TRUE.

True to the promise of thy far-off youth,
When all who loved thee, for the promised
A grand, full life devoted to the truth,
A noble cause by suffering sanctified.
True to all benighted of the post-thought
Which made thy youth so eloquent and sweet;
True to all duties which thy manhood
To take the room of fancy light and feet.
True to the steadfast walk and narrow way,
Which thy forefathers of the covenant trod;
True to thy friend in foul or sunny day,
True to thy country, and thy God;
True to the work which still is true to thee,
And true to all as thou art true to me.

The Snow Shroud.

"Father, I cannot marry Jasper Marvin;
my whole soul revolts against it.
I do not respect him, much less love him."
"And Bessie raised her pale face to her father's stern countenance.
For a moment there was silence; then Paul Gray, in hard, sarcastic tones, said:
"You cannot marry Jasper Marvin?
You cannot love him? Who asked you to love him? But see here, girl," and his voice trembled with concentrated passion, "you shall either marry Jasper Marvin or leave my house."
Although the slight figure trembled and the small hands quivered and un-clipped nervously, still her white lips repeated:
"I cannot, father—I cannot."
Her reply seemed to make him furrious, and for a moment speech was denied him.
"Then, as the paroxysm passed away,
he said between his set teeth:
"Go, and never let me see your face again."
He held the door open for her to pass through, and as she tottered across the threshold, he closed the door upon her.
Mourning the staircase, she entered her apartment, and sinking upon a chair, gazed in a dazed sort of way into the glowing fire.
At length, rousing herself, she began filling her satchel with a few necessary articles.
Having finished her task, she dressed herself in her evening dress, and arraying her figure in a heavy, dark traveling suit, and fastening a large waterproof over all, stood ready to depart on her journey.
Standing at the door she glanced for the last time upon the pleasant room which had so long been hers.
The tears fell thick and fast, but her purpose never wavered, as she started for the railway station.
At length the station was reached, and having obtained a ticket, she drew herself closely over her white face and seated herself in an obscure corner of the carriage.
As she sat there alone, with no one to speak a comforting word, no kindly hand held out to assist her, the slight figure swayed back and forth with the intensity of her emotion.
Gradually the tempest of grief spent itself, the tears ceased to fall, and instead of wild, anguished thought, a cold numbness pervaded her whole being.
It seemed like a troubled dream.
As the train thundered into the station,
Bessie was again brought to a sense of her utter desolation.
She went to her hotel, very sad and lively.
A night's rest gave her new strength, and when she arose next morning, she was much refreshed in body and mind.
To-day she must begin to earn her living.
Having procured a morning paper,
and looking over the advertisements, selecting those which she thought most suitable, Bessie donned her hat and cloak, and sallied forth.
The first call on her list was in answer to an advertisement for a governess.
As she rang the bell of the palatial residence her heart quaked, and she trembled with excitement.
As the echo of the bell died away,
the door was opened by a servant, who,
upon learning her errand, ushered her into an elegantly furnished parlor, and then went to inform his mistress of her presence.
Bessie had not long to wait, for scarcely had she seated herself when the lady of the house entered the room.
Upon her entrance, Bessie arose and bowed politely.
The lady acknowledged her courtesy by a haughty inclination of the head, and then, sinking gracefully upon a chair, she said:
"You came in answer to my advertisement, I believe?"
Bessie ventured a timid—
"Yes."
"Have you ever been employed as a governess before?" she asked.
"No," said Bessie, "but—"
"She was interrupted here by the lady's rising abruptly.
Turning toward Bessie, she said,
laughingly:
"This under no circumstances whatever could I employ you."
Bowing, frigidly, she swept from the room, leaving Bessie in a tumult of disappointment and wounded feeling.
"She might have treated me a little more kindly," she murmured as she again reached the street.
The rebuff which she had received disheartened her greatly; but she knew that upon her feeble efforts depended her livelihood, and she must persevere and try again.
And she did try; but the fate seemed against her, for, when she next had obtained nothing to do, and, sick at heart, she returned to the hotel.
The first day was but a preface of the others, and at the end of the week Bessie was ready to give up in despair.

She had secured a room in a cheap boarding-house, but, nevertheless, her funds were getting low, and what to do after they were gone she did not know.
As she was listlessly in search of work one day, she happened to raise her eyes, and in a little shop window she saw advertisement for girls to sew flannel shirts.
She applied for work.
A large roll of coarse shirts was given her; upon asking what the price to be paid was, the man answered that it was according to the manner in which the work was done; and, promising her to do it as well as she possibly could, Bessie hastened to the place which she called home, and began busily to labor.
At the end of three days, by working early and late, the work was finished, and, after neatly folding it up, she prepared to take it home.
Her heart was lighter than it had been since leaving her father's house, and as she tripped through the streets, the shadow of a smile hovered about her lips.
But her joy was of short duration; as the man examined the work he was astonished at the neatness of the sewing, but hiding his true feelings, he said gruffly:
"It is only worth three shillings," and threw them contemptuously upon the counter.
"Three shillings!" Bessie repeated, incredulously.
"Yes, he answered, "and good pay at that too."
With a gulp she swallowed the lump which came into her throat, and taking the money, and another bundle, for she must do something to keep the wolf from the door, and left the shop and sadly returned home.
When the next morning came, Bessie was in a high fever, and raving in delirium.
As she did not appear below stairs, the landlady came into her room to see what was the matter, and found her in this sad condition.
A doctor was sent for, who pronounced the disease brain fever.
The landlady was a poor woman, quite unable to bear the expense of a physician and the necessary medicines; and so poor Bessie was removed to the hospital.
Many days she stood upon the brink of the grave, but her time was not yet come; and after a severe struggle, nature gained the victory.
Slowly back to life she drifted, but her heart was not joyful at that, for what had she to live for?
No one was gladdened at her recovery, and sometimes she bitterly lamented that she had not died.
Days of convalescence followed, she knew not whether to go.
At length she turned to her old lodgings, and, after gathering together her scanty possessions, went and sold them.
With the money thus obtained she determined to go home, and started immediately for that haven.
She had almost reached the door of her father's house, when a feeling of deadly fear overcame her.
The image of her father, as he stood that last night in the parlor, rose before her, and she dared not enter to be treated again in the same manner.
Then she turned, and again trod the path to the road.
Every object she saw reminded her of those happier days which were never to come again.
As she reached the road, she stood a moment in doubt.
Then, with a murmured prayer, she turned, not to the city in which she had suffered and endured so many hardships, but toward the city of the dead.
It was a raw, black night; the dull, leaden clouds betokened a storm.
The wind moaned and sobbed through the naked, ice-encrusted branches of the trees.
The hard ground almost cut through her thin boots.
Her frail form shivered in the blast, and, almost exhausted, she reached the gate.
She knew the exact spot where her mother lay, for it was only by her mother's grave that she was going.
It was reached.
"I am so cold," she muttered wonderingly. "Won't you warm poor Bessie, mother? Perhaps if I lay my head upon your breast, I will become warmer."
She sank wearily upon the hard ground, and almost immediately the tired eyelids drooped, and she fell into that sleep which knows no waking.
Then the snow began to fall, softly, whisperingly.
The large flakes fell, covering the brown-faced earth with an ermine robe, and over the silent sleeper, carelessly a robe fell.
And so, when the morning broke clear, calm and beautiful, leaving no trace of the night's havoc save that still cold form, the old gray-haired sexton found her.
The tiny, wasted hands were clasped as if in prayer, and about the chiseled lips a smile of ineffable peace hovered.
"Never in life had the beautiful face seemed so angelically sweet; it was white as the marble against which it was pressed."
Calling assistance, they tenderly reverently bore the unalike form to the hall, for they well knew the sweet-faced Bessie Gray.
On the very night of Bessie's return Paul Gray, her father, lay dying.
Two days before, his physician had informed him that he could do nothing more for him, and, with death thus staring him in the face, was it any wonder that all the deeds of his life rose up, darkly before him, prominent among them being his true treatment of his loving daughter?
Natural affection allowed its way and hurriedly calling an attendant, he sent for Bessie to return.

But it was too late.
No trace could be found of the missing one; and so Paul Gray, the owner of great riches, died alone, but for his faithful servant.
In the magnificent parlor they laid him in state, and in his room, by his side they laid his daughter.
Two days after, a mournful train of carriages wound its way toward the churchyard, and by the side of another and wife was laid all that remained of father and daughter.
Reading Sport.
The men employed about the Wabash and Lake Shore elevators, near Toledo, O., were treated to quite a recent having the pleasure of hunting and killing a large wild cat. For some time past the farmers on the East Side have been complaining of the depredations of some of their cats, and a certain object that would be seen disappearing with a chicken or a fat turkey. All efforts, however, to kill the brute proved unavailing, and apparently they were doomed to suffer on. At an early hour 2 men, employed in Wabash Elevator recently No. 4, observed an animal walking across the Pennsylvania bridge near Toledo. They had heard of the killing of a wild cat on the East Side, and rightly supposing that this was the cause of all the consternation, they notified all the men around the elevator, and turned out en masse to effect its capture or death. Procuring a half inch rope they made a slip knot, and placed it so that the wild cat would step into it as she walked across the bridge; they secreted themselves and waited developments. The cat evidently intent upon some object on this side, walked along and stepped into what was intended to be a fatal trap. As soon as her foot was in the noose, the men at the other end of the rope gave a vigorous pull and her catch was caught by the hind leg. The men thought they had her sure. But she merely turned round, snatched her teeth from the rope, and sprang away, bearing a part of it on her hind foot, making directly for the swivel near the elevator. Then there was sport. About 50 men armed with clubs and revolvers rushed after her trying to kill her. A number of dogs were brought into requisition, but they dared not approach nearer than seven or eight feet to the brute, for she uttered an ominous screech which warned them to keep out of the way. At length pussy took another flight, ensconcing herself this time under the docks at the elevator. Here she was safe from the attacks of the dogs, and her glaring eyes kept most of the men at a respectable distance. But one of them, George West, inspector No. 4, going cautiously to a crevice in the dock, took her by the hind leg, and she was carried to the station, and placed in a cage. A sportsman and a better dog.
A young man of Rochester relates a story at his own expense that will be appreciated by sportsmen. He was recently in a part of the country where game is very abundant, and nearly all the male inhabitants are devoted admirers of dog and gun. Our hero was stopping at the best hotel in the place, and intimate with the leading citizens. They thought a stranger should be invited to day's shooting, and proposed to him that he go out for partridges, with two of the best shots of the town. He neglected to tell them that he was no sportsman, but accepted the invitation with apparent gladness, as if he anticipated a day's sport, such as genuine sportsmen know how to enjoy. A gun and a first class dog were procured, and the hunt was on. However, he had not taken up immediately, with no less animation than the other two, but he was a master. And at this apparent competition the two individuals the people had invited to shoot, began to administer some severe reproofs. But seeing all his efforts failing, he launched forth into violent action, accompanied by loud vociferations. His frequent gestures, the ape did not fail to take up immediately, with no less animation than the other two, but he was a master. Our Lodges. A. F. & M. S. Unity Lodge No. 55, meets in the Hall over N. J. State Bank, on the evening of every first and third Tuesday of each month.

Atlantic City. Atlantic City, N. J., is a beautiful city, and a favorite resort for the winter season. It is situated on a beautiful bay, and is surrounded by a low range of hills.

Building and Loan Association. The Building and Loan Association of Atlantic City, N. J., is a corporation organized for the purpose of building and loaning money.

Theater for the County Clerk's office was put up on Monday. The theater is a fine building, and is well adapted for the purpose.

The Rev. Mr. Gifford preached in the Methodist church on Tuesday evening. His sermon was on the subject of the resurrection.

The schooner, Electa Bailey, Captain Smith, ashore at Somers Point, is afloat and all right. It is a fine vessel, and is well adapted for the purpose.

It must be eminently right and good to rise early, because it is so inhumanly hard to do so. It is a habit that should be cultivated.

Christmas greens, dainties and good resolutions are beginning to form a portion of the daily life. It is a time of joy and gladness.

Chas. S. Bradock, of Haddonfield, has received an order for car bony plants to be shipped to him as an experiment. It is a new and interesting experiment.

A. A. Fentler's name was sent into the Senate for confirmation, to be Postmaster of Vineland, N. J. It is a position of honor and responsibility.

Old papers, suitable for patterns of wrapping purposes, for sale at four cents a pound, by William Maloney, at the Record office.

A man who will read a newspaper three or four years without paying for it would pasture a goat on the grave of his grandfather.

Rev. Mr. Sykes occupied the Estellville pulpit last Sunday afternoon and Rev. Mr. Campbell the pulpit in Weymouth at the same time. It was a most interesting service.

The average citizen walks along proudly in this weather, for he remembers the biblical promise, "The wicked shall be set up in slippery places." It is a warning to all.

Dollar bills will begin to grow scarce and scarce because no one has a dollar for less than five dollars can be found to national banks. This will give the silver dollar another chance.

Mr. Freshford Bate was in May's Landing on Monday, on business in connection with the addition to the Clerk's office, he being on the committee on that improvement.

The schooner Kate Gifford got caught in the ice in Virginia, and to save her Capt. Dan Gifford was compelled to pay $500 to have her towed forty miles to the port of Annapolis, Maryland.

Atlantic County was pretty well represented at the convention of the Grand Army of the Republic, held at Atlantic City, N. J., on Monday last. Among others were Messrs. J. E. P. Abbott, Geo. Thompson, S. S. Adams, and Deputy Sheriff Bate.

Bush, colored, who was sentenced at the recent term of court, for petty larceny, to two months imprisonment in the county jail, to date from day of commitment, will be discharged on Monday.

The Atlantic County Teachers' Association will meet in the school house in Egg Harbor City on Saturday next, January 25. Prof. Slinger, of Philadelphia, is to address the Association on "How to teach Grammar."

Mr. J. H. Schwinghammer, of Egg Harbor City, was married on Sunday last, to Miss Mattie, daughter of Her. Charles Cast. The happy couple left on an extended bridal tour.

The schooner Emma C. Babcock, Capt. Treene, which went ashore in Gloucester (Mass.) harbor, Dec. 22d, having been lightened of her cargo of coal, was floated last Saturday and towed to the marine railway for repairs.

It is reported that the only men affected by last summer's heat in St. Louis, were those in the habit of borrowing instead of subscribing and paying for their newspapers. The reading public will do well to ponder over this fact.

The Ladies Mite Society of the Methodist church met at the residence of Miss Annie S. Gault, on Thursday afternoon. It being deemed advisable to dispense with the usual programme this month on account of the protracted meeting in their church.

The towns of Aven and Williamson are connected by a telephone line. Can't we see one between this place and Egg Harbor? It is needed badly and would be a good paying investment. Won't some enterprising man take the lead of this matter? There's millions in it.

A concert was given in Ertell's Hall, Egg Harbor City, on Thursday evening, for the benefit of St. John's Reformed church. The programme set to this office last week was not received until we had gone to press. It is our apology for its non-appearance.

A protracted meeting is in progress in the Methodist church. The church is crowded every evening and the interest appears to be deep. It is to be hoped that the church is on the eve of a gracious out-pouring of the Holy Spirit.

The teacher of the public school at Ledestville, Mr. Presly, had some trouble with one of his scholars, and ordered the boy to leave, which he refused to do, and Mr. Presly attempted to force him, when a scuffle ensued, and the boy got a rap over the head with a roundstick, before he would yield. The teacher was arrested on complaint of the boy's father, charged with assault and battery.

Collector's Sale for Taxes. (Buena Vista Township.) Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a warrant issued by Wm. Chas. Miller, a darkey, was brought to the county jail on Friday week, charged with assault and battery on complainant of his wife. His bail was fixed at $200 for his appearance at court, and being unable to procure it, he was committed. It does not seem right that the people of the county should be taxed to support this man on such a trivial charge until the April term of court, but then, in the language of Boss Tweed, "What are you going to do about it?"

The Young Men's Literary Society held a public discussion on Tuesday evening in Clark's Hall. The question was, resolved, that railroad lines are more beneficial than steamship lines. The following members took part in the discussion: Affin, Moore, G. Jones, T. Hooper, J. Scull, W. Mahoney, G. Jones, J. Clark and F. R. Moore. Negative, F. M. Moore, W. Pommaller, H. Jones, S. Smallwood, D. Herbert, N. Neal and N. Vaughn. Judge, John Teck. The question was decided in the affirmative.

The water commenced running over the tumbling dam on Monday morning, and the noise is fifty per cent greater than that caused by the water running over the old dam. All the windows in the neighborhood rattle constantly, and the noise was such on Monday night as to keep many from sleeping. It will take some time for the good people up town to get used to the noise.

Mr. J. M. Lougee, formerly superintendent of the cotton mills, left the place about December 25, for Providence, R. I., taking with him boxes containing nine per cent of carter pigeons, and on Monday afternoon a pair of the birds came winging their way back to their old home.

By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that Messrs. Mayhew and Bolte, the committee of the Board of Freeholders who have charge of the erection of the new addition to the Clerk's office, invite proposals for the shelving for the books in the new office. Let those interested take notice and prepare themselves accordingly.

A telegram was received in May's Landing on Monday announcing the arrival of the barkentine, Jennie Sweeney, Captain Ship Hudson, at Galveston, on Saturday last, from Rotterdam. She was about two months making the long voyage. The many friends of the Captain will be glad to learn of his safe arrival.

Mr. and Mrs. David Eberhardt gave a reception to their many friends last Saturday evening. Other engagements kept many ladies from being present, and something was not noticed—ladies being in the minority. The company dispersed a little before 12 o'clock, all feeling "that it was good to be there."

The large building formerly used as a shoe manufactory at Haddonfield, has been leased by a gentleman of Philadelphia as a shirt manufactory. It is the intention to manufacture shirts for a large clothing house of that city. About one hundred girls will be employed and we would advise all in want of steady employment to make application at once.

The schooner II. W. Anderson, Capt. Babcock, arrived at Philadelphia from Savannah on Monday last, and during the trip had a succession of gales from the westward, January 3, lat. 35-40, lon. 73-20, lost foremast, foretopmast staysail and flying jib boom.

There has been quite a number of new scholars added to the rolls of the public school since the holiday vacation. There are over 200 children in this District and about 150 on the rolls, so that at least fifty are not enrolled. Why is this?

The advertisement of Clerk Down in another column giving surveys and others ought to have their chains, etc., tested, many of these same parties that they have work of that kind to be done, and if so, we advise them to give Mr. J. P. Collins, practical surveyor, a call. His card will always be found in our advertising columns.

By reference to the card of Jos. Shinn, Insurance Agent, Atlantic City, it will be noticed that he has taken a partner, and the business will hereafter be conducted by the firm of Shinn & Conover.

The Presbyterian Mite Society met at Mr. and Mrs. Kit Rapp's on Tuesday. The attendance was about as usual and portions of the entertainment decidedly amusing. Miss Lida Thompson read "Blue Beard" and then the same was given in pantomime. Tableau, etc., followed, and about eleven o'clock the company dispersed.

Conductor Joe Bartlett ran an extra train to Egg Harbor on Thursday evening, to allow those who desired to do so an opportunity of attending the concert in Ertell's Hall.

The early rains on Thursday morning found the ground covered with snow, but by nine or ten o'clock it had melted.
