ERTOULING: Women have been for many years in the habit of smuggling least, silks, &c., but it is only reces ly that men have tried the smuggling of wearing apparel. The famous London tallor, Pools, made an arrangement with the officers of a supard stanmer, to get goods through without paying dutter, and then sent a man here to senver for nedere. Without paying duly be eduld midurell the Bloadway tallors, and perios the swells never consider them selves dresed till they have a pair of Poole" papteleone. Liquors come down Lake Champlain and over the great lakes, and find their way to city, duty free. It is an immensely profide business, and, so long is our frontier, atmded with yory little risk.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS. The National Woman's Rights Association Lits annual meeting in the city. Thursday These meetings used to be very large enthusiastic, out the interest in them has captibly declined. This year Masonic hall not one-quarter full, and it was hard work ye up any steam at all. Icabella Beecher was there, and so, likewise, Blake, and in, Lotier and the regular stand-bys. were all more angular, more shrewish. petulant and more waspish than ever-The smal papers were read, and the usual resolution adopted, and the amoient women dispersed, probably never to meet ugain. Ten years ago the same women were petted and made much of, and they don't understand why they are not new. They are better developed, intellectually, than they were, and better fitted to grapple with grave design. The poor old girls don't seem to undergrave, but all this is precisely what is not wanted. Men don't want women who can "grapple" with questions great or small, or have any especial amount of intellectuality. And then they must remember t bat a pretty little easy read by a girlish woman, with round figure, nice hair and bright eyes, is quite another, thing from a learned speech delivered by an angular female, with no hair to speak of, and with eyes behind severe glasses. They must remember they are older than they were ten years ago. If the suffragiets expect to again get the public ear, they must take it through the eye, and put pretty young women on the platform.

THE GAMBARES

Are having a bad time of it in New York. The law against pool-selling is being rigidly enforced, and Sepator Morrisey, Mr. Tilden's friend, has moved his estublishment to Jersey of action. City, just across the river, and the others baye followed suit. All the pool houses have gone over there, much to the delight of the ferries for that part of the gambling fraternity whose business is betting on horses and base-ball, go over every night. THE KND OF TI-PETISM. Tilden has announced that he will not con est the claim of President Rayes to his office because it would be likely to denob the country in gore." The fact is, the old man has had the best lawyers of the country at work ever since the decision against him, to ascer tala if there was not some hole through which he might crawl into the Presidency. Last week they announced to him that Hayes' claim was imprognable, and that he might as well throw up the sponge. And he goes it tearfully, but, Tilden-like, tries to make some capital in the doing of it. If it cost the lives of fifty thousand men to get the Presidency, Tilden would have sperificed them without a wink. The country is to be congratulated that the law puts the position in the hands of the right man. Tilden's expenses for something over a year and a half have averaged over $6,000 a day. He has bled freely, and the host of im pecunions politicians are morry that he has finally abandoned the contest. As enormous as is the amount he has epent, the old man has plenty left. Railroad wrecking his been a profitable business to him.

able explanation. There used to be well known here a brace of judges of prominence in the earlier history of the State. They were Judge H. and Judge S. Judge H. was gotten up after the pattern of a broomhandle, and Judge S. bore a corporosity of decided corpulence. One day, when spending a leisure hour together, the conversation of the two gentlemen turned upon the subject of transmigration of souls. Judge S., who was a most incorrigible joker, remarked: "Judge H., do you want me to tell you my opinion of what will become of you if that doctrine is true?"

"I should be very glad to hear your opinion," replied Judge H.

were speaking together about the matter of a supply. Judge S. overheard, and suggested: "I know where you can get a minister and have a deacon thrown in." Brother A, who was also something of wag, replied: "That's nothing; if you go down to Andover, where they have a mill, they'll give you a minister and throw in two deacons."

Brother B, a more serious man, dis-liking to hear Brother A speak so lightly, suggested: "Don't you think, Judge S., it would be a good thing if Brother A should go down and go through the mill?"

A special correspondent of the New York Herald visited the pententiary at and Jacob Hamblin went in and muraccorded an interview? Salt Lake City, Utah, and had a long in dered the wounded. While this was tive of the Philadelphias terview with one of the prisoners, called Idaho Bill, who claims to be one of the seventeen juvenile survivors of the Mountain Meadow massacre, for taking a leading part in which, it will be remembered. John D. Lee was recently executed. The convict produced letters strongly implicating Brigham Young in the massacre of the immigrants, and andr and his subsequent life in Lee's honsehold:

father and mother, mmed Thatcher Fancher nor Francher, as Lee got it and as they've got it in the newspapers—lived in Kansas City, Mo., just across the Missouri river from Kansas. So did the Huffs and the Burroughs family, who belonged to the train. The rest o the families who made up the train were mostly from Arkansas. They left there in 1856, came to Kansas and stayed until 1857. when the train was fitted out and started for the West. The permanent outfits of all the families were bought in Kansas, at Fort Leavenworth, Lawrence, Topeka and one or two other places, and, I believe, the animals, wagons and other for the train were mostly purchased in Kansas, too. I was then a poy of from seven to seven and a half years. L'don't recollect much, except a the massacre—what occurred just before it and for a long while afterward—is as clear as a bell, for several reasons. We were all in a fight for a good many days before the killing, and after it was over I heard it talked about, time and again, as

I will explain to you.

When the Indians under John D. Lee began to attack father's train he ordered the wagons to be made into a V-shaped · From this corral the immigrants defended themselves. Two days after the attack began I (my name was Charley-Thatcher, you must remember) and another little boy named Huff were sent out to see Lee and ask him to get the Indians to draw off. We were among the youngest children, but we were both considered pretty bright, and father took the risk of sending us because he thought we would deliver the message correctly and that even the savages would not kill such little fellows as we were. We saw Lee. He told us to go back, saying "the Indians were mad and he could do nothing with them." The next night was the third since we had gone into the corral. A young Kentuckian named Aden, about twenty-two years old, and a German named Huff (a big brother of the little boy that I went out with) started after dark for Cedar City to procure assistance. Aden was killed—by Joseph White and Stewart, as it afterward turned out-and the German, Huff, was wounded by another white man, but got back into the corral early next day. When the fifth day came we hoisted a flag of truce; it was stuck upon a knoll and stood there two days afterward. Nobody outside paid attention to it at first, they kept poting at us all the time. On the seventh day, however, a flag of truce came toward the corral; it was carried by a man named Bateman, although John D. Lee (whom neither father nor anybody lse inside the corral knew up to that time by his real name) walked in advance and was evidently the spokesman. Father went toward Lee and met him, and Lee sat down on a wagon tongue and began to talk. Lee said: "I want you to surrender up your arms and pile them and your children into some wound inside the corral. By father's direction some of the men got all the rifles together and put them into one wagon. Into the same wagon the five wounded men that were with us were also lifted. The women were going around collecting the children. In the meantime the ascame into the corral from Highee; crying out: "Hurry up, Brother Lee, hurry! The Indiaus are mad and so is Haight." Finally all us children were got together. I was standing close to my mother when father turned to Lee and said: "Let me kiss my wife and my little children.

Lee answered: "Be quick, then." Father kissed grandmother first, then mother, then me, then my little sister Mary. After that mother said to Lee: "For heaven's sake, Mister, whoever you are-I don't know your name-save my children, for I know we are all going to be killed."

Lee was very much flustered at this, but he told mother, as we were going out to get into the wagon; "The chil-

I saw Joel White strike a man in the front wagon, and he dered the wounded. But the wounded in the front wagon had been done for in about half aminute and the white men and Indians started back toward the immigrants, where there was a good deal of shooting going on. I couldn't see much of that. and I only recollect one thing—I saw my father on a knoll, with his hat off, running up toward our wagons. I suppose that was just before he was killed, for the teams went on, and when I looked around again I didn't see him.

I see by the papers we are to have an investigation earn where the money goes that the Sheriff collects. By the official records as kept by Mr. C. Rape, that for the year ending May 18th, 1875, when the Co. Collector, made his annual statement to the Board of Freeholders, hat the costs, fines and forfeited recognisances on criminal prosecutions for that year, amounts to about $2, 356.23; this amount includes 38 bills of cost, which left 31 bills to collect, which I have no personal knowledge of. At the present time our county collector reports that the sheriff paid him but $243.00 as costs and fines for that year, which is not half he collected on seven bills of cost. The sheriff will not pay the Justice nor the witnesses their fees, and if he was as successful in collecting the costs on the balance of the bills as on thos I have personal knowledge of, the sheriff must have his hands for the next year. Ou clerk, Mr. Down, was unable to give me the amount of the costs of but three bills of cost, out of the 21 bills of indictment, for the reason he could not find any record of them in the clerk's office.

One of the bills of cost that I have in my possession the defendant has been taxed and paid ten dollars witness feer, when the witness in the case has received bu fifty cents from the sheriff, which leaves $9.50 in his hands as witness fees. Our accomplished and gentle manly clerk, Mr. Down, searched 7-hours and failed to find the records of seven-eighths of one term's proceed ings of our criminal courts; and our experien ty collector, Mr. D. E. Iszard, acknowledged in the presence of Mr. Slape, Mr. Down and myself, that he expected as much, for he had looked himself for different bills of cost and could not find them. Now gentlemen tax-payers of Atlantic county, when such a state of things exist, I agree with friend Regensburg that you are entitled to hear from the other sil heriff has been as successful with all his collection and kept as large a per centage of witness fees as in the case I have reference to, is it any wonder that lie has more stamps than his neighbors? I hope Mr. Bolto will call his committee to meet at Mays Landing, in stead of Egg Harbor City. Then if I should fail to o cupy their time profitably with my grievances, they ca ussist the clerk in hunting up the missing records. Thoreby hangs a tale.

Yours respectfully, IRAAC COLLINS.

TRE-DEAR SIR: Hoing anxious to hasten the investigation, and it being in your power to call the committee together, where The lot by Prof. union, will hold a festive about and whon you see proper, I sent you a note stating that middle of June, for two nights. On the first night I could meet you any day the last of last week, or this no pecuniarily, as I had a large crop of strawb ather, which would take about three weeks, which will lefer action till the latter part of June. When I saw on last, you seemed anxious to call the committee toother at E. H. City. Since that time I have become ary for the sake of truth and justice that the commit tee should meet at Mays Landing, so they can examine oun of the few records that can be found in the clerk's office, which I shall offer as evidence in this investigation. I hope you will not compel me to get copies which is expensive, when the committee can get the original ill of costs to examine, if they meet at May's Landing, Yours respectfully.

England's Impregnable Fortress.

Gibraltar for more than a hundred and seventy years has been in a condition to defy any attack from any quarter. It is a mass of solid gray marble, connected with the southern extremity of Spanish Andalusia by a narrow peninsula which is, entirely commanded by the fortress. This rock—at its highest point—1,439 feet above the level of the sea—is completely honey-combed with batteries, bomb-proofs, and every species of de-bomb-proofs, and every species of de-fensive contrivance. Cannon of the largest caliber frown along its face, steep artillery, and a picked corps of engineers;

and in case of emergency there are accommodations for double this force.

The last and most memorable siege

Gibraltar has endured began in June,

1779; and ended in February, 1783. The combined armies and fleets of France and Spain pounded the impregnable walls in vain for three years and eight months, and then gave up the hopeless task. The British lost 333 killed, 536 from disease, forty-three from desertion, and the wounded numbered 1,008. The cisualties on the other side are not known. Since then there has been no attempt to rob England of her priceless possession. The present strengthening of Gibraltar means that England does not intend to be "caught napping," and that the government does not know how oon this matchless citadel may be needed as a base of active operations in the Mediterranean and the further East.

Louis XIV. threatened to turn the tide-less sea into "a French lake;" Alexander, if he had the opportunity, would gladly make it a Russian lake; but as long as England holds Gibraltar—the key of the
