CONVICT NO. 9.510. IR many years Newton C. Dougherty was & ading, prosperous and honored citizen of Peoria. His work in his chosen profession of edincator was widely applauded and received not only local but national recognition. Through a combination of talents not often seen in an educator he gained personal wealth as well a professional honor. Yet to-day Newton C. Dougherty has no longer wealth, nor honor, nor even a name in the regard of the public orof his fellow men about him. He is merely tonvict No. 9.510 in the Illinois State prison at Jollet

Why has Newton C. Dongherty fallen so fast, so fat, and so low? The answer is as old as human life on the earth, and so long as men forget that manheod is more than riches that answer must still be given, Newton C. Dougherty was in baste to be not merely honorably prosperous, but juxuriously rich. That he might get money-much money-he set his honor as a man and his well-earned fame as an educator upon the cast of the dice in the game for wealth. He did this again and again and again. For a long ime he won and his sin was hid. But there came a day when he lost again and again, and his sin could no longer be hid. It burst forth to alarm the guilty and astound the

And almost in a day wealth, reputation, the respect of men, professional honor and renown were gone and lost forever. Because he forgot that the wages of sin is death, forever. Because he forgot that the wages of sin is dealh, in one day Newton C. Dougherty was forced to draw all the arrears of those wages to the uttermost penny. That is why Newton C. Dougherty has fallen so fast, so far and so low. That is why Newton G. Dougherty has far and so low. That is why Newton G. Dougherty has the Dougherty has fallen so fast, so far and so low. bring as fortunate results as area the case with Handel, the great musician. His extraordinary resolutioned as a boy doubtless led to that great success which srowned the later years of his ife. When he was some seven years of age his father had occasion to visit son by a former wife, who was valet to the Duke of Sain Weissenfold. Traveling in those days -200 years age was fadious and expensive, and Dr. Handel did not desire to be delayed with the care of an "infant" during a purpey which the demands of a remible protession would probably aice as short as possible.

But the future giant of music would ro. He cried, beliowed and eventually ran along the road after the vehicle anti the tender feelings of the doctor could refuse no longer. In an evil moment for his jurisprudence scheme he took the child with him.

No somer did the little fellow reach the ducal residence than he gave rein te his fancy on the keys of every instrument that he found open. The remarkable music that came from the finger tips of the child's hands was goon the object of wonder and conversation throughout the palace, and all this was intensified when he secured an opportunity of touching the keys of the chancel organ within the hearing of the duke. Such a throb started from that chapel organ when little Handel's tendriled ingers chose the keys, and the soul of disaster (which would have been territhe duke was touched as it never had ble if it had occurred) were none too been touched before-truly a momensoon. This was merely an episode withtous occurrence, since but for it Handel's sacred music might never have in the everyday duty of an engineer and carries its own warning. been written.

The duke's attention having been arrested, he inquired of Dr. Handel concerning the child's future, and eventually succeeded in placing him for three. years' study under Zachau, the organist of Halle cathedral. This was the beginning of Handel's musical education.

I. W. SHAWER, Publicher. BATURDAY. DECEMBED Tun best and suress way of making many friends and of attaining to that personal popularies which some of us may attompt te disparage, but which all of us must scoretly desire, is by cultivat ing a sprit disposition and by carefully his our private treables out of the molis view It was THACRESY who said long ago that the world is a looking-glass in which every man may see his own re flection. To those who gase into it with a smile it smiles back, but it has only blank looks for those who frown.

There are people whose presence is kind of benediction simply because in irradiates a sense of helpfulness, of con fidence, of encouragement, of good eheer It is not what they do or what they asy It is non-morely, it may not be at all that they are helpful and sympochetic They diffuse around them av atmosphere of obserfulness and ware, not by any conscious act word, but as the su shines, berause they can't help it because mey are constituted that way. When these mople look into the mirror to which THATKERAY compared the world they are sure to see a welcoming smile renected there. It is their own, although they may not recognize it, for we all get out of life pretty much what we put into it

Unfortunately, it is not given to every one to exert this happy influence. The ca pacity for doing so is largely a matter of temperament. There are people filled with good will, ready and anxious to be a comfort and an aid to those around them. who lack in some way the faculty of expression and who are unable to communicate with any effectiveness the friendliness of their sentiments. They mean well as anyone, but there is that in The collation was superb and greatly enjoyed their disposition which rather repels than by all. attracts, and so it is their misfortune to be misinterpreted and misjudged and to be regarded as obnoxious by many whon they would like to please.

Yet while a sunny disposition is a gift of nature and one of the most precious the habit of cheerfulness admits of cultivation if there be first the willing mind. All of us have something which calls to: gratitude, and a steadfast determination to look on the bright side of life, and especially to ignore its petty annoyances THE PERSON AND VIDE

No Race Suicide in Jersey.

Interesting statistics and some radical recommendations are contained in the anrus report of the State Board of Health, which was submitted to Governor Stokes Tuesday. The rate of marriages and deaths in the Sate is reported as increasing with the growth of the population, but the birth reports indicate a failing off.

The facts however, are to the effect that there is no race suicide in Jersey. The fault lies with doctors who fail to report births to proper authorities. It is necessary to repor deaths to secure burial permits and minister seem to be fairly careful in the reporting of marriages

The State Board of Health suggests that prosecution be resorted to in an effort 10 compel the doctors to be equally careful and accurate in the reporting of birthe. Acourding to the report there has been a Continued increase of marriage per one sound of the voice that is still." thousand inhabitants for the years from 1898 to 1993.
