"At the battle of Chintilly I received a pistol bullet in the shoulder. It lies there among the mustles, and the surgeon advised me to let it remain for awhile It did not bother me long. and I was back with my command. In fact, sub, that bullet did not give me much inconvenience until after the wah. Then I felt that the surgeons must dig it out. I went to one in our own town. Ills name was Richards. and he was not only a good surgeon. but a thorough gentleman. He found the bullet and extracted it without any difficulty.

"I have been told. said the surgeon, 'that you killed seventeen of the enemy with your own hands at that battle. I don't blame you for feeling rather proud of that record.' "But it was only eleven, sub, and not seventeen." 'I have it ou good authority, colonel, that the number was seventeen."

"This led to high words, and I demanded satisfaction, to which the surgeon replied:

"'Willingly, colonel, willingly, I shall esteem it a high honor to cross blades with you.

"Well, he was a cool hand, suah enough. It looked as if he had intended to pick a quarrel with me. I sent a friend to him, and a duel was quickly arranged. He had the choice of the weapons, and he chose rapiers. That suited me all right. The bullet had been taken from my left shoulder, and nothing ailed my right.

"We had to go about two miles to find a spot where the affair could be brought off. It was within 300 feet of a farmhouse, and the grove which hid us from the highway was an open one. The farmer was in a distant field at work, and his wife seemed to have gone away for the day. In the gardens surrounding the house were half a dozen lives of bees, and just over the fence from them was a pasture in which five or six mules were grazing. As we were on the other side of the garden no one knew what took place until after things had happened. The farce, therefore, took us by surprise.

"Now, sub, here is what happened on the other side of the house as a negro afterward described it to us: One of the mules leaned against the fence to rub his itching hide. The fence was old and weak, and a section of it was pushed down. The mule that did it led the way into the garden, and the others followed him. They did not find much to eat there, and they began inspecting the beehives. One of them got a sting on the nose, and he wheeled and kicked the hive over. Of coise there was a row on at once. A thousand bees, mo' or less, came fiving out, and they made it very unhappy for the mules.

"There was no fence on our side of the house, and the nucles came galloping in our direction. There were been ahead of them bees elinging to them and more bees in chase. Befo' we could understand what had happened the mules and bees were among us. Principals and seconds were treated alike Each had a score or more of the insects in personal attention upon him. There was nothing to do but "To our left and forty rods away was a field of growing cotton. The stalks were high and offered us a chance to brush the insects away. The four of us and the surgeon in attendance all started for this field. I think. sub, we destroyed about half an acre of cotton and the mules about twice as much I remember that it cost us $20 to settle with the farmer and that he had no mo' use of any of the mules for a month to come.

"When we finally climbed the fence and got back to the spot on which we had been standing when the rlot commenced, my antagonist and myself were so blind that we could scarcely see to pick up our rapiers Our seconds were still worse off, 1 did not look for the duel to be resumed, but the doctor was hot for it.

"Colonet Bunker," he said, 'you impugned my hough. You denied, sub, in the face of my assertion that you killed seventeen men at the battle of Chantilly, and this affair must go on to its legitimate end."

"'But I only killed eleven, sub.' I replied. 'I counted them as they fell and put the number down in my notebook befoi I left the spot.'

"Then, colonel, you have that note book still? "'I have, suh."

"'And you can show it to me as proof that you were right and I was wrong?'

"'Most certainly, doctor."

"Then I withdraw what seemed to be an imputation on your bonah, and if you will stop at my office on the way home we will pick the stingers out of each other as well as we can and shake hands and be good friends.'

"And thus, sub, concluded our affair, though we were both badly punished by the bees. A year later I was his second in an affair of honsh with another gentleman, and he run that gentleman through the body befo' the fight was a minute old. He handled his rapier as I had seldom seen it hanflad, and, perhaps, the bees and the mules came just in time to save my life."
