Charles H. Stilly tramped into Reading, Pa., a few days ago, hungry, ragged, and disconsolate. A year before, he had made the people of that city stare at his ways of squandering $20,000 that had been left to him. On the latter visit he begged a meal st the hotel in which he had once occupied the finest apartments, and slept in a barn where he had previously kept his horses.

A Chicago paper has been examining the premium lists for the State Agricultural Fair this year and makes some curious discoveries. For example, the highest premium for horses is twenty-five dollars, while thirty-five is offered for the best rabbits; the best exhibit of wheat is promised ten dollars, while fifty dollars is offered for the best collection of fossils. With such premiums as freshment. these there doesn't seem to be any reason
