TAKE GARE OF GARDEN ITH TEST PARTIES

NEGLECT MEANS WASTED EFFORTS-TIMELY FARM SUGGESTIONS.

> In travelling about this State anyone's attention will be atiracted by the very conspicuous home gardens, However, while most of these were started in fine condition, it is very appurent that thousands of these gardens are failing in many particulars. The soil is not kept loosened up between the rows and although the seed was planted too thickly the amateur gardener refuses or neglects to thin out the plants so that they can develop. There is no excuse for this neglect. If, it is lack of knowledge the grower has the privilege of writing to the State Agricultural College at New Brunswick, N. J., and ask for their circu-lar on the Home Vagenble Garden. It conlains a complete list giving the distance apart the plants should stand for their best develop-ment. This droular would also be helpful to those growers who are beginning to have spaces in their garden which may be planted to those crops which still have time to mature for Pall and Winter use. Every inch Espace must be utilized to its greatest advanwe are to continue to face the international food proposition as it really exists. The aspuragus season is nearing its end. In fact, many growers have already stopped cutting their real young beds so that they may grow up and develop a strong root system for he development of next year's crop. Many fields have not produced as heavily this year as they should have. This may be due to the fact that last Pall & very severe drought and perhaps weeds helped to prevent the roots from storing up strength from which to produce a heavy yield this Spring.

Celery plants are growing nicely for heavy Fall crop which is usually set in the fields during July. On a very small scale it is advisable to transplant the celery seedlings when they are about two inches high. Let them stand about three inches apart each way until they are set in their permanent places in the field. In this way an immense root system will be developed so that the plants will grow ndidly when set in the field regardless o the weather. Where convenient to do so spraying with Bordeaux mixture is recommended at intervals of every ten days from the time the seedlings are up until the crop is grown so that leaf blight may be prevented from getting started. Cubbage warms seem to be quite destructive to early cabbage this Summer. In such cases, to early carriage this cummer. In such cases, powdered argents of lead dusted upon the harbor our 800 voices belowed the tuneful and dew-wet plants will completely destroy any appropriate march across the water, and the appropriate march across the water, and the appliance and hilarity of the 6200 Canadians may be present without our realising it. There is absolutely no danger of potsoning those who eat the cabbage, provided the polson is applied before the head begins to develop. This same poisonous dust will destroy potato bugs, ouisto worms and the cucumber beetles. Almost any vegetable may be planted at this time; therefore, it is not too late to start a garden. However, some crops should be avoided, such as peas, onlons and lettuce. Ruta Baga turnips may be planted during thinly in rows two and a half feet spart. After the seedlings are up they are thinned out to stand six to eight inches spart in the row. If the ground where they are to grow is atill occupied with the previous crop the rutabagas may be started in a seed bed and transplanted lateron. Long Island Purple Top rutabaga is perhaps the standard variety. The regular small turnips need not be planted until the middle of July; however, the rutabaga requires a longer growing season for its best development.

A'fter strawbe heir crop they are quite exhausted. Therefore, they should not be transplanted at least for several weeks. A new bed may be established by setting out the newly developed plants as fast as they are produced.

WHOLE NUMBER 2080 RED CROSS WORKERS

BUSY HERE SECURING MEMBERS FOR BRANCH MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

HOUSE EXPECT AT LEAST 150 TO JOIN

NEXT IN COURT

CHANCE FOR ALL TO HELP RELIEVE THE HORRORS OF WAR

DO YOUR BIT FOR HUMANITY!

ONE DOLLAR ALL THAT IT COSTS TO ENROLL IN SOCIETY

Opportunity is at hand for the people of May's Landing to belp in the great work the Red Pross is doing, in the way of relieving distress abroad and preparing for the aid of our own soldiers, by joining the branch now being organized here. The names of those who wisi o join are now being taken by membra committee in charge and on Monday evening next a public meeting will be held at the Court to permanently organize the work Members of the joint committee appointed to organize a branch of the Red Cross here and others interested in the work met Thursday evening last at the home of Miss Anna Corson and prepared for the final detais of organization. The meeting Monday evening will be for organization only and in the ne another meeting will be held at which prominent Red Cross officials will explain the nature and scope of Red Cruss activities. Arrangements are being made by the committee to take part in the July Fourth parade and this matter ing Monday evening, which all men and women interested in Red Cross work are earnestly urged to attend. The cost of joining the branch here is only one dollar and it is hoped that at least 150 residents will enroll. Some idea of the urgent need for Red Gross work can be gathered from the following experpts from a recent address by Mr. Henry P. Davison, appointed head of the Red Cross Council by the President. He says: "The most stupendous and appealing call in the history of the world to aid suffering humanity confronts our Red Cross. Millions of men who have been fighting for liberty lie dead or wounded; millions of women and children are homeless and helpides; hundreds of towns and villages have been destroyed; disease and distress are rampant.

"But now we ourselves are in this gigantic war. We now see that the struggle against autocracy and tyranny in which our allies have been, is in reality, no less our struggle than theirs. We ourselves must now abare the suffering which they have endured; we too, must bear the burdens and we must do our part in a real way. "Our great trouble to-diy is that our people do not realize the situation throughout the countries now at war. They must be made to realize them, and the obligation upon us is to see that it is done as soon as possible. The Red Cross is doing a noble work. And it is an obligation upon every man, woman "Hundreds of American doctors and nurses are already at the front. A force of 12,000 American engineers will soon be rebuilding the railroads of France. Upwards of 25,000 American men are now on the battlefields of Europe, fighting as volunteers in the Allied armies; soon 25,000 American regulars will be added to their number. All our National Guard is to be mobilized, our regular Army is to be recruited to full strength, and 500,000 other men shortly to be called to the colors. Within a few months we should and will have in service an army of 1,000,000 and a navy of 150,000 men. "These men must have of our best. To prepare against their needs in advance will be a stupendous task which the Red Cross must undertake, Doctors, nurses, ambulances, must be made ready. Vast quantities of hospital stores, linen, bandages and supplies of every kind must be prepared and at once. If we walt, it may be too late. We ask our own sons and brothers to fight for our liberty 3,000 miles from home in a country already sore and afflicted; surely we cannot do less than prepare to take care of them in their day of suffering. "Gallant Canada from 8,000,000 population raised an army of 450,000 men; Eighty thousand are dead or injured, and Canada has raised in value $16,000,000 for the Red Cross to relieve her sick and wounded, Her Red Cross, thus vitalized by the sacrifice of those at home, has been able to save thousands from death or misery. "If each individual American now contributes his 'bit', there can be no failure. America will, we feel sure, in this again demonstrate her ability to handle a big task in a big way. That we may be able to perform this great task, we shall appeal to the co-operaion of the whole American people, Test Gas Pumps Daily.

Frank Wanser, State Superintendent of Weights and Measures has issued an order that automatic measuring pumps used in the sale of gasoline to automobilists must be tested daily. The test required is that each day each of the pumps shall be tried out by filling one and five gallon standard liquid measures from them. This duty will be imposed upon the gasoline dealers using pumps. This order is the result of complaints from many motorists that they have received short measure.

A Curious Mental Condition

It Was Experienced by a Tourist.

By ALAN HINSDALE

I was standing on sand and could near the plash of waves, but could see nothing about me, for I was enveloped in mist. A rocking sensation made me doubt whether I was ashore or on the water. Another singular feature was a faint singing of birds-so faint, indeed, that I doubted whether I heard pirds or a ringing in my ears. There were occasional voices about me, having a mellow sound, as if spoken on a quiet day after a fall of snow or on a balmy morning when the air is full of moisture.

While I was wondering where I was and how I happened to be there a girl came out of the mist and stood before me. She seemed as much surprised to see me as I was to see her. Her face was that of a saint-fair complexion, hair and eyes. There was but one blemish-a small red birthmark, shaped like a rose leaf, on her neck. It was rather an imperfection than a blemish.

"Where are we?" I asked.

"I don't know," she replied.

"I hear the sound of waves." "Then we must be on the seashore." "And birds sluging."

That would indicate that the beach is lined by woods." Wherever we are, we were evidently sent for each other." "It would seem so." She lowered her eyes. "You were certainly sent to be with me. What would become of me alone in this dense mist without the power to find my way out of it? With you I shall be happy even here. You are "You do not say beautiful." "But you are beautiful."

"No; I can't be that."
"Why?"

on the birthmark.

"Do you know," I said after a brief pause, "that I like you so well as you are that I would not have even that miles on either hand the beach curved in a semicircle. Back of us the shore her eyes, blushed and turned away. As The waters of the bay were of different | neck. It bore a birthmark shaped like colors. Near us, where it was shallow, a rose leaf. it was a pale green, beyond a deep blue and beyond that silver. On this silver an island rested, rising from its base to a height on which the sun shone golden. We stood looking out at the view. I was entranced, and, turning my eyes upon my companion, I saw that she was equally wrapt. "I feel," I said, "that I must go out on the bosom of that sea."

ed to a stake."

Lowering my eyes to the verge, 1

The next scene of which I was cognizant or at least remember now was pulling along under great cliffs that formed the island.

"with a waterway for an entrance."

Turning the beat, I pulled for the cave. The rocky roof over the waterway just grazed our heads as we made the entrance. Inside we found ourselves within a cavern, its roof hung with stalactites. The light coming from the entrance tinged the vaulted roof with ever changing colors. Now it was a blood red, now a pate blue, now sea green, now white.

"It is from the changing of the waters outside," I said. "A changing-sky changes the bay, and the changing bay changes the hues in here."

"It is all change," she said sadly. "I wish something in the world were

I dropped my oars and, seating myself beside her, took her in my arms. "I wish this would never change." I sald, "for I have found my love." I kissed her. She put her arms about me, and it seemed to me that I had thrown off something that had troubled me, some great evil that had overhung me, and I had passed to a convalescence of perfect happiness.

"Alas," while supremely happy in this companiouship, I felt my love slipping through my arms and saw her floating over the surface of the water toward the mouth of the cavern. At that moment both the water and its rocky dome were a pale blue. They tinged her garments with the same hue. She looked back at me with an expression of indescribable metancholy. I called to her not to leave me, but she floated on, passed out through the mouth of the cavern and was gone.

I seized the oars to follow and, dashing under the low arch that separated: me from the outside, in another moment was under the greater vault of thé heavens.

All was serene as when we entered the cavern, but my love had vanished. Then came a sensation of being tossed to and fro, up and down, as though I were on a stormy sea. It was merely a consciousness of feeling. There was no communication with the outside world. There were voices in the air. What they said I did not know. There were also sounds of invisible people passing and the occasional opening and closing of a door.

Next 1 was lying on a lounge looking out of an open window. The air was clear as crystal. Before me rose a range of snow capped mountains. Over them was a white cloud.\(^1\) But was it a cloud? No; it was a peak far above its fellows, with a strip of cloud beneath it that gave it the appearance of a peak. How high it was! It seemed to mingle with the beavens' blue. I arose and went to the window its mouth just as it does its brother to get a better view of its summit.

When Tienned out and looked up at it it seemed higher, higher, all the while higher. My brain began to whirl. I returned to my loudge. I was weak and languid. While I was recovering from my giddiness a door opened and my lost love came into the room. At first she looked auxious, then smiled.

For a moment I was in doubt if it were really she. It did not appear that she was changed, but that I looked at her through different eyes from before. Her figure did not face me, but she was looking at me sidewise. I was troubled. I longed for her, she was with me, but I was not sure she was the same person. While I gazed in perplexity she turned, and I saw the birthmark on her neck. Then she came to me, seemingly wading through water, and took my hand. I drew her down beside me and said reproach-

"Why did you leave me?" "I couldn't help it. It was fate. Everything changes in this world." It did not occur to me that this was vague answer. At any rate, I was satisfied with it.

"Are you going away again?" I asked. "No, not now; some day."

"When will that be?" "A long, long while from now." "And will you love me until this sep-ration comes?" "I will love you always, here and where I go."

"I will go with you. You shall not go without me."

Then hand in hand we were climbing the mountain I had seen from the window. We seemed to be ascending as if buoved by wings. Eager to reach that cloudlike summit I had seen, we pressed on and on, but whenever I looked up to see if we neared it we were as far below as before. Turning to look back, the houses beneath appeared like ant bills. Then I felt the snow slowly moving beneath me. "It is an avalanche!" I exclaimed.

We were turned toward the valley and hand in hand slid down the moun-Though we moved with acceltain. erated pace, we kept our feet. We were like two gulls soaring, then, turning their wings aslant, sailing down an aerial incline. Suddenly the snow before us began to pile up against the base of a cliff. We lost our balance, and, head downward. I felt tons of snow piling on top of me.

"No bones broken," I heard a voice "Because of this." She put a finger , say close beside me. "If there's no internal injury he will be all right.",

I opened my eyes. I was lying on hard snow, while people stood about me, all looking very anxious. One of them, a girl, stood gazing down upon Suddenly the mist was gone. It did | me with a pair of mild eyes in which not melt away; it vanished. We were there was a world of sympathy. There standing upon a beautiful bay. For must have been something in my glance to affect her, for she lowered rose till it mingled with mountains, she did so she exposed one side of her assistance. What I have recorded is the beginning of a love story; but, though I rately. have no objection to telling a dream, I shrink from giving the thoughts and feelings of myself and the lady or my. love. I was less interested in discovering whether I had displaced any of my internal parts than getting on the track of the girl with a birthmark. I missed her at Sheldig, but saw her the next evening at the kursaal (casino) at Interlaken, sipping a lemonade. I dogged her footsteps for days before I succeeded in corralling her-that is, before I could find her lighted, so to speak, and I could get a mutual acquaintance to introduce; me. I finally cornered her on the Rigi, near Lucerne, and, as Jack would have it, my friend Jim Thompson was there too, and was acquainted with her. I expected under the influence of my dream that I should have as easy a time getting her us I had during that long drawn out infinitesimally short period. Instead, I had a real woman to deal with and not a creation of my own fancy. There was no dream for her. I was to her an ordinary personage with whom neither dreams nor romance had anything to do. I was obliged to lay siege to her heart and advance by regular approaches. I made very slow progress.' Nevertheless by persistence I finally conquered, and it was not till then that I told her this story.

Temporary inconvenience.

"I thought you were going to improve conditions," said the impatient man "I don't see what you've done; except to get a lot of people kicking."

"A social condition," replied the reformer, "Is like a street. In order to improve it you always have to muss it up for a little while."-Washington
