MAY'S LANDING, N.J.

Sites for Bungalows
For Lease or Sale

Founded at the head of tide water on the banks of the Great Egg Harbor River, May's Landing has enjoyed from the first the reputation of being the most beautiful, most healthful place of residence in this section of New Jersey. Its magnificent oak trees have become famous, and beautiful Lake Lenape is scarcely less well-known. Indications to manufacturers are exceptionally good. For the truck farmer and poultry raiser it is an ideal location, and the mecca of those seeking summer homes at a reasonable cost.

Twenty minutes from Atlantic City, the Greatest Seashore Resort in the World. Only one hour from Philadelphia.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR TEACHERS
AT U. OF P. SUMMER SCHOOL

Term Begins July 1st—Dormitories and Swimming Pool Open to Women.

In line with the general policy recently announced by the President of the University of Pennsylvania to serve the people of the State, it is proposed that the Summer School be added as a center of features which make it more attractive and more than ever a magnet for students, research and scholars in parts of the country. Features leading to the school are degree and others especially planned to improve the educational work of the public schools are now being provided in proportion to the number of hours of work. The Pennsylvania College of Mothers and the Women's Club of the Temperance Unit are assisting the planning.

The new building will be located on the grounds of the University, and entrance will be made through the main gates. The building will be open to all students, research and scholars in parts of the country. Splendid boulevards for automobiles lead to May's Landing from every point, including the direct road from Philadelphia by way of Downtown and the Egg Harbor City boulevard, leading from the White Horse Pike. The Great Egg Harbor River boasts of an active Yacht Club open for membership. This picturesque waterway affords good boating, bathing and fishing, and is a popular highway with yachtsmen to Atlantic City, Ocean City and other seashore resorts.

Municipal conveniences include cold, sparkling water, 99 percent pure from an artesian well, supplied through a new public water works system, first-class fire protection with consequent low insurance rates, low rates of taxation, electric lighting, prosperous churches, good public schools, etc. If you never visited May's Landing, it is time to do so. If you are looking for a summer place of residence, this is the ideal place for you. "The Town of Natural Opportunities" is Your Opportunity.

A
Coincidence

By RUTH GRAHAM

Edwin Young was a man of very deep feeling. An engineer by profession, he was engaged on the work of making a preliminary survey on a proposed railroad he was accustomed to stop overnight or for meals at farm houses. During this time he would have stopped at half dozen houses in each of which he had seen from one to a dozen persons.

One day some time after the survey had been completed he received a telegram addressed to him which read:

"Miss Martin, your friend Mary Warfield, has died. Please come at once."

Young was the man to be impressed by a circumstance which might seem trivial though they might feel a difference could easily arise as a matter of the moment, whatever it was.

He had no desire to find the writer of the note for he was a man of culture who showed little interest in trifles or no education. But he thought about this girl who was dying for him and wondered if she used the word "Please" when writing to him.

At times Young was tempted to hunt her up but his better moments he saw plainly that such a course would lead to certain consequences.

Young, who had left the home of his parents to live in a boarding house, was near an intersection of two streets, one leading and several others leading to and from there. It is said that the possession of tea, coffee, sugar, etc., were due to the fact that he took at least a glass of beer in the world.

Young had been led to believe that one of the few of them showed him sufficient favor to warrant his making his residence there. The one he fancied most, Miss Margaret Martin, seemed rather ill.

Perhaps it was because of this slightness that Miss Martin was the partner of the fact that he liked her the best. She was in her something of the time of life which was in her favor, and her looks were better than those of the rest of the young girls of her age. Her eyes were bright and vivid and her hair was dark and lustrous.

Young, after dinner in the evening, would be in great need with the young ladies, and very soon they, discovering which way the wind blew, would one go off to their rooms, leaving him and Miss Martin together. That was the beginning of it. The end of it was an engagement between them.

But before the engagement Young told the girl about the letter he had received, signed "Mary Warfield," and confessed that he had made a marked impression on her. Then he asked her if she thought he was by any chance less than is usual in such cases bound to this poor girl, who had unaccountably confessed her love for him. Miss Martin could see that he had made no effort to hide his feelings.

Mary Warfield and Miss Martin said that he had acted wisely. The only doubt he told her that he had in proposing to his fiancee was a fear that some future time he might receive an appeal from Mary Warfield.

Young, upon his emotional nature, thus creating a barrier between him and the girl he loved, later to be his wife.

Ye sun," said Willie, "your doctor came to dinner last Sunday, and the way he talked turkey showed that he is a taxidermist."

"Now Johnnie, define the word taxidermist," said Mrs. Rodd.

"A taxidermist is a fellow who runs a taxidermy," said Johnnie.

"No, dear," said Mrs. Rodd. "A taxidermist is a man who stuffs birds. Have you never seen one doing his work?"
