SAILING HOME.

The stormy sea behind us raves-We're sailing home!

Welcome the tumult of the waves We're sailing home! If our good ship her course shall keep. We reck not danger of the deep; The waves leap not as our hearts leap-We're sailing home !

Soon we may see our fatherland-, We're sailing home! Soon 'mid its well loved hills may stand-We're sailing home! Soon eager heart to heart shall press After the sea's wide leneliness: Soon we shall meet the old carees We're sailing home!

Ah, greet us well, eyes that are dear-We're sailing home! The stormy waves give little cheer But sailing home. Yut if old friends unfaithful be, Or love keep not its constancy, Better the darkness in the sea

Than sailing home But ah, we trust that hearts are true When skiling home; We cherish still the last adieu While sailing home. Then let our ship her swift way keep

Amid the dangers of the deep;

Wayes leap not as our fond hearts leap · We're sailing home!

How to Learn to Swim.

Every boy and girl should learn to swim. A writer in the American Agriiculturist offers the following suggestions, by obedience to which the art of swimming may be readily acquired. by means of a swimming-board. This sightly evidences of impure blood is the safest method possible. If corks are used, they may slip from around the breast down beneath the body, throw- Every farmer should keep a pot of ing the head below the surface, and mixed paint in his workshop, and putting the wearer in danger of drown-should apply it liberally to plows, ing. Some country boys get two wagons, harrows, reapers and all imple bladders and then tie them together with a sort of cord, and use these as supports. They are the most dangerous things possible for a boy to have. The hard service, than used up by useless board is perfectly safe, and one may learn to swim in a very short time by using one. It should be over four feet long, over a foot wide, and two inches, thick, made of soft white pine or cedar. To use it, a boy wades into the water up to his shoulders then, taking hold of the end of the board, he pushes it before him-towards the bank, and not into deeper water-springs forward with his feet, and throws himself flat upon the water. This movement carries him along a few feet. He then draws up both his legs at the same time keeping the knees as far apart as possible, and then strikes out with both feet, not straight backward, but sideways, just as a frog does. The stroke is made slowly, and is repeated again, drawing up the legs slowly and steadily. The board keeps the head above water. When the leg-stroke has been learned, one hand is taken from the the stroke is taken with both hands. This is a very good plan, as it compels the swimmer to keep his hands under the water, which he should always do. By-and-by, the board may be pushed ahead, and the young swimmer may can't you learn to be a little careful, or ed refreshments, with the understand- wrong, the perpetration of murder or swim after it, slways keeping it within else wait till they stop the car? But no ing that it was not the banquet of which robbery becomes a crime. At Jaffa, it reach. When a number of boys go to -you won't do it, of course, and you'll we expected to partake in state later, swim, they should always have two or keep right on till some day you'll break but merely to revive us after our jour- with terror; and he gave up to indis-

not much danger of over leating. Dr. that most of the diseases of the world come from over feeding. The truth is that among all decent or evillzed people that the tendency is directly the reverse. In this country, and especially in our large cities, far more are under fed than over feel. Throughout our land thousands die every year over feel. Throughout our land thousands die every year on control of these unfortunates are little children whose parents are too ignorant or two poor to give them what is necessary to sustain life.
