THE MOANING SEA.

With her white face full of agony, Under her dripping locks. How the wretched, restless Sea to-day Moans to the cruel rocks.

Holplessly in her great despair She shudders on the strand; And the woods are gone from her tangled hair, And the shells from her listless hand,

'Tis a sorrowful sight to see Her lie, With her beating, beaving breast, ero, whore the rucks have cast her off, .. Sobbing herself to rest. Y

Alas, slas! for the foolish sea, Why was there none to say; "The wave that breaks on the heartless stone,

Must break, and fall away. Why could she not have known that this Would be her fate at length ! That the hand, unheld, must slip at last,

Though it cling with love's own strength? For now, too late, she has learned the truth. Which none who learn forget-And this is the best that she can do With the future left her yet: -

To rise and wear on her face a smile, Though her life be ebbing out; And she have not even the wretched hope, Born of a wretched-doubt

For there is no pity for a grief like hers, But only scorn and blame;
And so, she must come to her feet again And hide from the world her shame

A Series of Essays Upon Human Life.2

BY TIMOTHY TITCOMB.

Chapter XV.

It is a common remark that a railroad car is an excellent place in which to study human nature; but the particular phase of human nature which is usually presented there is not, I think, sufficiently attractive to engage a man who desires to maintain a study even my own nature there, Ic that the more I ride the more selfish I become, and the more desirable it seems to me that I should occupy the space usually assigned to four men, viz: two seats for my feet and two for such other portions of my person as are not required for spanning the space between the sofas. It must be a matter of regret to most persons, Lam sure, that they are not large enough to cover only a little better. Such a farmer's boy is brought up to the drive those who travel with them into more close and inconvenient quarters. Whenever I witness an instance of genuine, selfsacrificing politeness in a railroad car, I become aware that there is at least one manon the train who has traveled very little:-No, when I travel I turn my ob servation upon things outside-upon the farms and streams, and mountains and forests, and towns and villages through which the train stations to gaze at the passengers, get the papers, and feel the rush for a single mo ment, of the world's great life. I love to brakesman that the old horse didn't have his allowance of oats that morning, or commiserates the loneliness of the conductor of of which is intended for the ears of a village girl who stands in the door of the "Ladies Room," with the tip of a parasol in her teeth, and a hat on her head that was jaunty last year.

Riding into the country recently, I saw at one of these little stations a pair of young men, leaning against the station house .-They had evidently been waiting for the approach of the train, but they did not stir from their positions. They were young men whose life had been spont in unremitting oil. Their hands were large and coarse and brown; their faces and necks were bronzed, their clothing was of the commonest material and pattern, and was old and patched besides; and they had a hard look generally. There was the usual mind and the body. Any student or litera-bustle about them, but they did not seem ry man who has a daily mental task to do, to mind it. At last they started, and these are the words that one of them spoke:

"Come, Bob, let's go dyer and see if we mind for a day of literary labor, I would use can't tuck away some of that grub."

So the hoe in-my garden for an early hour in both turned their backs upon the train, the morning. If I wished utterly to unfit the morning. both turned their backs upon the train, the morning. If I wished utterly to unfit and upon me; and as they went over to see a pupil for his daily task of study, I would if they couldn't "tuck away some of that put him through an exhausting walk before grub," I got a view of their heavy shouldcreand their shambling, awkward gait. A pair of old draft horses, going out in the system, and the necessary draft upon the norning to take their places in front of their truck, would not move more stiffly than those fellows moved. .

idea that work is the grand thing in life.— Work, indeed is supposed by him to be pretty much all of life. It is supposed to spoil farmers to get anything but work into their heads; and scientific agriculturists will bear witness that they have been obliged to fight the popular prejudices against book farming" at every step of their progress. They will also testify that the improvements made in farming and in the bears me. I am particularly interested in | implements of agriculture have not been the faces of those who gather at the smaller made by farmers themselves, but by outsiders-mechanics and men of science who have marveled at the brainless stupidity which toiled on in its old track of unlisten to the smart remarks of some rustic reasoning routine, and looked with suspicion wit in shirt-sleeves, who, if the train should and discouragement upon innovations. The happen to be behind time, intimates to the most in improving the instruments and methods of his own business, is, that his mind has been unfitted for improvement by a train not crowded with passengers, -all the excessive labors of his body. A man whose whole vital energy is directed to the support of muscle has, of course, none to direct to the support of thought. A man whose strength is habitually exhausted by bodily labor becomes, at length, incapable of mental exertion; and I cannot help feeling that half of the farmers of the country establish insuperable obstacles to their own improvement by their excessive toil. They are nothing more than the living machines of a calling which so far exhausts their vitality that they have neither the disposition nor the power to improve either their calling or themselves.

To a student or a literary man, it is easy to explain the necessity of the proper di-vision of the nervous energies between the will do it before he exercises his body to energies to the support of the muscular digestive and nutritive functions to supply the muscular waste, leave the mind temporarily a bankrupt. I have never seen a man who was really remarkable for acquired muscular power, and, at the same time, re-

The tide of such a man's life does not set in that direction.

An hour-glass has in it a definite of antity of sand; and when I turn it over, the sand falls from the upper apartment it to the lower; and while it occupies that thition it will continue to fall until the former is exhausted and the latter is filled. More over, it will never take its place at the other end of the instrument, until it is timed back. It is precisely thus with a timan constitution. The grand vital extrent moves only in one direction, and when it is moving toward muscle it is not move ward mind, and when it is moving mind it is not moving toward muscle fact is illustrated sufficiently by the nomena of digestion. After a marchan eaten a hearty dinner, he becomes even to drowsiness or perfect sleep. Why? Simply because the tide of nervous energy sets toward digestion, and there is not

What cares he for skies, unless he can make use of them for drying his hay, or wetting down his potatoes? The beautiful changes of nature do not touch him. His sensibilities are deadened by hard work. His nervous system is all embedded in muscle, and does not lie near enough to the surface to be reached by the beauty and music around him. All he knows about a daisy is that it does not make good hay; and he draws no appreciable amount of pleasure of his life from those surroundings which charm the sensibilities of others.

others. We are in the habit of regarding the farming population of the country as the most moral and religious of any yet if we look at them critically, we shall find that their piety is of a negative, rather than a positive character. They, are men in the hest place who have very few temptations, either from without or from within. There are no professional tempers around him to lure them into the more seductive paths of sin. The woman whose steps take hold on hell does not pass their doors; the gambler spreads no snares for them; no gilded palace nvites them to intoxicating music and intoxicating draughts; they are not madden ed by ambition; and they have no vanity that leads them to degrading and ruinous display. If they are little assailed from without, they are not more moved toward vice from within. The fact that their vital energies are all expended upon labor relieves them from the motives of temptation. Men whose muscles are overworked have no vitality to expend upon vices. The devil cannot make much out of a man who is both tired and sleepy. If we inquire of the ministers who have charge of rural parishes. they will usually tell us that an audience of mechanics is better than an audience of farmers, and that the miscellaneous audience of a city is better than either. It is impossible for men who have devoted every bodily energy they possess to hard labor during the waking hours of six days, to go to church and keep brightly awake on the seventh. Country ministers will also admit that they have in their parishes less help in social and conference meetings than the pastors of city parishes, and that no great movements of benevolence ever origi-

We are very much in the habit of glorifying rural life, and praising the intelligence and virtue of rural populations is and if they believe us, they cannot receive what I write upon this subject with pleasure. But the question which interests these people most is not whether my statements are pleasant but whether they are true. Is the philosophy sound? Are the facts as they are represented to be? If there be a man on the earth whom I honestly honor it is a farmer who has broken away from his slavery to labor, and applied his mind to his soil. Mind must be the emancipator of the farmer. Science, intelligence, machinery these must liberate the white bondman of the soil from his long slavery. When I look back and see what has been done for the farmer within my brief memory. I am full of hope for the future. The plough, under the hand of science, is become a new instrument. . The horse now hoes the corn, digs the potatoes, mows the grass, rakes the hay, reaps the wheat, and threshes and winnows it; and every day adds new machinery to the farmer's stock, to supersede t e clumsy implements which once bound him to his hard and nerverending toil: When a farmer begins to use machinery and to study the processes of other men, and to apply his mind to farming so far as he can make it take the place of uniscle, then he filluminates his calling with a new light, and mind once gets the upper hand, it will serve itself and see that the body is properly cared for. Intelligent farming is dignified living. For a farmer who reads and thinks, and studies and applies, Nature will open the storehouse of her secrets, and point the way to a life full of dignity and beauty, and grateful and improvable leisure.

THE LAW LIBRARY of the late Daniel Webster, of Massachusetts, was sold under the auctioneer's hammer, in Boston, last week. An account of the first day's sale says that "of the personal friends of the statesman but one or two were present, while others, if represented at all, must have bid through persons whose names are entirely unfamiliar. It appeared that many of the more valuable and choice works, remembered as once belonging to this collection, must have been withdrawn from it, but enough still remained to make the occasion one of no ordinary interest. -A large part of the books contained the autograph of Mr. Webster, here and there were presentation copies, and some volumes had personal associations of interest; while in general it could not fail to cause the specator some emotion and to excite a sad interest, as he witnessed the dispersion of the books collected trough the course of such a career, and which were the daily companious in public and professional life of a man whose place in our history as a As a matter of course, life cannot have statesman and as a forensic orstor is so much dignity or much that is character memorable."

THE TEST OATH.

The following is the test oath adopted in the Senate, about which there has been so much debate:

I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I have never voluntarially borne arms against the United States since I have been a citizen to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto: that I have neither sought nor accept ed nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever, under any authority or pretended authority in hostility to the one! United States; that I have not yielded a support to any prev ment, authority, power or constitution with-in the United States, hostile or inimical thereto.

And I do further swear (or affirm) that to the best of my knowledge and ability. will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, forfaith and allegience to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God.

The above oath was adopted by an act of Congress a year ago, and has been administered ever since to Federal officers. No loyal man can object to it. Secession symnathizers only refuse to take it. It was framed to meet just such cases.

ANECDOTE OF GOV. BOUCK.

Archbishop Hughes always had a penchant for political management, and at various times he had considerable influence upon public affairs. It was the policy of Mr. Seward, when Governor of New York, to court that influence.

An authentic story is told of the attempt of Bishop Hughes to negotiate with Gov.

Bouck the same position he had enjoyed with Gov. Seward; Bouck being a rich Dutch farmer, but little versed in either political or ecclesiastical subtleties. The Bishop called upon the Governor and sent in his card. ...

"Good morning, Mister Hughes," said Bouck, "I am glad to see you, sir." A pause ensued, when Huges said, Bishop Huges your excellency of New emphasis. Perhaps your Excellency does not recognise the title of his visitor. I am the BISHOP of this diocese."

Oh, sh—so; I am glad to see you Bishop Huges, and how is Mrs. Huges?" [This

The Bishop gave over in despair. The interview verified what one of Gov. Bouck's partisans had said during the canvass to a neighbor who had urged him to vote for

Seward:
"Gov. Seward," said one, "is a much smarter man than Bouck; he has a much longer head."
"So? Vell, may no it ish longer, but it ish not so tack."

These two lines that look so solemn, Are put in here to fill up the column.

of his son-in-law, Jacob Johnson, for the purpose of recovering a dog which Johnson thad taken away and tied up in his own house. While Hand was in the act of untying the dog, Johnson came into the room. Some words passed between them, and Johnson struck Hand a violent blow on the head. Hand immediately started for home, and as he entered his own house said, am a dead man, Johnson has killed me with a club." He lived through the night, however. In the morning Johnson went to his father-in-law's house and said, "Father says I struck him with a club, but I did not. It was with the butt of the ax." . Hand died Monday forenoon. An inquest was called immediately which decided that he came to his death from a blow inflicted by the hand of Johnson. A warrant for the arrest of the latter was immediately issued, but at last accounts he had not been found. Johnson is said to be a deserter an "bounty jumper." He boasted of having received five bounties.

I MARITY AB A POLITICAL PAPER,

we shall advocate those principles which we bolieve ite at the foundation of all good govern-We intend to advocate the rights of all ramaniniWe do not believe that manhood consists se is the color of the skin, the shape of the crantum to or the feature of the hair; but that the mind is the man, the world over, and that a mind of the towed order has as much right to life, liberty and happiness, as one of the highest—and that every man, of whatever nation, class or color, has the Hight to callivate his talents to the full extent of their powers, and that no one has the right to docide for enother what that extent is. We will edvocate the rights of a negro as quickly, fearless ly and boldly as the rights of a king. We stand for mankind and for the rights which God has wives all mes and which men or governments take away at their peril. We stand for the Coustitution as our fathers intended it, not for the slaveholder's self-interested garbled interpreta tion of that noble old instrement.

Wa ballove the war to be the cause of the nation, and that upon its issue depends our liberties; depends all that is desirable in our Government. We shall therefore fearlessly defend and uphold the Administration in its efforts to subdue and crush out the rebellion from every part of our land, and to sestore the supremacy of law wherever it has both defied. We are with the Government heart and hand so long as they seek the integrity and perpetuity of the Union.

AS AN EDUCATIONAL JOURNAL, was shall seek to promote the true interests of education in every possible way, because we believe it conducive to the highest interests of manrainkind, and that free governments cannot long exist in peace and prosperity without it. Woulso believe it to be the duty of the State to educate her citizens, and that until free schools are within the reach of all, the duty is not fully done. When it is seen that treason and rebellion thrives only in those portions of our land where free education has been wholly or nearly neglected, the importance of it must be seen and acknowledged. AS A MORAL PAPER,

Though not what is known as a religious jour nal, we shall ever be found ou the side of morality, integrity and virtue. Nothing sectarian can ever be admitted in our columns, but we are willing to do all in our power to advance the temporal and spiritual interests of all ovangelical churches, sabbath schools, and other institutions of the Cospel. TO FARMERS.

There will always be one or more columns of our paper devoted to the interests of Agriculture not only be interesting but instructive to farmers. Our columns are always open to communications from those engaged in any of the branches of busbandry, and we hope that successful cultivators will make our pages a medium of communication with the public.

PROSPECTUS TOP THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN THE BEST MECHANICAL

PAPER IN THE WORLD. Ninoteenth Year.

VOLUME IX .- NEW SERIES. The publishers of the Scientific American beg to announce that on the fourth day of July, 1863, a new volume communeed, and it will continue to e the aim of the publishers to render the contents of each successive number more attractive and asoful than any of its producessors. The Scientific American is devoted to the inte-

The Scientific American is devoted to the interests of Popular Science, the Mechanical Arts, Manufactures, Inventions, Agriculture, Commorce, and the Industrial Pursuits generally, and is valuable and instructive not only to the Workshop and Manufactory, but also in the Household, the Library, and the Reading Roo.

The Scientific American has the reputation, at home and abread, of being the best weekly publication devoted to mechanical and industrial nursition devoted to mechanical and industrial nursities. eation devoted to machanical and industrial pur cation devotes to meanances and industrial pur-suits now published, and the proprietors are de-termined to keep up the reputation they have earned during the sixteen years they have been connected with its publication. CHEMISTS, ARCHITECTS, MILLWRIGHTS, AND FARMERS!

The Scientific American will be found a most useful journal to them. All the new discoveries in the science of chemistry are given in its columns. and the interests of the architect and carpenter are not everlooked; all the new inventions and discoveries appertaining to those pursuits being pub lished from week to week. Useful and practical information pertaining to the interests of mill-wrights will be found published in the Scientific American, which information they cannot possibly obtain from any other source; subjects in whice planters and farmets are interested will be four liscussed in the Scientific American; most of the mprovements in agricultural implements being llustrated in its columns.

To THE INVENTOR:

The Scientific American is indispensible to every inventor, as it not only contains illustrated descriptions of nearly all the best inventions, as they come out, but each number contains an Om cial List of all the Claims of all the Patents isned from the United States Patent Office during the week previous: thus giving a correct history of the progress of inventions in this country. We are also receiving, every week, the best scientific journals of Great Britain, France, and Germany. We shall continue to transfer to our columns co pious extracts from these journals of whatever we may deem of interest to our readers.

TO THE MECHANIC AND MANUFACTURER:

No person engaged in any of the mechanical pursuits should think of doing without the Scientific American. It costs but six cents per week: every number contains from six to tan engravings of new machines and inventions, which cannot be found in any other publication. It is an established rule of the publishers to insert none but original engravings, and those of the first class in the art, drawn and engraved by experienced artists, under their own supervision expressly for TERMS.

To Mail Subscribers, Three Dollars a Year, or One Dollar for four months. One Dollar and Ffty Cents pays for one complete volume of 416 pages; two volumes comprise one year. A new volume commenced on the fourth day of July, 1863: CLUB RATES.
