NEW JERSEY BENEFITS THROUGH INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE.

FUNERALS at the expense of the public have materially decreased since 1875, when The Prudential was established. New Jersey towns, like other towns, have shared in this decrease, which is largely attributable to the system of self-help through industrial life insurance introduced by The Prudential.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

The Appendicitis Fad.—Not one patient in ten who is operated on for appendicitis is a sufferer from the disease. An occasional case of appendicitis requires operation, but the appendix is in full swing among the people, as well as among many doctors. Many good physicians are inclined to regard any pain or ache situated below the diaphragm as due to a fulfilled case of appendicitis, requiring immediate operation for a far fee. The leading men in the profession are to blame for their refusal to raise their voices against an abuse which they know exists and the insistence of patients themselves for the frequency of these unnecessary operations.

Brain Disorders.—Congestion of the brain most frequently results from worry and anxiety of the mind, producing sleeplessness, followed by engorgement of the small blood vessels of the brain, sudden loss of vital power and almost instant death. Apoplexy may be an inherited disease, or it may be induced by too free living or its opposite, too great abstinence. Paralysis may affect only a small part of the body, from a finger or a toe to an entire limb, or it may disable half the body or the whole body, when death soon follows. When half the body is affected with paralysis, we may be certain that the seat of the disease is in the opposite side of the brain, because the nerve fibres cross.

Tragedian.—Yes, we opened for the comedian—And what did you think of your Hamlet? The tragedian—Why—er—he went before I had a chance to ask him.—Philadelphia Ledger.

It Depends.—"Can a man," inquired the clergyman seriously, "go fishing on the Sabbath and be a good Christian?" "Certainly," replied the angler, "if his luck isn't so bad as to make him swear."—Philadelphia Press.

One Distinguishing Feature of the Remington Typewriter is that it LASTS. It does good work when it is new, and continues to do good work when it is old.

COMES NOW A ROCKOPHONE.

Musical instrument which is likely to be long a Cuckoo. About seventeen years ago Alonzo R. Gilman of South Berwick, Me., while driving in New York with his wife was passing a stone wall. He stopped and out he stepped the tones of several rocks by tapping them with his pen-knife. He later confided to his wife an idea that had been suggesting itself to him for a long time. He wished to collect thirteen rocks of the right tones to make a scale of one octave, semitones included. He could play upon them with mallets, he thought, like a xylophone.

Since then his spare time has been spent in searching stone walls and hills. He has carried stones miles which outdoors gave as sweet and correct tones as any which could be played upon them. The others of the instrument, the difference in tone being caused by the curving walls or the aid of a wind or clear atmosphere outdoors.

The result of days of searching, testing and sifting, and sifting, now lies in the "rockophone room" of Mr. Gilman's home on Young street, the only rockophone in the country and probably in the world. Fifty-two rocks, or four octaves, are placed in a case resembling a square piano case in height and shape, about 12 feet long and 3 1/2 feet wide. The rocks vary in size from six inches to three feet, the general shape is oblong, the average thickness about 1 1/2 inches.

Mr. Gilman and his sons, aged 19 and 11 respectively, stand at the instrument and play upon it with mallets. The beats of these mallets vibrate or boxwood, one edge tipped with rubber for pianissimo effects. The tone of the rockophone is unlike that of any other instrument; there is not the metallic ring of the metallophone nor the hollow sound of the wooden xylophone. There is a rippling natural tone quality that first astonishes the hearer and then becomes very pleasing to the ear. It has been recently tested by a professional tuner and declared to be in perfect tune. After being especially arranged by Mr. Gilman any music in sheet or on a piano may be played upon it. Mr. Gilman still devotes his spare time to the perfecting of his unique instrument, adding to and changing the rocks.

Sure Thing.—Teacher—A miracle is going against the natural order of things. Are miracles performed to-day? Bright Boy—Yes'm. "Name one." "Well, mamma says that papa is always turning night into day."—Life.

Least from History.—Some one has characterized the advertising columns of a daily newspaper as a "text from the history of man and nations." Illustrative in a way is the following from a Pretoria paper: "The late Ex-President Kruger's late residence, with four, etc."

WIT OF THE YOUNGSTERS.

Sunday School Teacher—Harry, can you tell me why the lions didn't eat Daniel? Harry—I guess it was 'cause they didn't know how good he was.

"Mamma," said 3-year-old Margie one day when her baby brother had a prolonged crying spell, "for doodness sake dive zat kid some of my smooth in 'strup!"

"Oh, dear!" sighed small Harry, "I do wish I was a man." "What would you do?" asked his mother. "I'd grow a beard so I wouldn't have so much face to wash," was the reply.

Small Johnny was discovered hiding in a neighbor's back yard. "Your mother is looking for you, Johnny," said the neighbor. "I know it," rejoined the little fellow. "That's why she can't find me."

Teacher—What are the people who live in Hungary called, Tommy? Tom—Hungarians. Teacher—That's right, John, what are people who live in Austria called? Johnny—Austrians.

"Why is it you can't get away from the foot of your class, Johnny?" asked the father of a precocious youngster. "Because," explained Johnny, "by the time the teacher gets down to me I've forgotten my lesson."

At last the frost came and little Elmer's persistent search for chestnuts was rewarded. Rushing into the house one morning with a hatful of cracked open burrs, he exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, they're hatched! Ain't you glad I'm so glad?"

Birthday for Each Sex.—With the exception of the Emperor there are no individual birthdays in the delightfully interesting Japan. The people, however, make up for this defect by having a sort of general birthday of everybody in common, which is celebrated with great rejoicing.

There are two of these general birthdays, one for each sex. The male birthday, which is known as the "celibate's day," occurs on the third day of the third month, and the girls celebrate the fifth day of the fifth month. These days are generally put aside and boys and girls respectively receive presents according to their station.

The birthday of the Emperor of Togo, as he is more properly styled, is also a general holiday for the Japanese everywhere. The houses are all decorated with flags, and in the evening the streets are gay with the lights of innumerable colored lanterns. In the morning the highest authorities go to the palace and offer their congratulations in person and the lower degrees do so vicariously to their superiors.

The Japanese would, however, be surprised to hear of their monarch, or having added another year, to his age.

The dark domestic age of the tyrannical, overbearing, impudent Cook is giving way to the dazzling brightness of the Electrical Kitchen, with the high-class Diploma'd and Certified Electrical Lady Chef, with her volts, switches, currents and storage batteries.—London Sketch.

THE PERSISTENT GIPSIES.

Such as walk in the night and sleep on the day, and haunt taverns and ale houses, and no man wot from whence they come nor whither they go." So quaintly describes an old English statute against the Gipsies. Ever since the year 1550, says a writer in the London Standard, Great Britain has tried to get rid of this strange people without appreciable success. Every year or so some county is up in arms against them, yet they persist in returning, and apparently thrive under persecution. The Gipsies are popularly supposed to come originally from Egypt, as their name indicates, but their origin is traced farther east than the land of the Nile. Wherever they come from, they are a separate people, a tribe quite by themselves. They appeared in England about 1500, and twenty-six years later Henry VIII. ordered them to leave the country in sixteen days, taking all their goods with them. "An outlandish people," he called them. The act was ineffectual, and in 1562 Elizabeth framed a still more stringent law, and many were hanged. "But what numbers were executed," says one old writer, "yet notwithstanding, all would not prevail, but they wandered as before, appearing down."

QUEEN OF ITALY AND HER TWO CHILDREN.

Queen Helena of Italy has won the devotion of her subjects by her constant efforts to relieve the suffering caused by the recent eruption of Vesuvius. Up to a very recent date the queen had resolutely declined to speak Italian to the public, though she speaks French with perfect fluency and ease. The queen has two beautiful children, the princess Yolanda and Matilde. The whole nation earnestly desires a male heir to the throne.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

No given amount of money is required to be paid down to bind a bargain. The right of the public in a road is only for transportation. The soil, mineral and rocks in the road belong to the owner of the adjoining land. The statute makes it a misdemeanor punishable by fine not exceeding $100, or by imprisonment not longer than three months, to knowingly use false weights or measure in Minnesota. One need not obtain permission of the government to dig a channel to connect two meandered lakes but he is liable to the owners of the shores of the lakes for any injury by such act. There are only two ways in which the public obtains right to a road across one's land: (a) by laying out the road in the regular way; (b) by working and traveling a road for six years. A man is under no obligation to pay for a thing unless he has expressly or impliedly agreed to do so. When one subscribes for a paper and allows the paper to be sent after his subscription term has expired, he is liable until he orders it discontinued. It is held in some States as in Min-

THE OLD COUNTRY BAND.

I mean the band of olden time, when you and I were boys; Whenever that old band was put, we fellows marched beside it. When martial airs entranced our ears, and every feeling fired; When uniforms with golden braid were all our hearts desired.

Oh, how these fellows marched about on every holiday; The town folks stood upon their steps, the country folks discreet. The "Square" was filled with music sweet, the streets with bright array. With horses prancing to the tunes, drove up some other street.

The boys? Well, you can easily guess—we shall not try to hide it. Whoever that old band was put, we fellows marched beside it. We kept the step the band did, and kept it quite as well. And always held our corner up when it was time to yell.

Perhaps they made some blunders—perhaps the side horns blew About three times as strong and loud as they by right should do; Perhaps the cyphals didn't clang exactly with the base. Perhaps the "B-flat's" missed some notes and totted out of place.

But what cared we when we were boys?—to our uncultured breast "The Girl I Left Behind Me" was as good as Sousa's best; Our little backs would straighten up, our thoughts would soar away— The scene of our earthly bliss—to play a horn some day.

I've heard full many bands since then, and paid to get a seamy I've heard them play their loudest airs and scotch, and scotch. But never has my being thrilled with rapture more complete. Than when I heard old country band go marching down the street. —Philadelphia Ledger.

DANGER BEND.

GOING to have more snow before long," said Farmer Mattland, "creating a weather-wise look around."

A lively boy and a still more lively girl were frolicking in the snow near the weather-prophet.

"Josephus," Mr. Mattland called to the boy, "you take the sled up to the wood lot and bring down a bag of wood. Go right away, so as to be back early."

"All right, sir," and Josephus started at once to hitch Old Trusty to the wooden door to get the dinner-basket, and there stood Cousin Laura, fully equipped for a sleigh ride.

"Here is the dinner-basket and there is enough in it for two," she said. "And here are your skates; I have mine under this shawl. I am to skate on the ice pond, wherever that is, while you are lounging the wood; and if you work fast you may have time to do a little skating yourself."

"Do your loading before you do any skating," Mr. Mattland called. As Old Trusty moved rapidly toward the gate.

THERE WAS A GREAT CRASH.

And don't waste any time about getting back if it begins to snow hard. And be careful of Danger Bend going and coming."

"It is interesting, rather. I'll show it to you when we get there."

The road led uphill almost from the start, for Mattland farm lay in the valley of a little river, the road near the house, and the wood lot was well up among the hills.

"There's Danger Bend. What do you think of it?" said Joe at last, stopping the horse and pointing to the road before them.

In his many turnings the road had left the river out of sight; here it had suddenly come back to it. Far below them, at the foot of a long, steep slope, Laura saw the glistening ice of the frozen stream. It was to save itself from falling into the river that the road crept around Danger Bend. "It had come in the course of a steep ascent, to the very edge of the downward slope; now, to get away from this, it made a sharp and sudden turn around the spur of a hill, and then kept on its upward course farther inland."

The track about the Bend was narrow, and how it was gashed with snow and there was not the slightest barrier between it and the edge of the descent to the river. The journey upward was bad enough, but to come down that icy track with a heavily laden sled seemed impossible.

"Hold on hard, now, and in two minutes you can see how Danger Bend looks from the uphill side," said Joe, when the terrors of the situation had been sufficiently enjoyed.

The passage was made in safety, and Laura decided that the Bend looked even worse than before. That she forgot all about it, in the presence of a grievous disappointment.

"You may be able to do a little skating on the ice pond, but I shan't!" Joe exclaimed emphatically. "Look here, and here!"

He held before his dismayed companion the black sleeve of his coat and then a fold of her gray shawl. Both were thickly powdered with fine white crystals.

"It means business when it comes down this way," Joe remarked, with some excitement. "We have two miles to go yet, a load of wood to put on, and to get back home before the road drifts full. Oh, I have to go!"

The old horse knew what was expected of him and went forward in the track but before they reached the bottom of the wood lot they were enveloped in a dense cloud of falling snow, and the wind had risen to what Laura considered a gale.

"Don't you think we had better go right back, Joe," she suggested dubiously. "You know what your father said about the snow?"

"I've said about the snow?"

that Laura had suggested. It was a swift and breathless flight that they took down that long, steep hill. "But there's a lot of snow on the road. The river had its perils as well as the road. As the skaters swept round a sharp bend they were confronted by an enormous drift, which the driving wind had piled on the ice against the obstructive hills. The drift was far too deep and wide for them to make their way through it and too soft and yielding for them to climb over it; and it appeared to stretch the entire width of the stream."

Joe and Laura struck across toward the opposite bank, hoping to round the end of the obstacle there, but they were met by a still more discouraging obstruction. The river just was narrow and swift, so swift that no ice had formed on the sides they had come to. The snow-drift ended abruptly at the edge of deep, fast-flowing and very cold water.

"Take off your skates, Laura," said Joe in despair. "We may just as well lie down comfortably in the snow and freeze right here. Trusty must have got through somehow, I suppose, but the track he made has drifted full already. Hello! What's that? Here, there! Help! Help! Help!"

Men were on the other side of the drift, they shouted as they shouted to each other could be heard above the shrieking of the wind. They shouted still more loudly now in answer to Joe's calls.

"That you, Joe? Are you both all right? That was Mr. Mattland's voice. Keep steady for a few more long and well get at you. We are more than half through the drift now."

They dug fast and presently rescuers and rescued were face to face.

"Joe, you rascal! Why didn't you come home when it began to snow, I told you to. I was sure we'd find you with broken bones on the ice at the foot of Danger Bend, when Trusty got home by the river with his harness in strings! What do you mean, sir?"

Mr. Mattland tried to speak ferociously, but his attempt was a failure, for all of them could see the tears joy running down his face.

"Now, don't try to scold!" Laura cried, hugging him rapturously. "You never can, you know. And I wouldn't have minded the world's doings for anything in the world!"—Chicago Daily News.

BABY'S TEETH.

Importance of Proper Care of First.—Upon the care of the first teeth, declares the Washington Times, depends the beauty and stability of the permanent set.

Keeping the teeth clean is not the only requirement. Proper diet means a good deal.

Sugar and candies should be avoided, not because their immediate contact with the teeth is injurious, but because they frequently produce an acidity of the stomach which greatly affects the teeth.

If a child is ill during teething time, its system often lacks the necessary amount of bone-making elements; and in such cases a little lime-water, in the milk, is beneficial. When the child's teeth are coming in, a plentiful supply of cereals that are rich in bone-making elements should be given.

Just as early as possible start feeding the child in the care of its own teeth. Select a tiny toothbrush, soft and pleasant; use every inducement—either bribery or punishment in this case—to obtain its regular use. Keep this up until it has become a well-established habit.

At the first sign of decay consult a dentist. To lose the first teeth prematurely is a pity, as it affects the durability of the permanent set.

When the second teeth commence to appear, a dentist should examine them at least once a year. Care must be taken that they are not crowded or allowed to come in unevenly. In this way much pain and even later disfigurement may be avoided.

Teeth have often become blackened and disfigured beyond redemption by strong medicines given in childhood. This seems like criminal carelessness on the part of the parents; of course, it is only thoughtlessness; but the remedy is available in this case, as though a real injury had been intended.

Medicine that may blacken the teeth or injure the enamel should always be given through a glass tube.

Shocking.

INSECT ENGINEERING

FEATS OF THE CARPENTER-BEE AND THE TUMBLEBUG.

The Sixteen Beetle is an Expert Graver—Wonderful Skill of the Spider and the Great Strain that His Elastic Web Would Bear.

Long before man had thought of the spider, the tumblebug was at work, made after the same fashion and used in the same way, for the purpose of making silts in the branches of trees so that she might have a secure place to deposit her eggs.

Some years ago a paragraph went the rounds of the papers in which it was said that a spider had suspended an unfortunate mouse, raising it from the ground and leaving it to perish miserably between heaven and earth.

By what process of engineering did this comparatively small and feeble insect succeed in overcoming and lifting up by mechanical means the mouse or the monkey?

The spider is furnished with one of the most efficient mechanical implements known to engineers—viz., a strong elastic thread which requires a degree of strength well known.

Each spider's thread acts like one of the elastic rubber bands. Let an ounce and a half of snake weighed half an ounce and that each thread is capable of supporting a grain and a half.

What object the spider could have had in his work I am unable to see. It may have been a dread of the harm which the mouse or snake might work or it may have been the hope that the decaying carcass would attract flies, which would furnish food for the engineer.

Going to Congress. A poor man had better keep out of congress. Campaign expenses are heavy and they come every year.

Chemical Changes. By taking some lime water and blowing one's breath into it a fine white powder will be formed in the water.

Repressed Sentiments. People who marry always bear good wishes, congratulations and other pleasant remarks, but they are much in not bearing the repressed sentiments which burst forth to others.

A COAT OF ARMS.

How One May Be Acquired For a Consideration in England.

The practice of granting arms is still in vogue in England, Ireland, Scotland, Austria, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Greece, etc., and at times the pope, as sovereign pontiff, exercises the power.

Indeed, it is by patent or grant alone that a new family can legitimately acquire a coat of arms.

A grant or patent of arms is made to a man and his male descendants. This gives him a right to the simple of arms of the coat of arms and those of the college and describing in official terms the proceedings that have taken place and a correct blazon of the arms.
