THE STRAIN.

For the month of May, the strain of the Black Hills has been a mystery which the world could not solve. The strain of the Black Hills has been a mystery which the world could not solve. The strain of the Black Hills has been a mystery which the world could not solve.

Romance of an Old Cream Jug.

"Oh, mother," said Ruth, "I should like to get out and get a few apples." "What for?" asked the mother. "I should like to get out and get a few apples." "What for?" asked the mother. "I should like to get out and get a few apples." "What for?" asked the mother.

Our Consumption of Timber.

We have now about 90,000 miles of railroads in this country. The consumption of timber for the construction of these railroads is enormous. The consumption of timber for the construction of these railroads is enormous. The consumption of timber for the construction of these railroads is enormous.

During the month of March, our mining camp in the Black Hills had a mystery which the world could not solve. The mystery was a game of hide-and-seek, a game of hide-and-seek, a game of hide-and-seek. The mystery was a game of hide-and-seek, a game of hide-and-seek, a game of hide-and-seek.

REMOVAL!

The office of the Record has been removed from the rear of the Post Office building to the new building facing the American Hotel, and directly in the rear of Wm. Moore, eq.'s Law Building.

Clarkson N. Potter is coming to the front again in New York as Tilden's manager in that State.

Postmaster General Key and Secretary Sherman are both "tramping" over the Eastern States.

The yellow fever has been spreading fearfully in Mississippi and the exodus from that stricken city continues.

We believe every paper in Philadelphia, without an exception, is demanding that street cars be reduced to five cents.

The President has tendered the office of Secretary of War to ex-Senator Ramsey of Minnesota, and the latter has accepted.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works in Philadelphia are turning out forty-five new locomotives every month, and employed 2,300 hands.

The N. Y. Herald says it looks now as if there were but two candidates for President on the Democratic side, Senator Thurman and Gen. Hancock.

The iron-workers of Philadelphia have within the past week had their wages increased from 20 to 25 per cent. This is the best evidence yet of returning prosperity.

There are so many applicants for the vacant French throne, we would suggest as a leader for the Bonapartists and ultimately for the throne, our Ben Butler, the hero of Fort Fisher.

General Joe Johnston believes that the best version of the Bible says that in the beginning God made the heavens and the earth. He also thinks Senator Thurman is the choice of Virginia for President.

President Hayes has accepted the invitation of the Rev. Dr. Stokes, president of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, to be present at the tenth anniversary of their first religious service, on July 30. Rooms have been engaged for him at the Arlington House.

It will be a wonder if the yellow fever does not break out among the destitute darkies huddled together on the wharf at St. Louis, who have left the south, bound for Kansas, but owing to a lack of funds are unable to get any further and living, God only knows how.

A man died with yellow fever in a tenement house in Brooklyn. He was employed on a steamer which arrived from Havana last week. The man was sick when he landed, and the Brooklyn authorities protest against the carelessness of the quarantine officers for such a loose way of doing business. It of course caused great excitement.

"There will be as fair an election in Mississippi this fall," asserts the "Victoria" (Min.) Herald, "as in any Northern State, and it is a prophet indeed who can tell how the State would go in the Presidential election if the Republican party next year would sever its connection once and forever with the seceders who called themselves Southern Republicans to serve their own ends."

Vineyard Times: The time of paying the assessments on the premium notes of the Millville Mutual Marine and Fire Insurance Co., has been extended to September 1st, with the understanding that the policies remain valid until the assessment is paid, when they will be revived if desired. After that date no payment will be received, and suits will be commenced for the full amount of the premium notes.

State elections will be held this year in the following order: Kentucky, August 24th, State officers and Legislature; California, September 24th, State and judicial officers, four Congressmen and Legislature; Maine, September 24th, State officers and Legislature; Ohio and Iowa, October 7th, State and officers in part and Legislature; Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Wisconsin, November 4th. Governors are elected in all the States named except Mississippi, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

An official arrived at St. Paul, Minn., on Monday from Fort Benton and gave the particulars of General Miles' death. He left Benton a week ago Monday with eight hundred men. He left a guard at Fort Peck and four companies at Musselshell, and started north with the rest. He should have reached the points where Sitting Bull is reported to be hunting buffalo by the last of the week, and unless the Indians have retreated a collision has doubtless already taken place. On the journey down the river the informant learned there was considerable activity among straggling hostiles, who were apparently rapidly concentrating toward Sitting Bull's band.

If a deceased soldier was a pensioner at the time of his death, and if at that time had children under sixteen years old, and left no widow, the children are entitled to arrears of pension under the act. If such soldier left a widow, she is entitled to the pension and they are not. If he was not a pensioner at the time of his death, neither are they entitled to a pension and arrears, even though he may have been. His failure to obtain a pension for himself has both the widow and children. But if, before his death, he had made application for a pension, the widow or children, as the case may be, are entitled to the pension and arrears of his application is granted. In other words, the fact of his death, in itself, does not entitle them to a pension, but after his death, neither wife nor children have the right to obtain a pension.

A French Imperialist...
A Baltimore wage went home drunk, and dived into a bathtub to sober himself, but he forgot to take his head out of the water, and was drowned.

"Baltimore, it is our mission to visit and comfort the sorrowing, at $3 a visit," said one of the speakers at the Burlington (N.J.) Medical Convention.

St. Louis detectives telegraphed a description of a murderer far and wide, but did not search his own house, where he was accidentally discovered.

The Omaha (Nebr.) Bee says it is getting to be quite a "common practice" among Omaha lawyers to draw their revolvers in open court.

Mistress (to new cook): "Now, Sarah, remember if you are strictly honest and economical in your marketing I will give you a few shillings extra per month." New cook: "Thank you, ma'am; I will think it over, and let you know in the evening!"

A woman at Burlington, Vt., was nearly poisoned while washing a pair of trousers which a man had worn while applying Paris green to his potato vines, the poison taking effect through a cut in her hand.

A woman raised to the third power of widowhood has the photographs of her deceased husband, a group, with a vignette of herself, in the center, and underneath is the inscription, "The Lord will provide."

Daniel Moore, of Faxon, Vt., believed Mrs. Pies to be a widow when he married her thirteen years ago, and so did she; but Faxon has returned alive, and the woman has sorrowfully separated from Moore, although she refused to rejoin her first husband.

A Grand Jury at Spartanburg, S. C., has reported that the hanging of a murderer by lynch law was "an outburst of popular indignation which merely anticipated the sentence of the law of the land," and refused to indict anybody concerned in the outrage.

Dr. Cog Fy, a Chinese physician, of San Francisco, at a recent inquest in the case of a Chinaman, was asked, "How many lungs has a man?" He replied, "Seven." Dr. Cog Fy further stated that there are five holes in the human body, and that the function of the heart is "to catch air."

Some queer, crooked things were dug up in the Treasury yard at Washington the other day, and now they don't know what they are, and the signatures of ex-Treasurer Spinner that fell out of the window or a lot of old sofa springs.

The following testimonial of a certain patient medicine speaks for itself: "Dear Sir: Two months ago my wife could scarcely speak. She has taken two bottles of your 'Life Renewer' and now she can't speak at all. Please send me two more bottles. I wouldn't be without it."

Land of Life is the name of a settlement of Adventists at Germania, Wis. Benjamin Hall, formerly a Boston dry goods merchant, is at the head of the community, which is moderately wealthy. The members keep no Sabbath, and believe that Christ's second coming will be in their community.

It is not the quantity eaten that gives strength, life, blood and health. It is the thorough digestion of the food taken, let it be much or little. Therefore, do not stimulate up the stomach to crave food, but rather assist digestion after eating, by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator.

Egypt is going to defy Oriental superstition and number her people. A decree has appeared sanctioning a census every decade, and the first is to be taken in 1880. The reasons given for this step are noteworthy. It will be of service, says the Minister, for the distribution of taxes, for military conscription, and for the labor due to the State on works of public utility. In a minor degree it is also recommended as useful from a statistical point of view.

The Rev. Henry J. Munson, of Worcester, Mass., after preaching a sermon on the holiness of matrimony, stepped down from the pulpit, and requested Miss Mattie Eaton to come forward. Miss Eaton complied, and the clergyman, to the congregation's astonishment, married himself to her after the Quaker form, each vowing to be faithful to the other.

It is pretty hard to throw off old habits all at once. A Nebraska dealer in agricultural implements "got religion," felt it his duty to point out the way to others, and said to a farmer: "Brother Jones, I will guarantee that if you join our church you will not only find it the best in the market, but it will take you straight through without any further inventory. Give it a trial, and if not satisfactory I will take back your religion and refund your money."

There was a time when the standard of smoking tobacco was maintained, even after the brand became popular; but these days are gone by. It is a new kind of come out, and it is splendid. It is actually pure, and is advertised on fences and rocks and in patent medicine almanacs. Every one rushes for it, and all acknowledge its fine flavor. It is at this time the manufacturer begins to work way into it, so that you can either smoke it yourself, or send it to your home, as you desire.

The Baptists of Dover, Me., were without a pastor. A young man came along, introduced himself as the Rev. Mr. Steadman, preached a few trial sermons, made a most favorable impression, and was personally engaged. His soon married a daughter, and his remarkably fine sermons sustained his popularity, although his wife and others observed that he was a little inclined to flirt with the girls. But the church is now agitated by the discovery that his sermons have all been stolen from the Rev. Dr. Storrs' works, and that he is no ordained clergyman.

Baron Huddleston, an eminent English Judge, recently took occasion to say from the bench that it was an undoubted fact that a woman told a lie very much better than did a man, and with very much better effect. It was a remarkable circumstance that when a woman was determined to say what was untrue she said it in a much better way than a man. Whether this was due to a man feeling that his dignity was to a certain extent offended by recourse to untruth he did not know; that was a metaphysical question into which he would not enter; that it was certain that a woman told a story much more logically, and, if it was untrue, held to it much more pertinaciously, and with much more the appearance of truth, than a man could.

"Have you any objects of interest in the vicinity?" a tourist asked the Washington man. "I have, I have," replied the other, "but I can't give you any more than you. It's a pretty place, and it's down in the back part, having interest like horse races or a sundial place."

Little Benny's Little Flakes.—Little Benny sat down to write to his grandmother. He thought it was always summer in the country. It was the middle of April, and it snowed the very next day after he wrote.

Benny stood at the window watching the large flakes of snow fall down. The lightning-bolts of the gales of wind came and all over the little twigs and boughs of the shrubbery and trees, and he "moaned," because he wanted to go out and play. He thought he would go fishing when it had snowed.

Then he wished he had brought his sleigh and his skis.

"If only I had done thinking about that, out came the sun, which so surprised the large downy snow-flakes that every one of them ran away and disappeared."

Those which could, run right down into the ground, to come up flowers by-and-by, and some which flew up into the air, and the rest of them would not get into the ground, few led up into the sky to come down in showers "which bring forth May-flowers and tulips and crocuses."

So Benny did not after all cry about the snow.

After the snow had all gone, Benny had his rubber boots and warm mittens; and his Aunt Gertrude bent a pin into a fish-hook and hung them to the end of a thread, and fastened that to the end of the stick, and he started off alone to fish in a little shallow brook near by.

If there had been any other children in the family, grandmother thought they would have gone too, but there weren't, and in a few minutes Benny had to go alone.

In a very short time he came back, and he brought with him a whole lot of long fishes, but there were some little round ones, and that was the best kind, and he wanted grandmother's new tin water bucket.

When he returned the next time, he had a lot of little black "pollywogs," and he had held the dipper so tight to his hand that the little black things slopped and slopped, all down his clothes. Aunt Gerty never scolded him one bit, but put on dry clothes, and asked him to go out and catch some more, and to put on "little round black fish" in.

They seemed to like their new home, for they wriggled about, never stopping to rest, and they were very lively and larger, and eating more and more.

After about four weeks' time, they all had each two tiny fore feet or legs, and they were all so big that they had ears and legs made their appearance.

In a few more days they had long tails, which had been to each a rudiment of a tail, and they were all so beautiful little frogs and toads, not much larger than the end of his thumb.

Some of them died in a few days, and Aunt Gerty said, "Why, because they were not big enough to live out of water; so he built a beautiful little bridge above a pile of stones right in the garden, and the little toads lived on the bridge and stuck, but the frogs lived in both places.

The days had grown warm and sunny, and Benny had to go out and play, and he wanted to keep his little family so unexpectedly cast upon his care, so he took them back to the brook.

The green toads were fine large frogs before the summer was over, and croaked equal to the best.

The toads hopped back to the garden, and Aunt Gerty's care and kindness by eating up all the bugs and insects which would otherwise have been troublesome.

The Amicable Roosters.—Johnny Banks is a small lad in size, but his capacity for unadulterated mischief is of great magnitude. A neighbor called one day to see him, and he was with a very pretty woman and their conversation turned upon chickens. Mrs. Banks (Johnny's ma) remarked how amiable and friendly the roosters were. "They never had a fight since they were hatched," said she, "it's a real pleasure for them to lead a peaceful life."

Johnny's eyes sparkled with anticipated fun; he sauntered into the yard, caught one of the roosters and placed a collar of straw round its neck, and he put up his feathers by the process as if he meant to fight, the collar keeping the feathers erect. The other roosters came out to see what was to let them run. The next instant the two life-long friends, as if to give the lie to their mistress, were exerting the same energy, and suddenly the endeavor to annihilate each other, while Johnny went in and told his ma that some strange roosters were in the yard fighting like man and boy. "You can't out, away," his mother ran to chase them away; when she came nearer, however, she exclaimed:

"Johnny, what are our two roosters? What on earth has come over them to get to fighting?"

"Dunno, guess they felt like it," replied Johnny, in a saucy tone. Viewing their frantic efforts in apparent amusement. His ma separated them, but they were at it again the next day, and the neighbors came to see, but mentioning one of them in the coop. She returned to the house, but her neighbor's opinion of her was changed, and she never afterwards came next day.

Mrs. Banks was the wifeliest story teller in the neighborhood. That boy has not yet received his merited reward.

Doppels With Lightning Concoctions.—In a gold-fashioned book, of which the title was "The History of the Lightning-rods," the ladies of Paris, France, thought it fashionable as well as safe, to wear a bonnet ornamented at the very top with a thread of bright silver chain, which reached down to the neck, the dress and touched ground. The ladies of the next generation would be so polite as to run along the chain down into the earth, without harming the wearer of the dress. The ladies of the next age, too, umbrellas made of silk were fitted with wires and chains in similar fashion so that the holders might enjoy the lightning without incurring any, I suppose, without getting scared.

It would wonder if the lightning really cared a bit for all their patent apparatus.

Hold on Boys.—Hold on, boys, when you are just ready to swear, or to quarrel.

Hold on to your hand when you are about to scratch, steal or do any improper thing.

Hold on to your foot when you are on the point of kicking, running or jumping.

Hold on to your temper when you are angry, excited, or imposed upon, or others are angry with you.

Hold on to your eyes when you are about to peek your company and invite you to join in their mild, game, or revelry.

Hold on to your good name, as it is worth more than gold or high places or fashionable attire.

Hold on to the truth, for it serves you well, and does you good without hurt.

Hold on to virtue—it is above price to you at all times and in all places.

Hold on to your good character.

Hold on to your life, for it will be your wealth.

The red, blue, and the yellow rays have a distinct and characteristic presence in the yellow and blue spectrum, and the yellow and blue spectrum. It is the influence of the blue rays in the spectrum, in Mr. Gregory's experiments, that the plants will flourish, if chemically active rays, that is, the blue rays, are filtered from the spectrum, and will absorb all the actinic rays, and persons of varicose pustules absorb the yellow medium portion of the spectrum, and the corrosion of the leaves is dead at the base, and thus leaves are dreaded permanent "pitting."

A water-level indicator has been introduced by the Kensington New Waterworks, England, that serves to show the engine-house the level of the water in the reservoir, which is a long distance away. No one may stand at the engine-house responsible for automatically announcing the condition of large rivers, etc. The indicator has two tubes, which come blind down depending upon the rise and fall of the water to be registered, and a hand on the dial points to that division which denotes the height of the reservoir. A single line of telegraph wire communicates between the indicator in the engine-house and the apparatus at the reservoir. This apparatus is so constructed that every foot of rise or fall of the water one pole of the battery is brought for a certain space of time, and the current from the battery, actuating the indicator, causes the hand to move to that required position. Around the opposite pole of the battery connects with the line, and this is made to make good contact with the apparatus at the reservoir. The apparatus at the reservoir is controlled by an ordinary float and weight placed in the water. A modification of the apparatus is also provided with advantage by the Signal Service.

Cleaning out Torpedoes.—It is known that some torpedoes of from 100 to 100 pounds will ignite one another if thrown into ten feet of water, at intervals of 300 feet, when one or two are exploded. Gun-locks and torpedoes are considered somewhat less sensitive. It is upon this fact of the communication of ignition from torpedo to torpedo that the method of clearing a minefield of torpedoes is based. A plan adopted, taking along a bundle of insulated electric wires, starts from a vessel near the place where the torpedoes are to be laid. Near the first torpedo a charge of dynamite or gunpowder, connected to the electric wire, is dropped from the vessel, whereby the charge is exploded with the effect of discharging the submarine explosives in its vicinity. The torpedoes are retained with regard to the influence of depth of water, character of explosives, etc., upon such contaminating.

Plaster of Paris.—Plaster of Paris makes it so easy to set very quickly by mixing it in warm water to which a little sulphate of potash has been added. Plaster of Paris casts, soaked in water, paraffin, oil, or turpentine, or other liquid, may be rendered very hard and tough by soaking them in warm glue solution. Small thoroughly saturated articles may be effectively plastered of Paris mixed with equal parts of powdered pumice stone makes a fine mould for casting figures of models, and articles to be soldered or brazed. Casts of plaster of Paris may be made to imitate fine bronzes by giving them a coat of dry applying a coat of mastic varnish, and dusting on the bronze powder when the mastic varnish becomes sticky. Small models may be effectively stopped with broken glass and plaster of Paris. The best method of mixing plaster of Paris is to sprinkle it into a bowl containing more water than is required for the batter; when the plaster settles pour off the surplus water and stir carefully. Air bubbles are avoided in this way.

Effects of Quinine on the Hearing.—It is a well known fact to medical men that there exists a great predilection among a large number of patients suffering from malaria, the idea being very prevalent that a prolonged use of it not only effects the hearing, but (to use the common expression) "cures the ears." As regards the former belief, Dr. Boosa, of New York, has recently been collecting and examining the evidence as to whether quinine does cause deafness. He concludes that in some cases there really is a permanent nervous affection of the ear produced which justifies the opinion that quinine can do harm. In many cases he has generally discredited this, and ascribed the notion to prejudice.

The Electric Light.—As is often the case with new theories, those in relation to the electric lights are treading on one another's heels. A late invention consists mainly in placing the incandescent globe in a gas-tight envelope filled with nitrogen gas, which prevents their oxidation and therefore their consumption. Experiments, it is claimed, have demonstrated the utility of this adaptation.

A Plague of Locusts.

The Georgian town of Jellizwot, near Tiflis has suffered a plague of locusts almost as bad as that which afflicted Egypt in the days of Moses. On the 29th of August insects invaded the country in such numbers that the merchants had to shut up their shops, and walking about the streets was exceedingly difficult. The Russian authorities ordered the inhabitants to make a united effort to kill the pests, but the generous people refused, believing it vain to destroy a locust, until the authorities threatened to punish the householders who failed to deliver daily a certain weight of dead locusts. The canals were filled with locusts, so that water for drinking and washing could only be obtained by straining. The houses swarmed with the creatures, and many families went a week without bread because their ovens were continually filled with them. They were vain to drive them out. They were driven back by candles and burning incense. The Armenian priests regarded the plague as a visitation of God, and brought from a neighboring town the bones of Jacob, which they carried
