The Difference.

Two girls were borne in the self-same town On the very same bright day; They laughed and cried in their mothers' arms

In the very self-same way, And both were as pure and innocent As falling tlakes of snow; But one of them lived in the terraced house, And one in the street below.

Two children played in the "elf-same town, And the children both were fair; But one had her curis brushed smooth and round.

The other had tangled hair. Both of the children grew apace. As all our children grow; But one of them lived in a terraced house

Two maidens wrought in the self-same town, And one was wedded and loved; The other saw, through the curtains part. The world where her sister moved,

And one was a smilling, happy bride, The other knew care and woe; For one of them lived in a terraced house, And one in the street below.

Iwo women lay dead in the self-same town,

And one had tender care; The other was left to die alone. On her padiet so thin and bare. One had many to mourn her loss For the other, few tears would flow; For one had lived in the terraced honer,

And one in the street below. If Jesus, who died for rich and poor, In wonderful, holy love, nok both of the sisters in His arms, And carried them up above;

Then all the difference vanished at last, For in heaven none would know Which of them lived in the terraced house, And which in the street below.

'Morley's" Letter From New York.

[PROM OUR OWN PROULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

NEW YORK, Jan. 14, 1880. OUT OF THE DEPTHS.

A year ago I told you of a y purpose to do part from the beaten track of city gossip, and present to your readers an occasional picture of metropolitas lite, and together we have seen several phases of it varied existence during the year. To night a darker aspect of this Protean life present hard upon my thoughts, and I must tell you how and why,

Last New Year's Day will be a memorable one in the history of a femily whose name we will call Maynard. And this was hew it come about. One night during Frank Murphy's fallors at Cooper Lastitute early last winter, a blearen and blosted manetressed in pitiful rags. come to the front, and said: "Yesterday I wan dered into the need day meeting to get warm They were sin ing that sweet hyun, 'Sweet Hour of Prayer' and, semelow, it brough back to use the hope I had lost, the wife and c itdrea I had lost, and the happiness and hope that had GONE OUT OF MY LIPE.

On the platform was Col-I'm who, when J de had finished, went quietly to him saying, "I will find you work to-morrow: meet me here to-morros night; and giving him money enough to carry him over, received Jake's promise to be on hand. Next day the Colonel starte tout to r a mur among his printer friends down town, and the first on the list was one whom we will call Campbell. He listened to Jake's teaching story, while his eyes grew more and more in sty, and before his riend hadreached the point of asking a place for Jake, he slapped the parrator on the knee, and burst

> "SEND ME THAT MAN! I'LL GIVE HIM WORK" An instant later be askied, thoughtfully: "If Jake Milier is well known among vagrant printers, purhaps he is the missing link I have often wished for. There is a man kicking about in the slums of this city whom I have tried to reach; so has his wife, but he runs from us; bo runs from everybody be used to know. Porhops you e'n find and help hun through Jake Mider. Try it, and cell on me for all the money it may require " That night Jake was at his post, and when asked if he ever know a wan named Maynard, said, "re.." "Is he living?" "He was three menths ago; I saw him then, but he was as thin as your care." "Will you find and bring him here to-morrow night?", "I wilt try." Nozt night Jako called the Colonel into the ante-room, and there

The latter visited him at his case, took him out to lunch in all his rage, took him fur her to a tailor and had a suit of clothes charged to the little printer, met him day by day, and saw his slow but steady increase of confidence in himself. He was eleeping at a

Almost the first step was his removal to a more respectable neighborhood. Bo had a wife and child whom be had not seen for many years. The brave fittle woman, in her struggle to educate and maintain her little daughter, had become ticke' agent, telegraph operator and baggage mistress at a little radroad station in New Jersey, and nobly was she fighting her single-handed battle with the world. The bitle girl of eight was an educated accomplished and lovely young lady of eighteen, jost new beginning to teach music and the languages.

Maynard went to church with his new friend the next Sanday, and when the forvice was over his eyes filled up as he drew a long broath and said: "This seems like old times!" his friend did not feel like touching upon his family matters, but waited e ger'y for the reformed man to express himself apon the subject-Cund r after Sunday be sat with the Colonel and water home with him to comper, and only an occasional allusion, was made to the brave little wite out

Heretofors the former had preserved his incognite most zenously, fearing the reformed nan would break and run from him as of old. But now the time come. The Colonel told Maynard he kad found him a much better place in the office of als triend. Campbell, and the question came back quickly: "Isn't he the man who sent you after me?" Still the husbar of these ten years as truly as Dr. Manette had been for cighteen in the North Tower or the Bastile. But cheer up, little woman! Ten years is a long time to stand weeping over an idolized husband's grave. But ten years are no more than ten, and the ceaseless pendulum must one day tick off the last day, the final, hour, the closing minute, the finished second-Talo heart, little fatherless girl! Ten yearhave done in wh for you, but their last bour is to do more for your happiness than all the countless bours of the past have done. "A till, spore man was a passenger on the Z Railroad that New Year's morning; he seemed like a soldier returning from the buter experiences of batte, and forced march, and hospital; he had lost much of sunly vizor, he was carrying the seary of a releatless enemy upon his bosom and across his face-but he was the Husband, he was the Father for all that, and his war with Rum was over. He had ground his enimy be neath his manly and determined heel, and he had come home from that war to stay ! - That man twelve years ag was the honored Superintendent of one of the large Su day Schools of Brooklyn. He was senior partner of my noble little friend "Campbell," in whose suc cessful house he tow is employed, and your correspondent can and does personally vouch for every line of this little story as strictly and a :tiroiy true. Poor Jake A iller's reform la-ted less than a week despite the most strenuous offorts to save him. Rum bad burned all the resolution out of him, and he has disappeared from Printing House Square, I fear forever. Do you wonder that humans mon are LIFTING & MIGHLY PROTEST

They quite win Hannah's heart. She waits upon them untiredly, and con-cocts all sorts of dainty dishes to tempt the invalid's delicate appetite.
"Such a sweet lady she is; and as for im, he's the nicest and handsomes

This is her verdict upon them They deeply interest Mrs. Chantry-the poor wife, with the signs of nearly approaching death written unmistak-ably on her pure, lovely face; and the young husband, so self-sacrificing, so self-forgetful. Many excuses does she make to go and sit and chat with them; and often does she propose that Mr Beauchamp should go and walk awhile and she will keep his wife company dur ing his absence; not often does he take ing his absence; not often does he take advantage of her offer. He glances at his wife, and though her lips say "Go," her eyes say "Stay"—and he stays.

Ada, who is gifted with fine, keen

Ada finds now a terrible blank in her small world. Other lodgers come and go, but she cares nothing for them. Life seems to have become intolerably same and monotonous. Her mother insists upon her having a change.

It should be kept at hand in every household for the pro-tection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping - cough and Consumption here is no other remedy so efficacious Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deserve and disappoint the patient. Disenses of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trilled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in the practice. The test of half a century pasproven its absolute certainty to cure all pasmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

Crop Returns for 1878 and 1879.

The Bread of the Nations.

An interesting table has been prepared at the agricultural department in Washington from estimated and reported crop returns of the United States for the senson just closed. The statement, which was carefully prepared, shows the amounts of the several staples raised in the whole United States, together with the amounts produced in the preceding year. The values given are not the quoted prices in the marked, twelve loaves of which was easen that the total increase of value of agricultural productions for the past season, as compared with the values of the preceding year, is nearly $416,000, 000. As a close imitation of ivory, celluloid has made great inroads in the business of the ivory manufacturers. Its makers assert that in durability it is much superior to ivory, as it sustains hard knocks without injury, and it is not discolored by age or use. Great quantities of it are used, for piano and organ keys, to the manufacturer of which one company is devoted.

So extensive is its use for this purpose that the ivory manufacturers have educed their price for keys below that of competition. "It is only a question of the plantain troe. I'm thinking they must be cheap at ninety-five cents, and I'll just take home two pair to the old man."

It was difficult at first to convince the old lady that the figures "95" referred to quality, not price, and that the boots were 95 per cent, sterling pure; but when she was shown a sample cut open to display the interior, and saw that the soles were half an inch thick of solid rubber, and that the upper and legs were double thick, she was contented to pay, not ninety-five cents, but several dellars, for a single pair of the "Candee 95 Per Cont. Boots," believing they would be the cheap-est in the end for the "old man." The storekeeper punched the date of sale in the legs so as to fix the expiration of the three months' warrant, and assured her in case they did not stand the warrant, he would give a new pair tree of charge.

The United States secretary of state, desiring to secure, if possible, a good exhibition of American goods at the Melbourne International exhibition, which is to be opened October 1, 1880, has appointed Mr. Thomas R. Pickering, of Connecticut, an agent on behalf of the United States government to solicit exhibits. Mr. Pickering has opened an office at Room No. 102 postofice building, New York city, where all information regarding the regulations of the Melbourne exhibition can be obtained. The United States will not assume the expense of shipping goods, but will, through its commissioner, receive the goods at Melbourne, assign them to a proper space in the exhibition buildings, and publish a catalogue of the list of exhibitors.
