A tear stole down her rosy-cheek, and her head hung lower on my shoulder. I put my arm around her, drew her to my breast, and somehow, though I never could tell just and a package which she supposed to be from me, and returned home. Her first how, I asked her if she would be my wife. Her reply, which was a sweet "yes," seem-ed to have almost transformed that little parden spot into heaven. I held her long in my spins and pressed passionate kisses on her lips. When we parted, an hour af-ferward, we had vowed to be forever true to each other. After that our meetings became more frequent and life was a thousand times sweeter to me than ever before. Several weeks had passed pleasantly way, when the time for my return home near. It was about the middle of July. Having gained her parents' consent to our marriage, I. promised to return in September and claim my bride. With a farewell meeting with Lenora, in which all our vows were renewed and many which all our vows were renewed and many parting tasks were shed, I took passage in a stage-coach for Cliffon, my father's home. It was eighty miles distant, and I was three days in going. The first thing I did after I had received the congratulations of my friends was to write to Lenora, to tell her of my journey over the steep and rocky road among the mountains and hills on the old coach. A sweet correspondence ensued, and through the long summer days that made and through the long summer days that followed the greatest pleasure that I enjoyed was in reading Lenora's letters and writing lived and loved ever since. One of the most ourious forms of detends known is afforded by a respectly dis stinging and state will, willow, being stinging and state will be respectively by the plant and beford it against in evenues. Of these the most remarkable is the bull's-horn scacis (described by the late Mr. Belt in his hook. "The Naturalist in Nicaragus"), a shrabby tree with gigantic curved thoms, from which its name is derived. These horns are hollow and tenanted by ants, which 'bore a hole in them, and the workers may be seen running about over the grann haves. If a heaps is workers may be seen running about steam under the penetrating rain storms workers may be seen running about steam under the penetrating rain storms over the green leaves. If a branch is shaken, the ants swarm out of the thorn and attack the aggressor with their stings. Their chief service to the plant consists in detending if against bar, as well as some of the milk from the cows, some fast from the steers and plan, contring ants which are the great plant consists in detending if against leaf-cutting ants, which are the great enemy of all vegetation in that part of America. The latter form large under-ground nests, and their work of de-struction consists in gathering leaves, which they strip to form heaps of ma-terial, which become covered over with a delicate white fungus, on which the larve of the ants are fed, so that literally they are a colony of mush-room growers. The special province of the little stinging ants, which live in the thorn of the acacis, is, therefore, the thorn of the acacia, is, therefore, are supplied. When the leaf unfolds, the ants may be seen running from one leaflet to another, to see if these little yellow bodies are ripe; and if they are ready to be gathered they are broken up by the ants and carried away to the nest in the thorn. Several small birds, also build their nests in the bull's-horn acacia, thus escaping from a predatory ant which is capable of killing young birds. The trumpet tree, another plant of South and Central America, is also protected by a standing army of ants, and, like the above-mentioned acacia, grows for its protectors small food bodies containing oil, but instead of secreting nectar in its leaves it harbors a small insect caccus) whose sweet secretion is much elished by the ants.
