WRITING LEFT AND RIGHT.

Here is an amusing attle deception that you may play upon unsuspecting friends. Perhaps it would be more correct to say that they play the trick on themselves -- which makes it all the funnier. You tell them what to do and it is not your fault that they don't know how to do it. Give your victim a sup of stout writing paper and the stud of a soft, black lead pencil, not very sharp. Ask them to shut his eyes and lay the paper on his forehead, holding it there with the thumb and forefinger of his left hand, one pressed to each temple, while the palm of the hand covers his eyes. The next thing he has to do is to write his name on the paper with the pencil held in his right hand . Writing is not easy under such conditions, so no one will expect the signature to be very pretty or very legible, but everybody,

The American woman is renowned in Europe for her nasal twang. And not only this, but there is another fault to be overcome. Whether it is a result of the everlasting hurry that the modern woman seems to be doomed to endure, or from some cause unknown to science, the average woman talks as rapidly as she does other things. Her words are apt to fall over each other in their eagerness to convey what she wishes to express, until it is a wonder that the listener is able to understand their import.

If women could only be brought to unferstand how much import is gained deliberate, onlet aneech by this is meant h hesitating, halting delivry; but a quiet, gentle voice-the vords well chosen, the accents clear but soft. the head of the firm, being ushered into a glass counting house, where sat two men, one old, one young.

"I made bold to call about my sick daughter, sir, as works here," Simon. began, addressing the elder of the two. "She's mortal bad to-day-not as 1 think she's really worse, but she's worrying because the month you gave her to get well is up and she's not fit to come back. The doctor says it would do her a power of good if you could ease her mind by letting her know that you'd kindly keep the place open for her a bit longer,'

The old driver delivered himself nervously, for he had been warned by his sick daughter that the appeal would be useless. Mr. Boyston, Sr., was known as a hard man, devoid of compassion, except when he could deftly twist it into an advertisement. His answer showed that he was not going back on his reputation.

"I shall do nothing of the sort," he said harshly. "Miss Merridew is not so valuable to the firm that I can afford to play pranks with my rules on her behalf."

"It will kill my child, sir," answered Simon with puckered brow. "Nonsense," returned the merchant. "She's not the girl to die for lack of
