WM. G. TAYLOR, Editor and Proprietor.

The frosty morn ablaza Under the swaying willows, Where the tall green rushes sprang, The way-side spring of my childho Babbled and laughed and sang-Bubbled and rippled over,
As the blithe winds came and went And dimpled all day in the sunshine With a gurgle of glad content.

Through the chink of the mossy boulder Its living waters purled, With inarticulate whispers Of the wonderful under-world; The tall ferns riodded wisely With every frond and feather-The brown reeds bent to listen, With all their heads together. Under the wintry starlight, And under the summer noon.

Its ceaseless silvery babble Was set to the self-same tune. The rushes on its margin Were the greenest that ever grew And moss and brake, for its sweet sake, Were golden through and through. When the skles were red with tempest

And the landscape bleak and bare, It seems like a joyous presence In the midst of grief and care; Like a cheery, happy nature No cloud can overcast. In joy or pain, in sun or rain, Contented to the last.

I took his advice, and after some quiry, I found a woman who I thought would suit me. Her name was Emily Sands, and she was a pleasant-faced woman of about forty. She told me she had been left a widow with no means, and had since earned her living by needle-work; and although I had intended that the woman who came every morn ing to do my housework should still come, I found Emily so handy and so willing, that I soon discontinued the services of the other. She was so miable and so virtuous, that I was satisfied that I had done the best that could do in the matter.

"I hope so," he said, doubtfully. "And don't you think so?" I asked "Well, no,' he replied. "Now, I'd like to know why, Elijah

The Mayo of the town, who chanced to be present, and who thought it befitting his office to seem as wise and enlightened as possible, gave us a descant on the folly of uch superstitious practices. He called livination by cards and palmistry a remnant of the barbarism of the Middle Ages, and altogether unworthy the ilinmination of modern days. The school master and notary of the town, as in duly bound, thought as the Mayor did. In fact no one dissented from the oracle of the place. Flushed with his triumph, the Mayor turned to our hostess, and

Monmouth County, New Jersey, in 1778. Now more than ever Clinton found patriotism the rule and loyalty to the crown the exception in New Jersey. Monmouth County was peopled by the descendants of those who, more than a hundred years before had defled the English authorities whom they deemed to be their oppressors, and put forth a manifesto at Middletown which was tantamount to a declaration of independence. The county has been settled by the Dutch and English. Many of the latter were Quakers, whose peace principles would not allow them to bear arms, but, being patriotic, they cheerfully helped the republicani cause in every way their consciences would permit. That county was then largely covered with pine forests, and the sandy soil had not then been enriched by the treasures of marl beds since found in its bosom. But industry was a potent substitute. Their grain fields were just ripening for the sickle when the British invasion occured, and the husbandmen turned out in defense of their food, their homes. D. He temarked that all seasons have their lessons, and it is a duty to consider and profit by them. The wonderful Being who transforms the cold and gloomy winter into the beanties and blessings of the Spring-time is constantly giving other manifestations of his power and goodness around us which are often analagous to natural changes, and may be forcibly illustrated by them. There are elements and reour enterprising young men, and deponent sources capable of vast development and blessed results, but they are frozen up in a cold indifference to their worth or a cold selfishness, or sinful idleness, or enmity to God and all that is good. But there are great possibilities in human life, and in the development of human powers. And no ings of a sea-side sojourn. Thus all that more wonderful is the transition from winter to spring than the change which is effected when grace melts the heart and brings out all the higher and nobler nature in consecration to God and to doing good. See it in the life of the active, zealous individual; in the work and influence of a warm, glow-

GENERAL NEWS

Within a week or two past it was discovered that stocks or honits of the city of Baltimore, amounting to about $20,000, in which the estate of a minor had been invested by order of the Orphans Court, had been abstracted from their place of deposit, sur-rendered to the City Register, and other bonds issued in a different name, on which a savings bank had made advances. On Friday last detectives arrested George W. Bishop, an ex-Judge of the Orphans' Court, charged with the fraudulent transfer and conversion of the bonds. The Delaware and Hudson Canal Company have issued their circular of prices of coal for the month of June, per ton of 2,240 pounds and delivered free at Rondont. The prices are : Furnace lump, steamer lump and grale, each $3.60 egg, $3.75; stove, $4.10; acknowledged to have been a party to four murders in the past five years. The confession has created considerable excitement in that place, owing to the high place the parties held in the community. Mr. Peter Cooper, of New York, has gone to Limestone Springs, S. C., to inaugurate his plan for founding a State Agricultural College. The people in that section are giving him an ovation. The migration to Kansas is exceedingly active. During the last three months Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois have sent there about $0,000 settlers, carrying with them about $6,000,000. The people of Boston consume 6,000 bar rels of flour a day

Traveling by steam along highways of iron had its birth in England; but found its true foster-mother in America. Year after year its mileage steadily increased, until the entire continent was covered with a net-work of steel, and the locomotive which started on Monday from the great commercial center of the East, rested at the close of the week from its labors on the shores of the broad Pacific. The capital invested in these great works was counted by millions, and the commonwealths composing the American Republic were, not only in name, but in reality, the UNITED STATES.

One great line of railway liberally aided by the Government, already spanned the continent from the Atlantic coast to San Francisco. Two others are partially completed, the Northern Pacific to the northward of the Union, and the minating on Puget Sound in Washington Territory, and the Texas Pacific, starting from a point on the Mississippi river, and having for its prospective terminus, the harbor of San Diego, in Lower California. The former has reeight years for its completion. Little or no progress, however, is at present South, is being vigorously pushed. It is in the interest of the whole country that it should be speedily built, as competition is the life of trade.
