at the Play Had a Hard Time Trying to Accomplish It. She was pretty, but rather unduly plumy yet no one would have dared to or even to study her genfigure too critically, for she was also middle-aged and dignified and sufficiently self-posed to come to the theater alone at night, relates the Philadelphia Record. Her seat, in the middle of the row, was the only one left ruand people sitting there viewed her with some anxiety when they obscryed

She managed, however, to squeeze through without doing too much walking on other people's feet, and despite the impediments of a fan, an umbrella, an opera glass bag, a program and a pair of gloves. When she sunk into her seat her sigh of relief was echowl by all the people whom she had passed, and the men in the seat on each side of her promptly took their cloows off the chair arms to give her all the room possible for the wielding out her having removed her hat a man put both arms up and begun to tug at a hat pin. Slowly some of the things on her lap began to slide off and the opera glass bag, with its contents, reached the floor before she made a grab for them. It was clearly impossible for her to stoop over straight in front of her. The men at each side. each desiring to get the bag, went through a little pantomime of the Gaston and Alphonse variety with each other, and then at the same instant a dive for the glasses. Their heads came together in a resounding whack just above the large lady's knees, but one of them arose with the glasses in his hand and gave them to her.

Then she bunched all her things in a wad on her lap and started to work on the refractory hatpin again. It balked at first, but finally came with such a rush that her elbow went fairly and squarely into the eye of the man on her right. She put the pin in her mouth with the point toward the man on her left side and then her neighbors at sides and rear saw, with rising perturbation, that there were at least two hatpins still to come.

The man behind leaned over and said: "Pray don't trouble yourself further, madam. It's of no consequence. I can see very well as it is."

The man on her left dodged wildly for fear she should turn her head in his direction with the long pin in her mouth pointed toward him. But she did not turn. She went at the pin again. Things slid off her lap, but neither of the men at her side dared to reach for them. She tugged and tugged and the man behind her begged ther again to leave the hat where it was. She paid no attention, however, and at last the head covering came off. She was flushed and hot and her half guaint of currents the searching sheet. in British Columbia. Daring the superstitions of the naives and braving the dangers of an unexplored cavern at Ross Peak, Britsh Columbia, two Philadelphia women, Miss Elizabeth Waln Vaux. a daughter of the late Mayor Vaux, and Mrs. Charles Schaffer, had an exclting experience. The result of their courage is a more extended knowledge of the depths of the recess in the rocks, which is locally known as Dutchman's cave, says the Philadelphia Bulletin. One of the most wonderful things they saw was a stream which had the appearance of blood. In the dim light of the candles which they carried the women were unable to determine if the water itself were colored or the red effect was given by it flowing over

The trip was fraught with many venture more than a hundred feet from the mouth of the cave. It is from the mouth of the cave. It is their belief that the place is inhabited by ogres and creatures of magic by ogres and creatures of magic better now. We all think everything fred and he better now. No one would accompany them, but it was arranged that if they did not return that night a searching party was to be sent for them. After making their way along a narow ledge for about a hundred yards from the mouth of the cavern, the explorers found themselves in a large grotto, the roof hung with beautiful stalactites, which glittered in the flickering light of the candles, which gave the scene a weird aspect. The floor was covered with a veritable forest of stalagmites that arose like gigantic columns, many of them joining the

It was through this cavern that the blood-red stream runs. The ladies walked along the edge of the water until it narrowed so that they could scarcely squeeze through. At the other end was another cavern, larger and more magnificent then the first. Their candles were burning low by this time and they had to hurry back to the entrance, the last candle sputtering outjust as they reached the beginning of the incline leading to the entrance. The last stage of the trip was made in total darkness, but the venturesome tourists, reached the outside world safely, and astonished the natives with accounts of what they had seen gan be made a blank by electricity, 1 Library Hait Thursday eventul. nistered in large enough doses, there is no doubt about it.

THE statisticians futorm us that the cost of living is higher now than it has been for twenty-two years. But dire this count in the Christmas purphases?

THE expenses of the KOOSEVELT Prest dential campaign being under ductions most of the people of the United States will agree that, whatever it cost, we go our money's worth.

Wire the characteristic rush and ros of the twentieth century, the might steam locomotive appears to be driving rapidly to its own doom.

Electricity, that mysterious but poten tial agency to which man has hitched the chariot wheels of commerce, is the modern David that blds fair to vanquish and banish the GOLIATH of steam from the rails.

While many years from now, perhaps, the steam engine may be seen careering upon long journeys, it is thought that its place in suburban and interurban passenger and freight hauls will soon be usurped by the electric motor.

Aiready some of the largest traffi: handling roads in the country are taking up the motor for suburban service and terminal work. Leading in this innova tion, the "Railway World" informs us, are the New York Central, the New Haven and Hartford, and the Long Leland Railroads, which are electrifying their roads for some distance out of the metropolis. . .

And now comes the great Pennsylvani Railroad, handling vast suburban troffis with the use of electric motors, on i West Jersey and Jesshore lines instead of steam and May's Lunding is to become a benediciary by its adoption.

Within ten years, eminent railway anthorities believe, steam locomotive will be used only in long runs across th country, while shorter hauls will o made almost exclusively by electricity Speed the day for the electric motors

A POSTAL-CARD PARTY.

Suggestion for Collectors of the Popular Picture Postal. Nearly every town of any size has ts own individual postals, says the Sait Lake Tribune, and in this day and generation every one is the recipient of many of these charming reminders of travel, both at home and abroad. Something original in the way of entertaining for either dinner, luncheon or 'afternoon" was given by the hostess when she planned this affair. The rooms were decorated with postals fastened together by holes punched in the corners and ribbons runthrough them. Panels were formed in this way and made a most effective decoration. Cards were stuck in picture frames, placed on tables, on the mantels and every spot where they would attract attention. These cards were topics of conversation which was very animated. "Do you remember? and "That reminds me," were expres sions heard on all sides Invitations were sent out ouvenir cards. Then for "place cards at this luncheon the houtess had ed cards to each guest, ten in number addressing them to her own mimber. By these they found places at the table. Mach ground
