The City Man in the Country.

ACK to the farm is now the talk and dream o thousands of people who begin to realize that the city does not hold all of life that is worth having Ten or fifteen years ago all the talk and tendency was of and to the city. Every city boy was determined to stay in the city, and every country boy of energy and ability had made up his mind to go to the city in search of fortune.

Now city boys plan to live in the country, and thousand nd thousands of men and women, grown weary of the narrowness city life means to the less fortunate, are hoping and planning for the day when they may leave the smoke and grime and imprisoning walls of the city behind and seek the country, with its open spaces, its pure air and its reedom. Of course, the city will always draw from the country. It must if it is to succeed. But it is essential hat there shall be something in the country for it to draw or those who leave the city for the farm. Some of them arm and expect to get rich quick. These are generally disappointed early in the game. An agricultural paper tells of a city man who buried $30,000 on a 250-acre farm in fifteen years trying to breed fancy stock. Another city man, who could easily earn $2,400 a year in an office, lost $10,000 in Kentucky experimenting with a bee farm. A

TWENTY YEARS' SLEEP.

Bip Van Winkle's Case May Have Been More Fact Than Fiction. Even superficial students of folklore know that the tale of Rip Van Winkle, supposing that Irving really heard it in the old Dutch settlements along the Hudson, is by no means peculiar to that district, but is found in some form or other all over the world. In other words, the idea that it is possible for a human being to survive in a state of unconsciousness for a very long time would seem to be either a universal fancy or to be founded on some actual experience.

Dr. Lancereaux in the Paris Bulletin of the Academy of Medicine reports | tells us did not wait till after the marsuch an experience, the case of a woman who actually did, so far as intelliyent consciousness was concerned, sleep almost exactly twenty years.

The patient, of a neurotic and hysterical family, had always been delicate and nervous. On May 31, 1883, she was severely frightened and fell into violent hysteria, which after twentytour hours passed into unconsciousness. In this condition, interrupted every month or six weeks by sudden convulsive attacks, she lay until May 23, 1903, kept alive entirely by injections of norrishment. On May 23 she was selzed with bysterm similar to that at the beginning of her sleep, and the next day there bies which shade it with bits of white was another convulsion. On May 25 | cloth.

she began definitely to recover consciousness and by the next day was able to speak intelligently of events before her sleep and could also rememher from day to day since ..... waking. Of happenings during her sleep, such as the drawing of some of her teeth, she knew nothing. On the evening of May 28 she diel percefully.

The particular case is of interest chleily to the medical profession, but the general fact of survival in unconsciousness for a very long time shows how such tales as those of the Sleepin : Beauty, the Seven SL opers of Epheses and Rip Van Winkle, to mention daly the most familiar examples, could have originated from actual experience and observation. Very likely such cases occurred more than once.

"Truth is stranger then fiction," runs the old saying. It is undoubtedly more correct to say that fiction is merely enlarged, reduced, distorted and otherwise decorated fact and that without a fact within general knowledge from which to start fiction could not exist. It is entirely safe to conjecture that at some prelistoric period, sleeping not out of doors, of course, but under shelter, and for many weeks and probally months, if not years, there was a Ri-Van Winkle-Chicago Inter Ocean.

Faroe and fortune await the lucky in dividual who can realiscover the coblaction of metals from which a Egyptians, the Aztees and the Inof Peru made their tools and arm Though each of these nations reacha high state of civilization, none o them ever discovered iron in spite a the fact that the soll of all three cour tries was largely impregnated with it Their substitute for it was a combine tion of metals which had the tempof steel. Despite the greatest efforts the secret of this composition has baffed scientists and has become a lost art. The great explorer, Humboldt. tried to discover it from an analysis of a chisel found in an ancient Inca silver mine, but all that he could find out was that it appeared to be a combination of a small portion of tin with copper. This combination will not give the hardness of steel, so it is evident that tin and copper could not have been its only component parts. Whetever might have been the nature of the metallic combination, these ancient races were able so to prepare pure copper that it equaled in temper the finest sheel produced at the present day by the most scientifically approved process. With their bronze and copper instruments they were able to quarry and shape the hardest known stones. such as granite and porphyry, and the transition to Ralph Thynne is easy. even cut emeralds and like substances. A realiscovery of this lost art would ever since.

revolutionize many trades in which steel at present holds the monopoly. If copper could thus be tempered now its advantage over steel would be very great, and it would no doubt be preferred to the latter in numerous industries. It is a curious fact that, though this lost secret still baffles modern scientists, it must have been discovered independently by the three races which made use of it so long ago .- New York Herald.

A Continual Strain.

Many men and women are constantly subjected to what they commonly term "a continual strain" because of some financial or family trouble. It wears and distresses them both mentally and physically, affecting their perves badly and bringing on liver and kidper ailments, with the attendant evils of constipation, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, low wality and despondency. They cannot, as a rule, get rid of this "continual straim" but they can remedy its health-destroying effects Munday, of Henrietta, Tex., writes: "My by taking frequent doses of Green's August Flower.
