THE HOLLY TREE.

Hurrah, hurrah, for the holly tree, Not a jot nor a tittle careth be For the cloud and the storm, and that blow.

The roses that grew on the southern wall Waxed feeble and few, and we watched The hawthorne had raded, the Hille is gone The skies of December are pallid and

But the hully is sturdy as sturdy can be, Hurrah, hurrah, for the helly tree! Hurrah, hurrah, for the holly tree, There pover was sarely a bonnier (me ; His prickly armor ' is good to see.

And his perries are red in the winter sun His berries are red, are ruddy are they, Though a roses are dead and the swallow The icioles hang and the tempest is keen.

But he h th his garment of glittering gree Like a king in his g dry standeth he, Hurrah, hurrah, for the holly tree! Alack, alack, for the holly tree,

Laughing and eager there cometh a troop, The men to work, and the maidens to see, And the children to add to the joyous gro And lo, he is lest when their labor is o'er, Dismantled, bereft of the raiment he were And branches are prone to the snow-core

To be raised with rejoicing and carried wit The spoilers have vani-hed; lone shivereth

Alack, alack, for the holly tree! Heigh, height, for he holly tree. But his boughs will gleam it

And some in the village church may be And some may grace the cottage wall Oh it is well for the holly tree beld That he weaveth a speil over the young

One spray in a girl's soft hair shall glow, And one will de,or a grave, I know.

He shareth the sorrow, he shareth the glee,
He gho, heigho, for the holly tree!

The harder the storm, the worse the night, the more watchful are they in their vigils: and it would be almost impossible for an unfortunate vessel to be in distress anywhere along the coast without being speedily seen. Every one of the stations is in charge of a competent keeper, but this is not enough for the purposes of the government, and each year the stations are all visited and rigidly inspected by the assistant inspectors of the; department—competent officers from the United States revenue marine service. This inspection is made as early in the winter as practicable, to get the squads well organized for the coming year.

The life-saving station at Point Judith, R. I., is a fair sample of those to be found all along the coast.
