Mr. Strong, standing near the coffin, offered up a fervent prayer, during which a representative of the Flowery Kingdom stood near scattering tribute money, pieces of thin brown paper about four inches long with Chinese characters cut in them. The prayer ended, the casket was carried out by four laboring men and placed in an open wagon drawn by one horse. and covered with a blanket. A tin pan, containing burning incense was placed in the vehicle in front of the coffin. Following the wagon was a man carrying a large market basket containing brown paper packages, and man carrying strips of paper, which he strewed all the way to the grave. Behind him came the rest of the Shinamen and then the visitors. Not a word was said during the march to the grave, which was at the top of the hill spoken of above, and on reaching the place of interment, where there are already several of these people builed, the four bearers lifted the coffin from the wagon and silently lowered it into the grave. Rev. Mr. Strong then made a brief prayer, committing the body to
