

PAYING TELLER'S LAPSE.

He and several others failed to note an absence of cash in the bank. Banks are notoriously careful about scrutinizing the signatures on checks on which they pay out money, yet, as the following incident well illustrates, it is possible for even the most careful and experienced teller to make a mistake. The incident is the more remarkable because it reveals a most curious error on the part of a prominent business man as well as an astonishing lapse in the case of a usually accurate and scrupulously exact bank official.

Among the depositors at one of the largest banks in the city is an old and prominent firm which may be called, for the purposes of this relation, Aloysius Jenkins & Co. All checks issued by the firm are signed in person by Aloysius Jenkins, his head, so to speak, and his signature is so thoroughly familiar to the bank officers at whose bank he has deposited for twenty years or more.

During the first week of the month Mr. Jenkins sent from the bank a check signed for $1,800 in his handwriting, but signed Aloysius Smith & Co., had been paid by the bank during the previous month and the sum paid out charged against his account. Aloysius Jenkins was perfectly certain that he had never made such a foolish mistake as that. He sent over for the check. It needed only a glance to show him that he had written it and the signature which he had written to whom the check was payable and whose indorsement was on its back. They had not noticed the mistake at all. It had passed through the hands of their cashier and of other employees and had been sent to the bank. There it had been sent to their account without question, passing the sharp eyes of the paying teller and only being discovered by accident nearly thirty days after it had been cashed. Six or more experienced and expert business men had not detected it. It took get by without detecting it. The fact that he had missigned the check for the day the check was cashed was discovered the day the check was cashed. It was then in closing up an important deal with a man named Smith. The fact that the check was cashed was the only possible explanation for the fact that the check was cashed. The fact that the check was cashed was the only possible explanation for the fact that the check was cashed.

"THREE FISHERS."

The Incident Which Moved Kingsley to Write the Poem.

Charles Kingsley wrote the "Three Fishers" as a result of the many sad sights he had seen at Clovelly. One day of horror in particular lived in his memory. A day, as he described it, "when the old bay darkened with the gray columns of the waterspouts, stalking across the waves before the northern gale, and the tiny herring boats fleeing from their nets right for the breakers, looking more merry even from the pitiless howling waste of spray behind them, and that merry beach beside the town covered with shrieking women and old men, casting themselves on the pebbles in fruitless agonies of prayer as corpses after corpses swept up at the feet of wife and child, till in one case alone a single dawn saw upward of sixty widows and orphan weeping over the fullness of strength and courage." These scenes lived ever in his mind.

But the "Three Fishers" was written as a result of one of the strangest incidents in the history of the church in the town of Clovelly. In 1851 he preached a sermon in a London church on "The Message of the Church to the Laboring Man." At its close the vicar rose and denounced him. Bishop Blomfield said in his diary that he read the sermon and seen its author. He withdrew the edict. The same night upon which he delivered his discourse Kingsley went to his home weary. There had nearly been a riot in the church. He had heard, he said, that his family had been murdered, "as though it were the outcome of it all," as his wife said.

HEART PROVERBS.

He that hath no heart ought to have heels.
A happy heart is better than a full purse.
What comes from the heart goes to the heart.
He who hath most heart knows most of sorrow.
A cheerful countenance betokens a good heart.
No estate can make him rich that has a poor heart.
The heart's testimony is stronger than a thousand witnesses.
A glad heart seldom sighs, but a sorrowful mouth often laughs.
The heart is the hidden treasure of man; the tongue is the gate to the treasure.
A good heart is the sun and moon; neither, the sun, for it shines bright and never changes.
There never was a heart truly great and generous that was not also tender and compassionate.
A young heart never grows old.
A mother was trying to impress on her four-year-old son the importance of going to bed early.
"You know," she began, "the little chickens always go to bed with the sun."
"Yes, mamma," he interrupted, "but the big hen always goes along too."
Barnes-Hovos was quite indignant when he heard what you were about. He says you can't make a fool of him. Of course not; but I can direct your attention to what is already in evidence.—Boston Transcript.

Getting even.
Patience—You say the quarrelled? Patience—Yes, and he returned all his gifts. And what do you suppose he did? Patience—Can't guess. Patience—Sent her half a dozen boxes of soap, with a note explaining that he thought he had taken at least that much from her and that since he knew her—Tinkers' Statement.

Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach.

For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stomach caused indigestion and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of indigestion inflame the mucous membranes lining the stomach and expose the nerves of the stomach, thus creating the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure

Relieves all inflammation of the mucous membrane lining the stomach, protects the nerves and cures bad breath, sour ridges, nervousness and all stomach troubles. Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles.
