From Reedley, California.

While thinking much and often of Hammonton, we also find California a pleasant place to live. Our winter is about over. I am writing this (Jan. 27th, 7 o'clock P.M.) in a room without fire, and Many towns in this state have voted out the saloon, and the day seems drawing near when we shall vote them out of Reedley.

A man from Pasadena spoke here last night, and stated that Pasadena is a city of 25,000, one of the finest in the land, has over 25 miles of best paved streets, best and latest improvements, and with a very low valuation is taxed only 98 cents on each $100. It is a temperance place, with no saloons, and is an object lesson to those who claim that saloon license fees reduce taxes.

Hoping to see the day when Hammonton will also banish the saloons, and wishing all my old friends God-speed in that work, I remain Yours sincerely, HENRY ZIETZ.
