TWO THOUSAND GUNNERS INVADE THE GAME-FIELDS

BANG OF SHOT-GUNS MAKKS OPENING OF SEASON.

Many Good Bags Secured by Woodcock Reported Scarce.

Estimates based on licenses issued by the County, Township and Municipal Clerks place the number of hunters who went abroad in Atlantic County gamefields Monday last, the opening day of the season for quail, pheasant and rabbits, at two thousand. With such an army of gunners afield, Br'er Rabbit and Bob White had a busy time keeping out of reports. sight and many found their way into the capacious game bags of the sportsmen.

Early in the morning, while yet a fog hung over the fields, scores of hunters could be seen going out of town in every direction with hounds or bird dogs. Soon after came the frequent reports of their guns and at nightfall they returned with the quarry. Many bags of eight, ten and twelve rabbits were made, but comparatively few, quail were shot. This is accounted for by the fact that the majority of hunters went out after rubbits, for the birds quate and erroneous views of Bible study." are fairly plentiful in the surrounding fields, Pheasants are scarce, few being bagged throughout the County. This game seems to men say will soon be exterminated in South Jersey unless steps are taken for its preservation. Some urge restocking the fields and others say a long closed season would do the trick. Certain it is, the birds are seldom encountered in the woods and swamps of the neighboring gamefields.

NOTES OF THE GAME-FIELDS.

Sportsman George Kraemer was among the lucky gunners Monday in this vicinity, bagging thirteen rabbits. This was one of the largest kills made by local hunters. Ducks are coming into Taylor's and Walker's Meadows occasionally but few have been shot. The birds are wary and hard to get within range. A few wood-ducks are seen, also mallards and black ducks.

WANT DEER LAW CHANGED.

Millville Sportsmen Take Definite Steps to Have Statute Revised.

At a meeting of deer hunters in Millville re cently, held for the purpose of getting an exexpression as to what changes should be made in the present law, it was agreed that the statute should be changed so as to make the open season come on the same day as the first day of the season for killing quail and rabbits, and should continue on the same day of each week thereafter for four successive weeks.

This would make the first day of the seaso for hunting deer, quall and rabbits come all the same day and would also make the next three successive days, of one in each week, come during the rabbit hunting season. The other change is the right to use hounds during the four hunting days for deer. The present restriction is regarded by some hunters as dangerous, many sportsmen being afraid to go in the woods to hunt.

Assemblyman-elect McAllister will take the matter under consideration and frame a law which will, so far as it is possible, meet the wishes of the deer hunters, and urge its passage before the Legislature next Winter

Third Day of Season Unfavorable to

Deer Hunters. A heavy downpour of rain Wednesday morning did not deter many deer hunters from going forth to their stands in the surrounding woods, but most gunners preferred to remain under cover, although a large number came here from long distances to enjoy the sport. The rain fell in torrents early in the morning and in frequent showers during the day. For those who braved the inclement weather the hunting was good, but it was anything but pleasant to stand for hours in the cold, driving rain waiting, often in vain, for the quarry to come.

Season for Meadow Larks Advocated. Hunters in many parts of the State are advocating an open season for meadow larks, which are plentiful in all parts of New Jersey. These birds, it is said, multiply rapidly and a short season would not endanger their propagation. They are usually more difficult to shoot than quail, especially where they are gunned after to any extent, and make very good reating when properly cooked, say those who stand back of the movement. Undoubtedly there are many of these birds killed by hunters in spite of the law, for they abound in the fields and make a tempting shot as they spring from the ground. "We would make an open season for meadow larks," says the Elmer Times, "through the month of October and possibly until November 15. They multiply rapidly and gunners would be unable to materially reduce their numbers."

MAY'S LANDING, NOVEMBER 20, 1909.

Bells have been provided on the electric cars to warn the public of their approach at grade crossings. Not as good as safety-gates, but better than whistles.

B'rer Rabbit is surely on the go these days, dodging sportsmen and hounds. The number of cottontails this season is sufficient to afford fair shooting, but not large enough for any wanton slaughter of the little animals if many are to be preserved for breeding next year.

No one seriously considers for a moment the suggestion that the State adopt a compulsory voting law. Such a statute would be a violation of man's inherent rights. It is the right of every American citizen to vote, and to yote for whom he wishes; it is also his duty to register his will by ballot, but if he wishes to waive the right and neglect his duty that is | lantic Ave. and Melbourne Park, $1. his privilege.

lowing tributes of praise were bestowed upon Commodore Louis Kuehnle at a banquet recently given in Atlantic City in honor of the intrepid Republican leader. The banquet was not in any sense of the word a political affair. As stated on the menu, it was a testimonial of appreciation for a citizen who has been a progressive standard-bearer for a greater At- | $1. lantic City, and who has probably done more for the municipal development of the resort than any one man in it. Commodore Kuehnle is a stalwart Republican, and he has done his party credit in Atlantic County; but the ban-ponl, 54x1725 ft. It was a

While not agreeing with the proposition that "no man loves the law," we must admit that many of our statutes are objectionable to certain classes of people, who will break them whenever they can so do without danger of detection. It is impossible to enact a law satisfactory to everybody, so the Legislature must adopt the expedient of finding the happy medium of opinion. In no detail is this more true than regards the game law: no two sportsmen think quite alike and the ideas of the sportsman and farmer frequently conflict Thus we have general laws clashing oftentimes with local conditions. On the policy that the best way to get, rid of an objectionable law is to strictly enforce it, we advise every gunner to comply with the statute while it is on the books and to use his influence to have the bad features expunged at the next session of the Legislature.

The old Jewish law commanding that one day in seven should be set apart as a day of rest is just as wise and beneficent in its influence to day as in those early times. People nowadays are too apt to go to extremes on the of a lot conveyed to S. S. Hudson to one Corquestion of observing the Sabbath day. Some would have every recreation, every pleasure, denied to human beings on Bunday while others would have a free license for everyone to do as they pleased. The old law was primarily intended for the good of the rave, for man needs a day of rest occasionally; and those who argue the question should never lose sight of the fact that, irrespective of religious views, one day in seven for rest of mind and body is essential to good health and happiness. There may be places and occasions when some work and play can be tolerated on Sunday, but most people will do well to observe the day as it was intended to be observed.

What is it that calls a man at this season of the year to shoulder a gun and go forth into the fields and woods? Is it the quest of game, the Tove of carnage or the instinct to kill? Ascribe it to this or to many other plausible reasons if you will; but the real, underlying cause is the "Call of Nature," that impulse which stirs the breast of every vigorous, able-bodied man, lives he amid city scenes or rural surroundings. Tis well to obey the call; to ramble through woods and over fields, along brooks her excellence. We might cite the lines of Bryant's "Thanatopsis," or the hundred and one other noble writings that have stirred the hearts of men in substantiation of this theory. However, suffice it to say that every man should obey the "call" not only now, but at all times, and commune with nature at every opportunity. The gun, one of the more direct appeals, is needless. The "return to Nature"

One result of the resident hunters' license law is very evident: there is a marked decrease in the number of young lads and irresponsible persons that formerly wandered along every hedge and meadow in open season and out willow tree standing about 544 ft. Northwest gunning for anything they could find. This is from centre of Shore Road, $1. a result not aimed at by those who framed the law, for it contains no restriction against granting licenses to minors; but the majority of boys cannot pay $1.15 for a license and are lot 9 tract 6 on map of estate of Daniel L. Coltherefore barred from carrying a gun, unless lins, deceased, $100. they do so at the risk of arrest. Interpreting the law strictly, boys are liable to be fined for hunting sparrows and other birds with small rifies. Many persons contend that no boy under sixteen years of age should be allowed to hunt. Whether this is drawing the line too close we do not presume to say; but it is certainly one satisfactory result of the new law that irresponsible youth are in a measure restricted from going out with a gun with the one idea of shooting something.

Prefect Of Police

A Story of a Stolen Necklace In Valparaiso

By GEORGE CATHERWOOD

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.

It was on board the steamer Atlantic, sailing from New York to South America, that we first became acquainted with Jim O'Rorke, a young fellow of twenty-five, who had just enough blarney and brogue in his talk to be true to his name. However, he was an expert in his line and at the time was on his way to Brazil to buy diamonds for a New York firm.

"And the gentleman?" O'Rorke pur-

The waiter looked surprised at the question. "The prefect of police," he said in an awed whisper. Our conversation must have reached the ears of the couple in question, for at that instant the uniformed prefect appeared around the edge of the screen, and, bowing in sarcasm to O'Rorke, he asked haughtily, "Can I be of service to the senor?" The tone was insulting, and for a moment we stood speechless. O'Rorke, however, was equal to the occasion, and, imitating the bow of the prefect, he returned with equal flavor, "Not that I know of."

The officer glared at us for an in stant, then turned on his beel and disappeared behind the screen. We stared at each other nonplused. Finally Jim burst out laughing, and v our way to the porch.

Soon the stars shone in clusters i the clear sky, such as only tropical climates permit, and gay throngs filled the porches and promenaded on the walks near the hotel. From somewhere came the silver notes of a mandolin and the sound of distant singing. We sat on the veranda smoking until it was late. Then Jim remembered a stiletto he had bought as a souvenir and went up to his room to get it.

A few minutes later a disturbance came from within. A woman screamed, and a man's voice called out in Spanish.

Hargraves and I rushed in with the other guests that had heard the noise, and at the foot of the stairs a strange sight met our eyes. Lying prostrate ton Transcript.

on the floor was the beautiful Senora Garcias, with eyes closed and hair disheveled, while around her neck was a red band, almost bleeding, as though the necklace had been snatched off with violence. Up on the stairs the prefect grappled with O'Rorke, and as they swayed back and forth with uncertain footing the light gleamed from a stiletto in the latter's hand.

It was the prefect that had called for help, and before we could reach them to assist O'Rorke a haif dozen of the hotel servants appeared, and Jim was overpowered. The prefect disengaged himself with difficulty from Jim's embrace and stood panting.

"Lock this fellow up until police come from the city," he ordered. But Hargraves and I interposed.

"What's the trouble, Jim?" I called to O'Rorke.

The prefect tried to keep him from replying, but Jim cried: "He stole the senora's necklace. It's in his pocket." At this the prefect turned on him with a string of oaths. "Villain!" he hissed. "You took the necklace, and if it had not been for me the senora Tom Hargraves and I had planned might have fared worse. Thank heav-

The retainers wrenched the knife from O'Rorke's hand, and the crowd peared there was a sudden commotion, surged up hissing, for nothing excites the Latin mind like the sight of naked parts of the clearing and to the unweapons. The affair was becoming desperate for O'Rorke, but luckily at this moment Mr. Cuthbert pushed through ward him with wings outstretched Late one afternoon we arrived at the crowd, which fell back sullenly as and feet scarce touching the ground.

"Hold on there!" he called as the waiters tried to drag Jim away. "There must be some mistake, prefect. I know Mr. O'Rorke quite well, and

The sun shone warm upon the banks of the Chipela, upon the tall pines and the low bending dogwoods and upon the little cabin in the half acre clearing that was devoted to chicken raising and sweet potato growing.

There were odors of new growth in the air, the glint of fresh green among the foliage, and from a branch of the flowering dogwood a mocking bird was singing its delirious joy of the spring sunshine and flowers.

A white haired negro came slowly around the cabin, grasping with both hands a large bowl from which a piece had been broken. Horses and Rain.

Day after day the lover of animals had stopped to pet the baker's horse, which happened to be hitched at a certain corner at the hour when the animal lover passed, and the horse apparently appreciated the attention. But one day his mood changed, and he snapped viciously. "Well, of all things!" exclaimed the animal lover.

and he was always telling of them. The only reason none of these ideas were carried out was from lack of capital. That was the trouble with his wife's ideas-it wanted a lot of money to carry them out. Besides, Mr. Carson was not a born speculator. He was simply a good natured, easy going carpenter.

The day finally came when the carpenter sickened and died. He left a home clear of debt and a life insurance of $3,000. Some of the neighbors said that was more money than his wife could make in fifty years, notwithstanding her smartness, and others predicted that she would take the cash capital and open the eyes of the town. Within a month after the funeral it was known that she was making a move of some sort. The fact that she had sold her property could not be concealed from the public, but as to what she was going to do with the cash in hand she was reticent. The minister of her church called and offered his formalist advice but it did not seem to standing her smartness, and others financial advice, but it did not seem to be greatly appreciated. Squire Henderson, who was supposed to be one of the cutest capitalists and speculators in that part of the state, called then: "Wha' yo' gwine to do dar, and tried for an hour to convince her that pork was sure to go up and that she could double her money by investing in hogs, but she would not promise to follow his advice. Advice came in from all sides and was received and farm had been for sale since the oldest passed from father to son two or three times. It had steadily gone to decay with all changes, and the day the Widow Carson made her call and announced she might buy it if the price MONDAY, THE TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY were right she was regarded as an angel straight from heaven. The price was made right, and a promise was extorted that the name of the buyer length of time. Even before the deed was signed men were at work cutting down the dead and scraggy fruit and other trees, burning up rotten fences and clearing off the site everything but the house. That was left for the real estate office of the Highland Bluffs Improvement company. No one had ever seen any bluffs there, and no one could discover any bluffs there. But what of it?

On the same day that arrangements were made with the railroad company singing. Never in the history of the bluffs a surveyor was in the field laying the old farm out into parks, avenues and streets. A few days later the advertisements of the new town. The Widow Carson came to the front now. She was handling the good thing all by herself-that is, she paid cash to her assistants, and that ended their interest in the matter. The Widow Carson went on the principle that the bigger her advertisements the quicker they would be read and the more they would convince. She therefore took half pages. It was costly business, but even bankers came forward and offered to advance any money needed, and every day or two a new reporter came down from the city to give "the only woman in the real estate business" another fine writeup. Did you ever see a woman auctioneer? Well, the hundreds from the city who went down to that sale and got off the train where the foundations for the new depot were being dug saw one. It was Mrs. Carson. A lawyer and a notary were at hand to make out the deeds, but she took her stand on a box to act as auctioneer. It was a novelty. The crowd had come down feeling good natured, and the novelty further pleased them. There were beer and sandwiches, and the day was lovely. The tide covered most of the mud flats and the marsh, and if any one missed the bluffs he wasn't mean enough to speak of it. That auction sale went with a rush. Between 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 3 in the afternoon 400 lots wore sold for cash down. The horse's nose bag used to hold the greenbacks was nearly full. After the first forty lots went the rest was all velvet for the widow. It is said that she quit soaked with rain. No matter how over $25,000 ahead of the game. Quit? peaceable his disposition, the rain Oh, yes! They always do that, you makes him cranky, and there is no know. She went up to the city and telling how he will take unsolicited invested her money in a store and made it pay, and if you will go down, to Highland Bluffs tomorrow you will find the place just as it was left the day after the auction. There are the office, the parks and streets, the water filled holes where the depot was to rest. You will find the marsh, the mud and the mosquitoes. "What's the matter?" you will ask. Nothing-nothing 'tall. It was "just one of those sales.' and the only novelty about it was that it was worked by a woman.
