COSSACKS OF THE CZAR.

News dispatches from various parts of Russie report how the Cossacks have made brutal use of their sabers and whips against the excited people. The Cossach's whip is an instrument of torture, and it is used by these semibarbarian followers of the Osar with wonderful experimens, Generally the whip has but one thong or lash; occasionally it has two or three. The end of each thong is loaded with a bit of from or lead to render the pain and wound inflicted, more intense. A Cossack has been known to pick in eve from a man's face with a blow of his miniature knout. He can split an apple on man's head with a cut of the lash, and be tan snip off the burning end of a match held in a comrade's fingers. But no thoughts as to accuracy of stroke govern him when confronted with a vengeful, howling mob. Then he simply lays about him with the full strength of his justy arm, and the reciptent of the blows will remember for a lifetime that he has had an encounter with these deraded hirelings of absolutism.

The Cossacks are said to be of Tartar origin. They generally inhabit the steppes of Russia about the lower Don and Dnleper, but are found in lesser number in eastern Russia, Omcasia and Siberia. Ethnologists are uncertain as to their origin, but their nucleus is supposed to have consisted of refugees from the ancient limits of Russia forced by hostile invasion to to half believe you." MENACE OF CHILD LABOR.

In many places there are factories, which turn out a mixed product. Their principal product, so far as the broad interests of the country-are concerned, consists of human beings stunted by too early toil, with minds made fertile for anarchy and miarule, and their bodies prepared for disease and early death. The other products of these factories are cotton and glass, but these things are only incidental, and by comparison remportant. At the jowest estimate 20,000 children, all of whom are less than 12 yars of are

No one defends child labor, yet some are still willing to profit by if It is the old idea that labor is a commodity, that the labor of a child is as much a commodity as the labor of a man, that a child's labor may be worth so many cents a day and no more, and that there begins and ends the child's value to the community.

Yet somehow, the world is learning better than this.- It is learning that the State can be no better than the average man; that before the man child's development is a crime of childhood, yet still ire toll. To

A Girl's Revolt Against an Award o Valedictory Honors.

"I think the greatest shock I ever ex. perienced and the biggest revolt against my discipline occurred when I was teaching in a country high school," said the schoolteacher. "It was in a school where the valedictory honor was awarded by popular vote of the school, a most | passed. unjust method, by the way, but one to which I was forced to succumb. The girl who received the most votes was by no means the best scholar, and the pupil who ranked highest in scholarship was plainly indignant.

"Every boy and girl in the class was obliged to write and read a graduation essay, and it was my task to look these everys over and all in the everiting of them. The pupil who renked the highest in the class handed in her essay to me with some deflarce, and in it I found some reference to the valedictory honor being rightly hers. I cut it out and told her planly that nothing of that sort should go into her paper. She agreed to leave it out.

"The graduation exercises were pussing off sciendidly when it came her turn to end her essay. She had a facile way of writing, and I was proud of her, jut when she reached what I knew e conclusion she stepped forward and proceeded to deliver two of regulation valedictory. Rates. Prohibition against trolleys carrying freight has been insisted upon by the steam railroads of the State for years, and that it hould be abandoned by act of the Legisla ture was the keynote of the first session of the thirty-first annual meeting of the New Jersey Horticultural Society, held in the Assembly chamber at Trenton Thursday. The Horriculturists claim that the railroada in keeping the troiley freight handling pro hibition law on the statue books, were injur ing their business by compelling them to payprohibitive freight rates They passed strong resolution asking the Legislature
