Her Love or her Life.

The road that led from the small railway station to the business part of the pleasant town wound for nearly a mile along the banks of a picturesque stream, across s wooden bridge, and up a broad avenue flanked by handsome villas.

Just across that bridge, at the close of dark, sunless day, I stopped before the tall gate of a plain black iron fence, and scrutinized interestedly the grounds and house within the rather grim enclosure. The place attracted me irresistably, although the building was decidedly not a miracle of architectural art, nor were the great shiverng pines behind it suggestive of anything particularly cheery. The low polygonal structure was of brick, red as jasper, heavy rimson curtains shaded the quaint windows, and the only door visible was broad

The Rougon-Macquart Family; or, La

Fortune des Rougon, by Emile Zola, author of "L'Assommoir," "Aelene," and "The Abbe's Temptation," and translated from the French by John Stirling, is published by T. B. Peterson & Brothers, Philadelphia. Truth alone in the eyes of Monsieur Zola is great—and real Art is Truth. In "The Rougon-Macquart Family" he is quite as bold as Homer in his delineations—he disguises nothing, and shows the human heart n all its nakedness, and represents broad generalities rather than individual peculiarities. He has an absolute passion for anal-Advice to the Young: Eat oysters only in ysis, and depicts in each individual the senthe months that have an "1" in their names, timents, desires and passions—all those huand drink whisky only in the mouths that nran manifestations in short, which take the name either of virtues or vices, for ,he describes people as he sees them, but not through jaundiced eyes; he sets down then passions and their weaknesses, their petty jealousies, and small rivalries; his heart is as tender as his pen is forcible, while his mation will be given by love of Nature is apparent in every chapter VAL, P. HOFFMANN; he.writes, and his descriptions of scenery and flowers are as minute as his dissection of the human heart. No reader, however careless, can peruse unmoved in this work the pathetic story of Silvere and Miette, which is as absolutely tender and touching as anything known in modern fiction. Their innocent love and the terrible tragedy by which it is crowned; the vivid description of the Coup d'Etat in the Provinces, where the cause of liberty struggled for two weeks, instead of dying as in Paris at the end of forty-eight hours, form a series of dramatic FROM pictures, which the translator commends to his readers, with the conviction that they on taking up the book, will not lay it down until finished, for no one can deny that Zola has painted his pictures in colors which can never fade. The Rougon-Macquart Family is published in a large square duodecimo volume, paper cover, price 75 cents. Among the claims against the estate Mrs. Elizabeth Vassels, of New Bedford, Mass., was that of Nathaniel Hammond for "twenty-four visits, with medical advice," at $1 each and "nine gold pills" at $7 for the lot. The fact that Mr. Hammond is not a physician led the administrator to refuse payment, which brought on a lawsuit. Mr. Hammond testified that he doctored Mrs. Vassels at her urgent request, and prescribed pills made of solid gold, nine of which actual ly cost $7 to make. He thought they would strengthen the patient. If iron was a good tonic, why should not a more precious metal be better? Mr. Hammond's account-book was put in evidence. It was an almanac, in out of the State. Now, will any sane man say that I did wrong? Now, suppose I had kept them for the abree months and then turned them out, in all probability in three days Justice Hoover would limit them up and have them committed for three months more, at another expense of from fifty to sixty dollars. Now, this is all bosh and the man that will get in such a stew over this matter must be afflicted with a mild form of insanity. Now, Mr. Hoover, it is certainly an outrage that those Freeholders should have anything to est at the county's expense, especially when the enormous salary paid them is taken into consideration. They have to neglect their own business and travel from fifteen to twenty-five miles to attend to the business of the county and receive two dollars per day!
