pipes."

"Worthless pipes!" thundered Jan. "How dare you speak so? They are a part of my life—I have been collecting them all my life long, until now more than a hundred hang in my rack. And must I lose them all because of your hard headedness? Let me go, I say; let me go!"

He struggled wildly in her grasp, but it was in vain. Mistress Vanderstreet was a very strong and a nobly determined woman and held him in so firm a grip he could do naught but writhe and groan.

Dirk Van Pelt had a great emotion and reached a great determination with an almost American swiftness. He knew that the rafters of the blazing house would fall in soon—might tumble in crimson ruin at any moment. But not in vain did he have in his veins the blood of the wonderful race that cut the dikes and drowned their beloved land rather than yield it to the invaders.

He went to a tank of water and wet his coat. Throwing it over his head, he plunged into the burning house, not heeding the shrill cry of distress which issued from the lips of the trembling Ankie.

Five minutes of dreadful suspense followed, during which the rafters fell in and sent the sparks flying upward in a mad shower. Surely no one could live in such a place. Ankie, moaning piteously, sank to the ground, heedless of the crowd of spectators, and burst out into wild weeping.

Suddenly a shout of joy arrested her attention, and, sitting up, she saw through a mist of tears the form of Dirk issuing from the burning house. He staggered like a drunken man under the weight of a huge sack which held the precious pipes, not one of which was missing.

Straight to the man who had refused his daughter's hand stumbled Dirk Van Pelt. Then as old Jan took the burden from him the young man felt senseless at his feet.

When he opened his eyes, Jan Vanderstreet was standing by him, tears streaming down his cheeks. He took Dirk's hand, saying brokenly: "A house one can soon acquire, but such a treasure of pipes—ah, that takes a very lifetime to acquire. Such a deed as yours, Dirk, is worthy of any reward. What can I do to repay you?"

Raising himself on his elbow, Dirk summoned Ankie, who was hovering near. Then, with a determined glance, he signified to her father what reward he wished.

"So," said Jan slowly, "you still want Ankie? I have already told you she was not for you, but—take her, Dirk Van Pelt. She is yours. Ah, what a collection of pipes! What coloring! What noble bowls and what grand stems!"

"Ankie is worth all the pipes that ever were made or ever will be made," protested the happy lover, holding her hand tightly in his own and gazing adoringly into her tender blue eyes.

"Perhaps so, perhaps so," muttered Jan absently, "but such pipes as mine!" He turned and summoned a man to help him carry the sack of matchless pipes to a place of safety and left the lovers still looking happily into each other's eyes.

Arbitrated.

Conversation among travelers is frequently absurdly trivial. After several days together, as on shipboard, every one is idle and talks about the most unimportant matters with the deepest interest. R. H. Milligan in a book entitled "The Jungle Folk of Africa" recounts with what complacency the conclusion was reached that the thirteen colonies should never have rebelled and that the blame was all on the side of England.

"I am," moreover, disclosed the fact that he always wore safety pins instead of garters and decanted upon his preference with such enthusiasm that he made at least one convert.

One night we put in practice the principle of arbitration, of which we were all adherents. An argument had arisen among us as to which was the more simple of the two currency systems, dollars and cents or pounds, shillings and pence. At last, the captain arriving, we decided to refer the matter to him and to surrender our judgment to his arbitration.

The captain, an Englishman of the very stolid sort, after a period of reflection replied very slowly and with all the gravity of a judge:

"Pounds, shillings and pence is the simpler system, for I don't you know that when you are told the price of a thing in shillings and pence you always have to convert it into pounds, shillings and pence."

There was a little objection to this theory, but in general it was perfectly satisfactory so long as the voyage lasted.

Street Beggars of Bombay.

If the clothes of an ordinary beggar in Bombay were searched cooked food sufficient to satisfy at least five persons would be found stowed away in these beggars are regular vendors of food. They eat as much as they can and sell the rest. A Bombay street beggar is a well to do individual and sends home weekly a postal order of 10 or 15 rupees. One of the fraternity was overheard saying to a brother professional that he had done badly that day, having "earned" only 2 rupees and 4 annas.
