My Heart.

My heart is like a summer bird,
Who in his cheerful warbling,
Doth strive to sing the songs of love,
From all the songsters of the spring.
Sing on mine heart sing yet again
The sweetest songs of feathered brood,
Thy simple lays may prove a good—
May ease some weary heart of pain.

My heart is like a harp that's strung,
Vibrating with its melody,
From inspiration softly wrung
By fingers of life's destiny
Oh fingers! strike a story chord,
My burning lips shall tremble sing
Unto the world an offering,
Born in a heart by music awed.

My heart is like a running brook
That murmurs through the swaying reeds,
And over upward strives to look
From forests dark, or sunny meads.
Flow on mine heart, still flow along
'Neath sorrow's storm or pleasure's breeze,
Flow on through life unto the sea—
Into the realms of endless song.

Our New York Letter.

New York, Feb. 12, 1879.

THAT JANUARY THAW.

Were you ever in New York during a January thaw? If so, Bob Ingersoll could never convince you that there is no such place as hell! Three weeks ago snow lay a foot deep on street and sidewalk. The sidewalk owners and horse-car companies piled it three to five feet high along the curbs. For three weeks no street cleaning was done, and the conglomeration of filth of a great city was swept from street, hallway and cellar, straight into those snow-banks. "Snowbanks!" In color and appearance they were much heaps, containing mud, garbage, ashes, sweepings, street refuse—but I spare you! Well, for a week the sun poured warmly on these heaps of solidified pestilence; the heaps choked the gutters, the gutters choked the sewers, and a million feet carried each its quota of filth from street to sidewalk, till I venture little in saying that if any modern pigsty had a floor as filthy as our sidewalks were, Henry Bergh would be after its proprietor for cruelty to animals.

What wonder that Diphtheria and the Scarlet Fever should float on such a filth-laden air, and brood over a thousand anxious homes (I ministers offer special prayers in the churches for the lives of little victims)?

THE UNDERSIDE OF A BIG CITY.

Talmage took a detective and went to the dance-houses;—I didn't. I took a man having the entire of the gambling dens, and saw that strange passion at white heat in the early morning. I had seen gambling halls in Mexico, where the horrible spell sat like a nightmare on its victim, and as one gazed on the rigid lips and glaring eyes he ceased to wonder at bloody deeds in gambling houses. We went from the elegant, Wilton carpeted Broadway parlor, with free supper tables and wine hamper, down to the low, where black and white, of all tongues, play poker all night. Nothing was so surprising as the number of nice-looking old gentlemen, venerable enough for Sunday School superintendents, that frequented the "higher" houses. They play coolly, winning or losing—usually losing. One party, apparently young clerks, came in, sat down with some spruce "whippers in," and in twenty minutes walked out, every man of them "dead broke."—Pity the poor fools—half knaves, half fools; hungry for money they had not earned, and too idiotic to see that those hot suppers and costly wines must finally come out of their own pockets!

Fare is not a game; it is a contribution. The player contributes eventually to the banker's wealth, just as certainly as the bull dies at a Spanish bull fight—both are forced into it. The shortest possible cut to poverty lies straight across the green cloth, and any young man choosing to travel that way had better understand that at the outset.

A COMMERCIAL REVOLUTION.

A few years ago the grocery store was awfully suggestive of that peak of dirt which it undoubtedly sold to our long-suffering forefathers in heavy installments. To-day, every grocer worthy of the name has a neat attractive store, whose cheerful show windows are often positive gems of decorative art. What a contrast between the old brown-paper cornucopia and the neat pasteboard package, covered with a handsome label, in use to-day! Instead of weighing ginger, pepper and soda in the same scales, with only a rap of the scale on the counter between each operation, he tosses out a neat package of each, attractively labeled, and kindly lets you mix them—if you want to! You can now buy almost any article of food products neatly put up, and bearing the name of a responsible manufacturer, which is of itself a guarantee of honest quantity and good quality. They are canning everything, and you can buy the finest roast lamb, chicken and turkey; broiled partridge, quail and duck; little neck olives, California Muscat Grapes, and Boston Baked Beans (with a big B) put up in small tins and all of the very choicest, freshest flavor. Great canning factories are established at the best points of supply, everything is bought at wholesale, packed while in the freshest condition, hermetically sealed at the very sources of supply and comes from the cans both fresher and cheaper than from the market stand. Labor is subdivided, systematized, and wonderfully cheapened, and we are actually offered nice, toothsome roast beef, in cans, at ten cents a pound! Fruits and vegetables are also greatly cheapened to the purchaser. Did you ever see a girl at work who did nothing but peel peaches? Or one who packed pickles in bottles? Doing but one simple thing, and doing it constantly, she acquires a degree of celerity, skill and neatness all but incredible. This and the purchase of products at the height of the season, when they are best and cheapest, constitute the open secret of the strange cheapness of canned foods.

Twenty years ago canned goods were found only in a few of the principal stores in the larger cities; now, no cross-road grocer's stock is considered complete without an assortment of them. This revolution is mainly due to the great grocery house of Thurber & Co., of this city, who own many canning factories, and do a business stated in a recent publication to exceed that of any four houses of that line in the world. Realizing that confidence must lie at the base of a trade in sealed packages, they placed a guarantee on their goods, and authorized retailers to refund the price whenever the purchaser of goods bearing their name had cause for dissatisfaction. Dealers and consumers were quick to see their interests just here, and this doubtless accounts largely for the popularity of canned goods bearing the name of Thurber.

We must not overlook the labeling of these packet goods, which has become a great industry, and employs some of the finest talent in this country. A constant improvement goes on here, too, and Mary's "little lamb," and a host of other labels recently designed by the Forbes Lithographic Company of Boston, are positively meritorious chronicles.

Theodore Tilton in "Tempest Tossed" let imagination run wild among vast stores of canned foods, but what was a dream to his mariners is a living reality to-day. The briny suggestions of "Tempest Tossed" recall those nautical lines of Hood's:

"A sea horse is a sea horse
When you see him on the sea;
But when you see him on the bay
A bay horse then is he."

But did you ever see the saw manufactured by an abandoned Yankee whose name is yet unknown to infamy?

"A hen hawk is a hen hawk
When you know it is a she;
But when you know it is a male
A Tommy hawk is he!"

But neither tempest nor tomahawk shall prevent us from finishing our survey on the commercial aspects of this industry. In 1877, we exported $9,000,000 of canned food. Perishable products are utilized and saved; fresh fruits and vegetables are brought within reach throughout the year; the seven fat kind are literally saved for the seven lean kind to feed upon, and it is estimated that these modest little tin cans are annually saving $50,000,000 of surplus food products that otherwise would have been left to perish. This is a commercial revolution worth having! MORLEY.

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 10, 1879.

The rich lead struck by the Potter sub-committee in New York has come opportunely to the large numbers of Republicans, Administration, stalwarts and all intervening grades, who were anxious to bury the dead who fell in the late N. Y. Custom House fight, and to cover all reminders thereof with the mantle of oblivion at the earliest possible date. There are few among Republicans, whatever the direction of their sympathy, who are not relieved that the matter is disposed of, relieving them of all further necessity of taking part in a family quarrel which they instinctively felt could only prove profitable to Democrats. While the decision reached will probably operate to change the views of very few, pro or con, Republicans generally seem willing to drop the matter where it rests, all, probably, equally assured that the lapse of time must vindicate the justice and wisdom of the position which each individually held. The enemies of the Administration have seemingly provoked Mr. Sherman to make public the letters which were read in the long executive session that culminated in the confirmation of Merritt and Burt. They had been received by Collector Arthur from Cabinet and other high officials, recommending A. Band for appointment under him, and they form the basis for the many charges of insincerity and inconsistency relative to Civil Service Reform, heard here during the past week against their authors. That urging the appointment of Judge Bradley's son has already been made public as the others under the Secretary's control will be, it is said.

The latitude of comment which the average Democratic politician allowed himself when discussing the testimony of the Republican leaders before the Potter Committee a few days

Bassett's American Plum.

John T. Lovett foreman of Hance's Nursery, Redbank, N. J., says of this plum: "Of all prolific fruit, we don't think we have ever seen anything that would excel if equal this—we certainly have never seen any plum that would." He also says of the fruit: "It is sweet, rich and refreshing—but its great merit is for culinary purposes, for which it is superior to the cranberry. It is excellent for canning, seeming to combine the flavor of plum and cherry."

Prof. Taubner, American Agriculturist says: "When cooked we can testify to its great excellence."

The Gardner's Monthly, and Rural New-Yorker also recommend it highly. No fruit garden should be without it. Mr. Bassett paid $65.00 for the original tree. See his advertisement and LIBERAL OFFER in another column.

ago, was in marked contrast with their real cence, since the sub-committee cornered Marble, Pelton, Smith, Weed and Tilden. While it was insisted that neither Brady or the Chancellors, nor indeed any other Republican who testified was entitled to the benefit of a single doubt—that, contrary to a well settled principle of law, each and every one of them was bound to prove all the negatives involved in their several cases, or stand convicted of the most damnable rascality—they are silent as the Egyptian Sphinx respecting a failure of memory on the part of Pelton that makes him a physiological monstrosity, and touching a lack of intellectual endowment which Tilden charges himself with that gives the lie to all the brilliant achievements of his past life as a railroad wrecker, as the inventor and beneficiary of the new system of "unfrustr" which he introduced among the iron miners of Michigan, in his successful evasion of the U. S. income laws and, in fact, of his whole business and political career. To sum up, it seems the general sentiment here is that the sub-committee has occasion to go no further to prove that the whole batch, collectively and individually, is guilty of all that has been charged and implied against them. And if Tilden can be nominated for President in 1880 with such a record as he now has, the Democratic leaders are more brazen than they have ever been charged with being, which is saying a great deal.

The action taken at the Democratic caucus Saturday night seems to confirm the suspicion long entertained that the Democrats would find some pretext for making an extra session necessary. In view of all the circumstances, an extra session to cost thousands of additional dollars, is nothing short of an outrage upon every taxpayer in the country. If members of Congress would work after they came here one-half as hard as the average business or professional man at home does, and would subordinate partisan advantages to the public good, an extra session could hardly ever be necessary. But it is a fact requiring no confirmation with those familiar with Congressional habits, that neither may be looked for. Ever since Democrats came into possession of the lower House, appropriation bills have been left to the last end of the session before being reported from the Committee. Millions have been spent on investigating committees, and similar contrivances, without a dollar's benefit to the public. Now it is proposed to load down the appropriation bills still to be passed with partisan riders which Republicans cannot vote for without being guilty of downright stultification. It would seem the country ought to have its stomach full of Democratic reform and retrenchment by this time. The fact is the city is full of Democrats from North, South, East and West, urging the distribution of Senate offices that come into their hands after March 4th, and if a decent pretext cannot be found for an extra session in which to divide up the spoils, an indecent one is likely to prevail.

The bill for the revision of the sugar tariff comes up to-day, and from the magnitude of the interests involved, is likely to precipitate a severe struggle. The bill for the distribution of the balance of the Geneva Award has been lost sight of in the multiplicity of jobs striving for precedence. The same may be said of other meritorious measures. MAXWELL.

TEMPERANCE.

The Wee Dug's Appeal to his Drucken Maister.

[Suggested by seeing a little dog sitting at the door of a public house, and looking anxiously towards the interior, where stood a man, apparently its master, very much intoxicated.]

PART II.
O come awa' for my sake, nor heed the whiskey man,
To set yer heart against yer dug, he's trying a' he can;
He needs shake his nose at me, nor think to gar me rin,
I'm still a fairer at the heart, tho' worn to hair an skin.
I ne'er wad darken his door-step, an' 'twere nae for ye, ye'll
I hae a duty to perform, both to the bairns and Nell,
Fair things, my thoughts are a' on them, but ye ne'er
fash yer leg,
Lae was for them, I whiles could greet, tho' I am but a dug.
D'ye mind that day wee Annie dee'd her lips were cold and blue,
How, purr we thing, saw lovingly she tae yer breast ye drew?
Her could han' locked about yer neck, it made my heart feel sad,
To hear her plead, wif her last breath, wif ye to drink and mair.
Ye ken if ye hae kept yer word tae yer wee deelin' wean,
That yerd day her head was laid aneath the kirkyard stane,
Ye ga'd strach tae the public house—nae doo tae droon yer care,
But tho' I'm but a dug, I ken there's nae real comfort there.
Ye're surely daft!—na, waur than daft—to sell the joys o' hame,
For drink that makes ye sich a fule, gar ye on yer dug think shame;
It freezes love—it kills respect, it mak's ye no jarel',
An' waur than a', ye're like a bear faith tae the bairns an' Nell.
An' sic a fright, theither nicht, we gat when ye were foun',
Ye said ye were in some dark pit, 'mong dials an' bogles blue—
The very sweet brak' on yer face, yer hair stood as on an',
An' Nell, poor body, ran like wun tae fetch the neighbors here.
Wee Jocky has scarce a trousers left—wee Jeanie's frock is thin—
An' as for me, my very bones are stickin' through my skin;
Yer ain coat's fallin' off yer back—ye've scarce a mark a'—
An' Nell, yer wif, I'm wao to see, rin bare—'t mang the snaw.

An' I were you, an' ha'd like you, a wife an' twa snaw weans,
I'd toll for them, tho' I sud wear my fingers tae the bairns;
The precious dink ye spen' on drink, wad buik them oot sae braw,
An' mak' their cheeks, sae pale an' thin, like simmer roses blaw.
O wae me! an' ye dinna men', I fear the bairns' health
Will soon be wif their sisters, in the cauld, could hoose o' death;
But wad ye tak' a manly thocht, an' breek the whiskey jug,
Twad mak' yer hame a paradise, an' me a happy dug.

Temperance in Atlantic Co.

Mr. Editor:—

You are aware of the action taken by the Atlantic County Temperance Alliance at their quarterly session, at Mays Landing, in December last. An agitating committee of seven was appointed, and a sub-committee of two was appointed, to whom was left the work of arranging time, place and speakers for a series of lectures in various parts of the County. Owing to various hindrances, the work of that committee was delayed, so that the arrangements were not all made when the course of lectures commenced. The hall was opened with an excellent address by Rev. W. T. Abbott at this place. English Creek next opened fire under the leadership of the Rev. J. A. Jones, of Hammonton, on the 27th ult. On the same evening Rev. G. H. Tullis edited and instructed the people of Absecon. And again on the Tuesday evening following, Rev. G. S. Sykes showed the people of Hammonton their "Individual Responsibilities."

Arrangements were made to have addresses on Monday evening Feb. 10th at Smith's Landing, Somers' Point and Pleasant Mills, to be addressed by Rev. G. Reed, Rev. W. H. Paulin and Hon. Simon Lake, in the order of places and names. On Feb. 24th Bargaintown, Weymouth and Atlantic City are to be reached, and addressed delivered by Rev. H. M. Kellogg, Rev. J. R. Campbell and Rev. W. N. Ogborn in the order of places and names. About the 10th of March, (of which due notice will be given) Buena Vista, Smithville and Egg Harbor City will come in for their share, for which all the arrangements are not yet made, but will be duly noticed.

So you can see that the little "foundling" of a Temperance Alliance is determined to have a "squall", and make itself heard. Whether the cries of the enslaved will be heeded, depends somewhat on their efforts to free themselves, and become men as God intended they should be, or clinging to that which has the poison of an asp, and the sting of an adder. Also those who are willing to be known as God fearing and order loving people, if they will use gospel temperance for the drunkard, or the moderate drinker who will soon be a drunkard; and for something else—for those who will persist in destroying the peace of the community, filling our alma-houses and prisons, furnishing victims for the asylum and the gallows. Such is, to some extent, the business of which we complain. Those who are engaged in it allow the love of gain to out-root all the nobility of their natures, and then complain because they are urged to reform. No man (or woman either) of a fair share of common sense, but knows the cause of very nearly all the poverty and crime which to-day abounds in our land. Not only the self-constituted upper-crust of society, even if church members, who talk together in public, how "they would like a glass of whiskey or brandy and can't do without it." Even such in their sober moments admit the facts. Which is the jewel, hypocrisy, or constancy? Who will be responsible if the children of such become drunkards? Who? Where place the blame? At this day, are the apologists of the rum-seller, or rum-drinker entitled to sympathy if the fiend enters their households? Can a christianity and liquor-selling live together? The late Charles Buxton, though a brewer, was constrained to declare that the war against the liquor traffic, was a war of Heaven against hell. "Hold the Fort" is right where there is a gain; but "Storm the Fort" should be the watchword.

Chairman Sub-Com.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1879.

The testimony before the Teller committee shows that the Tribune's either exaggerations were correct, though every effort was made to clear the skirts of slippery Sam. But who supposes that so much derelict could be carried on by the chief spokesman, and the chief not know anything about it? Tell it to the marines. There was some talk of making the chief innocent.

The U. S. Senate for the 46th Congress will consist of 48 Democrats, 32 Republicans and 1 Independent, giving the Democrats a good working majority for the time since the war broke out. In closing Judge Davis of Illinois, their majority will be ten.

A famous hunter was wont to remark that tiger-hunting was royal sport, until the tiger took a notion to hunt you, and then there wasn't so much fun in it. This sentiment is heartily endorsed by Clark, N. Potter and the New York Sun—North American.

A fierce battle occurred near the Tugela river in Africa, on Jan. 21st, between a body of British troops and 20,000 Zulus, in which the British were almost annihilated, their loss being over 600 men besides a large number of officers. The Zulus consisted of two majors, four captains and twelve lieutenants of the twenty-fourth regiment, two captains of the Royal Artillery, colonel, captain, four lieutenants, and a major of engineers, and 21 officers of native troops. They lost also a valuable column of 102 wagons, 1000 oxen, two cannons, 400 shot and shell, 1000 rifles, 250,000 rounds of ammunition, 600,000 pounds of provisions and the contents of the twenty-fourth regiment. The Zulus are estimated to have lost 5000 men killed and wounded. The reinforcements and much time are expected. British troops have not been handled so roughly before since the Crimean war, and it is feared this defeat will encourage the Zulus to continue the war with all the more vigor. Cetwayo, the Zulu chief, declared war about a year ago, but the campaign had reached no special head, until this last battle. The British Government will probably lose no time in ordering more troops on to the scene of action to suppress the difficulty as soon as possible.

Gen. Sherman has made another march "from Atlanta to the sea," through Georgia. In answer to a letter written him by Capt. E. P. Howell, of Atlanta, he gives his views of things in the state, so far as its being a place for emigration. The General thinks there is room for millions of people, and a good opportunity for investing capital, but he recognizes the existing condition of ostracism, socially and in business, and when people cannot be as free as in the west, so that they can go with perfect liberty, with their families, and not be treated as though they had no business there, they will not go. He says they must learn "to look ahead and not behind," before they can induce northern people to invest capital or settle among them. With all the resources of the south, they are of little avail for want of capital to make them available. Emigration or capital will go where such a spirit exists, and where debts are being repaid, as is the case in many of the southern states. If they continue on the course they have been, and are now pursuing, the crime will certainly redound to their own injury. When they learn to treat northern people decently, justly and honestly, it will be well for them. Until they do, northern men, nor capital can be persuaded by Gen. Sherman, or anybody else to emigrate to Georgia or any other southern state.

The State Board of Agriculture will hold their annual meeting in the State House in Trenton, next Wednesday, the 19th inst., at 11 o'clock A. M. Besides reading of reports, etc., there will be brought up for discussion: Experimental Stations, and how to improve soils of an inferior character; Fertilizers; their composition and best mode of application; Grape roots, and diseases of fruit and vegetables.

These, with any miscellaneous subjects brought up by those present, will occupy the attention of the members of the Board at their Annual Meeting. The annual report for 1878 will be distributed at the meeting.

Mr. Mercereau, a nephew of Senator Randolph, is announced as a recent appointee to the New York Custom House.

NEWS ITEMS.

Senator Christianity, of Michigan, has placed the resignation of his Senatorship in the hands of Governor Crosswell.

Dr. Stanley was expelled from the City Council of Sandusky, Ohio, for using profane and unparliamentary language.

Governor Wade Hampton is reported to be again in a critical condition, so that he will be forced to submit to another operation.

Of the 2,778,707 immigrants arriving in New York between 1855 and 1878, New Jersey is credited with receiving 18,585.

New York ought to invest in a few coal mines as soon as possible. It takes a thousand tons of coal a month to heat the little corner that is finished in the State Capital.

The remnants of the Cheyennes from Camp Robinson have arrived at Sydney, Neb. Wild Hog, and his fellow prisoners tell a pitiful story of misery and starvation, which, if there be any truth in it, ought to stimulate an investigation as to what the Indian Agent in Arkansas did with the supplies entrusted to him for the red men.

Capt. Boynton has accomplished the feat of paddling down the Allegheny river from Oil City to Pittsburgh Pa., a distance of 150 miles. He was in the water forty-one hours, and experienced much trouble from the ice which filled the river. On arriving at Pittsburgh his face was found to be badly frozen, and he was in a very exhausted condition.

Gen. Armstrong, President of the Normal and Agricultural Institute, Hampton, Va., states that the experiment of educating Indians with negroes is proving a great success. The boys and girls learn very rapidly. There are at present 67 Indian boys and girls, and 550 negroes receiving instruction at Hampton. When the course is finished, it is proposed to put the boys on farms or bind them out to trade.

The Moral of the Warren Co. Fraud.

Our wise men, who had pretty much agreed that corrupt rings flourished principally in cities, where "greensness, cupidity and ignorance" meet together, are now pointed to the lamentable revelations brought to light in Warren County, New Jersey. For a dozen years the chieftain of officials have practiced a system of pilfering by which over $100,000 has been filched from the tax-payers. Warren county is not thickly settled. The property-owners are not out-pokied by irresponsible foreigners, and the county was not offloaded by strangers and adventurers. It is a rural county gathered into farming communities, and the freeholders and other officers were prominent farmers, citizens and church members. But this board of freeholders (like our Supervisors) had great prerogatives, and by the connivance of other county officials, money was raised, put in their pockets and charged to the county. When on the sick bed prominent men were arraigned for sentence, many remarks were made about Jersey justice and the depravity of human nature.

But this case should not be allowed to go by without pointing to a more definite moral. When Chief-Justice Beasley came to perform his solemn duty of sending these men—some aged elders in the church, leaders in society—to State Prison, he made this significant remark: "This will teach the tax-payers that it will not do to allow one set of knaves to propose another set of knaves for officers." Warren County was all one way in politics; a nomination was the same as an election. The old farmers did not bother their heads about caucuses rooms, and thus it came to pass that one set of knaves in the primaries often present another set of knaves for office. No more notable example could be given of the debauching influence of continued power upon men of average honesty, and the tax-payers are not wholly free from censure in the premises. This country is run by political parties; the parties are run by caucuses, and the caucuses are too often run miles to cast his vote for a candidate proposed by a handful of wire-pullers. The farmers and more intelligent citizens are easily negligent in this part of their public duties. It was often the case in Massachusetts that the delegates elected to the Convention that nominated Governor B. Hayes for President, were chosen at meetings where only twelve or thirteen persons were present, in districts containing as many thousand people. It almost seems that there is a greater tendency to shirk a citizen's duty on the plea that politics is a disreputable business. Nothing can be more satisfactory to members of rings, and nothing more dangerous to the State than this growing dislike among citizens to do citizen's duty.—Examiner and Chronicle.

CUMBERLAND MUTUAL
Fire Insurance Company.
BRIDGETON, N. J.
Conducted on strictly mutual principles, offering a perfectly safe insurance for just what it may cost to pay losses and expenses. The proportion of loss to the amount insured being very small, and expenses much less than usually had, nothing can be offered more favorably to the insured. The cost being about ten cents on the hundred dollars per year to the insured on ordinary risks, and from fifteen to twenty-five cents per year on hazardous properties, which is less than one-third of the lowest rates charged by stock companies, on such risks—the other two-thirds taken by stock companies being a profit accruing to stockholders, or consumed in expenses of the companies.
The guarantee fund of premium notes being now Three Millions of Dollars.
If an assessment had to be made of five per cent. only, twice within the ten years for which the policy is issued. It would yet be cheaper to the members than any other insurance offered. And that large amount of money is saved to the members and kept at home. No assessment having ever been made, being now more than thirty years, that saving would amount to more than One Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars
The Losses by Lightning.
Where the property is not set on fire, being less than one cent per year to each member; are paid without extra charge, and extended so as to cover all policies that are issued and outstanding.
