BUILDING NEW SETTLEMENTS How a Railroad Gets People to Loca Along Its Line.

The immigration department of great railroad is most active and effective. It is, strictly speaking, a department of the future, says a writer in the World To-Day. Its duties are well defined. It must develop the possible resources tributary to the road; it must build new settlements, establish new communities, and bring about new conditions. Its pressing need is people How does it go about securing them?

The resources of the new line are studied and every possibility is recordaide, the others following. A candle truthfully described in a booklet which as lighted and fresh bear signs were is distributed through the road's many agencies throughout the country. The hey found that the cave widened out newspaper columns are used, or perand pitched downward. Hayes was haps space in the leading magazines is purchased for the occasion. Printer's ink is used in profusion to scatter the word far and wide. Many roads print their own monthly publication; some issue pretentious magazines; while others publish papers patterned after the Tirm journals.

Some of the roads fit up portable exhihit cars in which are placed beautiful displays of farm products of all kinds, also samples of precious and other metals from the new district. These exhibits are very alluring to the farmer or investor, attract much attention and are most convincing areuments. Such cars are sent out to all parts of the more thickly settled States and are in charge of thoroughly posted representatives.

Sometimes a lecturer accompanies the exhibit car, giving free stereoptices lectures. The grain is shown growing in the fleids; gold and sliver are pictured being brought from the mines; and oil is shown gushing high into the air. An appeal is made to the man who is renting a high-priced farm with no prospects of ever owning one of his own. He is told how, in the newer districts, the same corps are grown on land costing less than one-tenth the price of his rented land.

He is attakened to his own possibilities; he sees a chance for his sons to become independent; he is almost convinced, in fact, he cannot resist the arguments and wants to go and see this wonderful Ridorado. His first anxiety is the expense of the trip. His name is sent to the general immigration office: the car has secured its re-

"Uncle," said Julia, with a little becoming confusion, "I have received an offer. "Whew!" exclaimed her uncle, "that is coming to the point with a vengeance." "And I want to consult about it."

"A very sensible resolution. May I received?" "Edward Fitzroy."

"You haven't known him very long."

"Not-very," said Julia, slowly. "But you think you know all about him, I dare say. Are you very much in love with him?" "Not desperately," answered Julia.

smiling. "At the same time I confess that I am strongly-preposessed in his favor."

"And this prepossession is likely to become a warm sentiment. Well, my little niece, as you have requested my advice, I will give it. I do not object to this lover of yours. Indeed, I know nothing against him. But then I know too little of him at any rate to be able to form a deliberate opinion of his character. If I mistake not, this is also your case. Now, it is my theory that no woman ought to marry unless she is sufficiently well acquainted with her intended husband to have a pretty confident assurance of leading a happy life with him. I therefore counsel you to delay giving your answer for a month, and in that time I will contrive to become better acquainted with "Your advice is good," said Julia, thoughtfully, "and I will follow it." "Thank you," said her uncle, kindly, "for the confidence you have reposed in my judgment. I sincerely hope that the young man will prove to be all we can desire."

Edward Fitzroy was in business in the neighboring city: He had embarked | ceived their right change." a small property inherited from his father in a dry goods establishment. and having a good business tact, was fered. driving a flourishing trade. His acquaintance with our heroine had commenced during a summer residence at the village in which she made her home. It was not strange that he should have, been attracted by Julia. Her gayety, vivacity and beauty made her generally admired; and had any thing else been requisite the reputation of being her uncle's heiress would have procured her suitors. But it is not necessary to dwell further on this point of our story. We are interested to learn how Uncle Henry's plan succeeded.

He first made cautious inquiries rel ative to the young man's business standing, all of which were answered satisfactorily. But this did not satisfy him. He wished to see for himself. Accordingly he purchased a suit of ant mood, muttered about the "airs of clothing so different from that which he was accordinged to wear, that with a pair of green goggles superadded he they were in the street, "will you ac telt convinced they would disguise him sufficiently for his purpose. Thus will in a measure atone for this man's attired he lounged into the store, and inquired for some trifling article. He was purposely very slow in being suit ed. Meanwhile he watched with some attention the bearing of Fitzroy, who was trading with a fashionably attired lady at a little distance. Nothing could be more polite or obsequious than the of success a confidence which was conduct of the young tradesman. With unwearied assiduity he took down from the shelves and displayed a large stock of merchaudise, until the fastidious taste of the lady was at length

Her place was taken by a wealthy lady like the first, the rustle of whose silk proved an immediate passport to the good graces of the young merchant:

"I shall need more than your word my good sir. How do I know but you are in league-"

"Good-morning, sir," said Uncle Henry, abruptly. "You may hereafter regret this gratuitous insult. Madam. will you allow me a word with you?" The woman followed him out of the shop, while Fitzroy, in no very pleasthese beggars."

during his residence in Natches, but soon abandoned the practice, finding that it did not agree with him. Bish op Elder dined with one of his parishoners one night in Natches at about this time. Vegetables in profusion were on the menu, but the bishop disdained them all. He had had enough of vegetables for a long time. He found the meet much more to his taste. His host, who did not know that he had abandoned vegetarianism, said in surprise! "Why, bishop, I thought you were a vegetarian, and here I see you eating mutton." Bishop Elder laughed. "I am not a bigoted vegetarian," he said; "I only eat the meat of such animals as live on vegotable food."
