THE GARDEN OF FORGIVENESS.

There is a garden, far, oh, far away, Kept for the souls who sinned and suffered most. The sword of God forever guards the way, And round its borders camps a heavenly host

A gentle wind breathes through the tufted grass. . Rich with the scent of roses in their bloom. And, with the wind, all sins and sorrows pass. Leaving a sweet contentment in their room.

Here are no troubles; here are none that weep; Here come no thoughts of sadness or despair; But fairest flowers, in fullest beauty, sleep; And softest sunlight fills the dreaming air.

The murmurings of fountains, low and sweet, Forever fill the ear and never cease. Soothing the silence with a gentle beat, Like kindly voices speaking words of poace.

And here, forever and forever, rest The weary souls, unburdened of their sint And cursed things are here forgiven and blessed; And wicked hearts are made all clean within: -Bertrand Shadwell, in Chicago Evening Post.

Times There Were Maxy Different Minds of Dagpipes In Use In Ruroper-The Mighland, Lowisne and trish Variaties.

According to the encyclopedia, the bag-pipe is a wind instrument the fixed chareteristic of which has always been two or more reed pipes attached to and tounded by a wind chest, or bag, which ha has in turn been supplied either by lungs of the performer or by a belows. The original instrument was preumably the simple reed, or shepherd's which was well known to the Bryptians, Greeks and Romans. But the strain of blowing these ancient pipes was so great that some genius conceived the bles of having a eserve supply of wind in a bay stacked to the pipes and hence the barpine; The first real instrument is believed to have been a skin of a goat or kid, with two pipes, through one of which the bag was infiated, the other emitting the

In early times the bagpipe was comion in Great Britain and abroad. At he thus there were ave different kinds by the mouth and atlings by bellows, while in the British false three kinds were known-the great highland bagpipe, the lowiand hagpipe of Bootland which closely resembled the Northambrian) and the Irish bagpipe, In the great highland bagpipe, which riginally had but one drone, a valved leads from the mouth to an air bag, which has four other orifless, three large enough to contain the base of three fixed long tubes, termed drongs, and another smaller, to which is fitted three are thrown on atter is held in All four pipes are filled but of different kinds. "What shall I do with some of the old men I have?" persisted the general passenger agent, "turn' them out to starve?"

"The X railroad," said the president. "is not an eleemosynary institution. The president, directors and management of the road owe a very high duty to the stockholders and bondholders of the road. That duty, sir, will not permit of our giving away money where there is no return."

"That's all very well," persisted the general passenger agent, "but what am I to do with the old _____! "That is not my business," interrupted the president. "You will be expected to get the work of your depart. ment done properly, and it's up to you to find the way. Besides that, you must understand that the X railroad ewes no duty to a man who has been employed by it for years and who has not been provident enough to make some provision for the future."

"That don't sound like the presi dent," muttered the general passenge agent as he left the office. "But guess it's all up with old Tom." That afternoon old Tom responded to his chief's summons with the same cheer

Taking a pencil from his pocket. Mr. McGraw produced an envelope, and with great care drew the outlines of cow. To be sure that the waiter would understand the kind of animal intended in the picture Mr. McGraw added the regulation Texas horns; then he carefully drew the picture of mushroom. At this the waiter's countenance was aglow with intelli gence and he smiled and bowed to the Americano, nodded his head vigoroùsly and disappeared.

McGraw and Bennett smoked thei rigarettes in contentment. "That was a happy thought of yours, Bennett," remarked McGraw, "Hereafter when I am in a foreign country and can not Cold Affected Head and Throat--dig up enough of the language to make myself, understood I will draw upon
