

South-Jersey

Orville E. Hoyt, Publisher.

Republican

Terms--$1.25 Per Year.

Vol. XXIII, No. 8.

Hammonton, N. J., Saturday, Feb. 21, 1885.

Five Cents per Copy.

Received
this week
A handsome stock of Spring
Prints,
Gingham

Fine
Remnants
Etc., etc.

Stockwell's,

Bellevue Avenue,

Hammonton, New Jersey.

D. W. JACOBS
REPAIRS

Sewing Machines & Organs.

Orders sent by mail (Hammonton Post Office) or left at Stockwell's store, will receive prompt attention.

Leave your order at the Republican Office if you want
Catalog Cards.
Business Cards.
Wedding Cards.
Invitation Cards.

DR. JOHN BULL'S
Smith's Tonic Syrup
FOR THE CURE OF FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER,
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA is the old and reliable remedy for impurities of the blood and scrofulous affections.
DR. JOHN BULL'S
SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP,
BULL'S SARSAPARILLA,
BULL'S WORM DESTROYER,
The Popular Remedies of the Day.
Principal Office, 831 Main St., Louisville, Ky.

"ONLY PLAYING."

A little old woman before me
Went slowly down the street,
Walking as if weary
Were her feeble, tottering feet.
From under her old poke bonnet
I caught a gleam of snow,
And her warlike capstring floated
Like a pennon to and fro.
In the folds of her rusty mantle
Sudden her footsteps caught,
And I sprang to keep her from falling,
With a touch as quick as thought.
When under the old poke-bonnet
I saw a winsome face,
Framed with the flaxen ringlets
Of my wee daughter Grace.
Mantle and cap together
Dropped off at my very feet;
And there stood the little fairy,
Beautiful, blushing, sweet.
Will it be like this, I wonder,
When at last we come to stand
On the golden, ringing pavement
Of the blessed heavenly land?
Losing the rusty garments
We wore in years of time,
Will our better selves spring backward,
Sering in a youth sublime?
Instead of the shape that hid us,
And made us old and gray,
Shall we get our child-hearts back again,
With a brightness that shall say?
I thought, but my little daughter
Shook her dimpled hand to mine;
"I was only playing," she whispered,
"That I was ninety-nine."

Carnival week opened at New Orleans yesterday with much brilliancy.

The Senate passed the Indian Appropriation bill. In the House a motion to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill for the retirement of General Grant was defeated, yeas, 158; nays, 103; not the necessary two-thirds in the affirmative.

By treaty with the King of Burmah France has acquired possession of the Shan States, in the Northwestern section of the country.

Mr. W. W. Astor, American minister to Italy, has resigned.

James E. Gowen, a brother of Franklyn B. Gowen, of the Reading Railroad, died at his home at Mount Airy.

"PERMANENT."—There are medicines which give only temporary relief and then leave the sufferer worse off than before, especially in cases of dyspepsia. Remember this is not the way with Brown's Iron Bitters. See what Mr. J. M. Gaines, of Gaines, S. C., says about this prince of tonics, "My wife has been greatly benefitted by it; she had been troubled with dyspepsia for years, and now I believe she is permanently cured." It also cures liver and kidney complaints.

"At a meeting of the branches of the Irish National League in New York it was decided to establish a fund for the payment of Irish members of the British Parliament.

John Boyle O'Reilly has been warned that if he goes to Canada to deliver a St. Patrick's Day oration the Government will cause his arrest.

The Hocking Valley strike has been ended in consequence of the failure of the supplies on which the miners depended.

Socialist leaders of Chicago have gone on missionary trips through Ohio and Illinois.

The disfiguring eruptions on the face, the sunken eye, the pallid complexion, indicate that there is something wrong going on within. Expel the lurking foe to health. Ayer's Sarsaparilla was devised for that purpose; and does it.

It is stated at Ottawa that the Government has agreed to increase the duty on flour to seventy-five cents per barrel. The millers asked to have it made $1.

The French have captured Lang Son and Kulu, after hot fighting with the Chinese.

It is reported that the British War Office has advised Miss Gordon that Khartoum has not fallen, and that her brother is alive.

Francis A. Drexel, of the banking firm of Drexel Brothers, died at his residence on Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Sunday.

It is said that last week's storm cost the roads centring at Chicago an amount equal to all their profits since January 1.

The Union League reception to Senator-elect Evarts was one of the most brilliant affairs of the kind which New York has ever seen.

Elaborate precautions have been taken to guard the British Parliament Buildings and law courts against dynamiters.

Benjy Butler insists again that he is out of politics. Now let somebody show that politics is out of Butler, and all will be forgiven.

The Kansas House of Representatives has four girls among its pages, and its docket clerk is a woman.

As an article for toilet, Ayer's Hair Vigor stands unrivalled. It cleanses the scalp and preserves it from scurf and dandruff, cures itching and humors, restores faded or gray hair to its original dark color, and promotes its growth.

Another company has been formed in New York for the purpose of aerial navigation. The capital stock is $100,000. Peterson's sectional airship is to be the one tried.

The Nautical Gazette hears of plans for the construction of six iron sailing vessels with auxiliary steam power, all of which will be built in American ship yards and fly the American flag.

The American Sheet Mill, at Phillipsburg, which has been idle since Christmas, has resumed with 125 hands.

Mrs. Harriet F. Perry, for twelve years matron of the State Industrial School, died of pneumonia, Friday. She was particularly well qualified for the position she occupied and was exceedingly valued by the Board of Trustees.

The work on the new wall at the State Prison was finished Saturday. It is one of the finest pieces of masonry of the kind in the State, and the work, which was done under the personal supervision of Keeper Laverty, cost less than the appropriation.

The New Jersey Assembly on Wednesday practically killed the 5 per cent interest bill with amendments.

O'Donovan Rossa was discharged from St. Vincent's Hospital, Wednesday.

The Post-office Department has decided that money order fees belong to the postmaster at whose office they are paid.

Heavy business failures have occurred in San Francisco and New Orleans.

Admiral Courbet's torpedo boats succeeded in sinking two Chinese men-of-war.

There are prospects that the Corian embargo will lead to war between China and Japan.

Massachusetts has under discussion a plan for the sale of the Hoosac tunnel property to a private corporation.

The Italian Legislature has before it a bill which proposes to grant divorces to those who have been separated for more than five years. This is already the law in Scotland and Sweden.

Telegrams from Albany indicate that Senator Bayard has finally determined to accept the office of secretary of State in Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet.

Mrs. Dudley, who shot O'Donovan Rossa, has been held in $3000 bail to appear before the grand jury in New York.

The Oregon Legislature has passed a local option liquor bill, which provides that a license can only be issued on the petition of majority of the voters in the precinct where the saloon is to be located.

Many women are becoming commercial travelers in England.

There have been more vessels sunk or injured by ice in New York Harbor this winter than for many years previous.

The recent great snow blockade on the Northern Pacific, between Dallas and Portland, cost the company $300,000 to get it out of the way.

The New Jersey Assembly passed a law consolidating all the labor bureaus and department of the state government and putting them under control of a new board.

BROWN'S
IRON
BITTERS
THE BEST TONIC.

This medicine, combining Iron with pure vegetable tonics, quickly and completely cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weakness, Impure Blood, Malaria, Chills and Fevers, and Neuralgia.
It is an invaluable remedy for Diseases of the Kidneys and Liver.
It is invaluable for Diseases peculiar to Women, and all who lead sedentary lives. It does not injure the teeth, cause headache, or produce constipation—other Iron medicines do. It enriches and purifies the blood, stimulates the appetite, adds the assimilation of food, restores the system and invigorates, and strengthens the nerves.
For Intermittent Fevers, Lassitude, Lack of Energy, etc., it has no equal.
The genuine has above trade mark and crossed red lines on wrapper. Take no other.
BROWN'S CHEMICAL CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

20 ACRES of good land for sale, adjoining the west side of the Camden & Atlantic Railroad, half way between Elwood and DuCosta Stations. Price, $200. A. S. GAY, Atlantic City, N. J.

Cedar Shingles

Having my Mill in full operation, I am now prepared to furnish the best quality of Cedar Shingles.

In any quantity, and at the lowest possible prices.

A. S. GAY,
Pine Road, Hammonton, N. J.

A large lot of Cedar Grape Stakes and Bean Poles for sale, in the swamp on Elwood or DuCosta Station.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs; none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.
"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me."
—HON. J. FAIRBROTHER.
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Group.—A Mother's Tribute.
"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
—MRS. EMMA GEDNEY.
120 West 125th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effective remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried."
—A. J. CRANE.
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 15, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL."
—JOSEPH WALDEN.
Byhalia, Miss., April 6, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles."
—E. BRADON.
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

BUY YOUR
Bread and Cakes

Pies, Rolls, Buns,
Etc., Etc.,
Baked Fresh Every Day,

At Packer's

"Old Reliable" Hammonton Bakery.

Patronize home industry and encourage home enterprise. By so doing you will be better enabled to serve you, and thus deserve your patronage.

Baker's Liquid Yeast
Which most people prefer, made fresh every day.

Fruits and Confections

As usual.

Wm. D. PACKER.

90 CHOICE BUILDING LOTS FOR SALE.

Close to SCHOOLS, CHURCHES, POST-OFFICES, and R. R. DEPOTS, in the CENTRE of the Town of Hammonton.

Terms Reasonable Terms Easy. Call on, or address,

A. J. SMITH, Hammonton, N. J.

P. O. Box 299.

Established 1842.

R. W. Woodruff & Co.,

Commission Merchants in

FRUIT, VEGETABLES

POULTRY, Etc.,

44 & 46 Fulton St. & 48 West 4th St., New York.

Shipping Cards and Bills, and information furnished by Wm. D. Packer, M. D., who says

"I prefer all my produce to them to preference to any other house in New York."

GERMANN FIEDLER,

MANUFACTURER

AND WHOLESALE DEALER IN

CIGARS,

Hammonton, N. J.

Wm. Bernshouse,

CONTRACTOR & BUILDER.

[Of 32 years' Experience.]

Steam Saw and Planing Mill

Lumber Yard.

Doors, Sash, Moldings,

and Scroll-work.

Window-Glass.

Odd sizes cut to order.

Lime, Cement, and Calced Plaster.

Manufacturer of

FRUIT PACKAGES

Berry Chests

Cranberry and Peach

CRATES.

Odd Sizes of Fruit Crates

made to order.

CEDAR SHINGLES

A Specialty,—odd sizes cut to order.

Oak and Pine Wood for Sale,

Cut and Split if desired.

A large quantity of Pine and Cedar

Cuttings, for Summer and kindling,

$2.50 per cord. CEDAR PICKETS

five and a-half feet long, for chicken yard fence.

Dr. GEORGE R. SHOLE,

DENTIST.

HAMMONTON, N. J.

Office Days.—Wednesday, Thursday

Friday, and Saturday of each week.

Pay the Printer promptly.

HUI WINTER. Hal Winter, hot Winter, King of the northern blin! You meet us all, you greet us all, With grip that's as good as gold. In regal pomp you've gathered up Your royal robes of snow, And by their trailing ends shall trace Whatever ways you go. Your grimy retainers, all, alack! Make but a cruel train Of biting cold and stinging winds And ice and frozen rain. The high, high firs and blaxing hearths Your carnival of cold and snow, While Mr. and Mrs. Winter reign supreme From vassal eels till morn. But hal Winter, hot Winter, What about the poor? Who've no stronghold against the cold, No baffle or sinners To set at bay the stinging day, Or soften down the night— Who note the thickening wing-panes With sinking hearts aghast Who draw their babies close and sing Their shivering hymns Then sleep and dream of seamless feasts That hunger-sleep supplies— To wake at morn with shuddering sense Of lengthened fast and cold And find that gaunt eye want hath wrought Within the fold, Hal Winter, hot Winter, Hard your reign on these, God pity such and send them hearts To all we serve and freeze.

AN ARIZONA EXPERIENCE. Charles Parker, being a young man from the east, and a newly-graduated graduate of the military academy, was not looked upon with a fearful respect by the military. The frontiersmen from their proud height of dyspepsia and dirt recognized him as Parker only as a "tenderfoot," while the older officers and soldiers were naturally slow to concede military merit to a youngster who had accepted death or court-martial for a shorter period than their own. In reality Lieutenant Parker knew very little of the energetic west as it materialized around Fort McDowell, and what little he knew did not swell him with pride. It was his idea that if knowledge is power, knowledge of Arizona was only more power and not to be coveted. He was not in deadly fear of that truculent creature, the Arizona in a red shirt, but if he had chosen an individual to stand betwixt the wind and his nobility, the gentleman in his carmine cassia would not have obtained the situation. His life was not without a charm, for he was in love with the charming young ladies found only in army circles, who have all the polish of their more fortunate city sisters with a seductive frankness and abandon de- rived from their Bohemian existence. When not engaged in love making, and he was an expert in that pleasant amusement—young Parker sat in his quarters with a big pipe, as befitted an army man, rested his feet gracefully on the mantle, and conscientiously kept up his French. "Madame, le capitaine con vous lequel began "Madame je suis vous racontier une tres belle his- toire." Besides, as mentally he still lived in the east, he followed in a dozen pages the society, theater, and sporting news of civilization. If at any moment he had been translated to Chicago, his choice for the evening theater would have already been made; he would have been au fait with current gossip; and his base ball bats would have been marked by a knowledge of the most startling intimacy. It was arranged between Miss Helen and Parker that when he could leave it should be for a wedding journey. It was his peculiar notion of this arrange- ment that it was made without the colonel's assistance or knowledge. Lovers must have their secrets. A lover without a weighty secret would act as poor a figure as a secretless statesman. However, the chances of Parker's getting a furlough were dim. His captain was on an indefinite sick leave, having a splendid time and enter- ing heartily into business, while his first lieutenant was engaged in Washington on some occasion, which required his peculiar talents and considerable "in- fluence." "One officer," said the law- lover, "must be with the troops," and when the law uttered these words it ignored the astute captain and the powerful first lieutenant, and looked with its crooked finger directly at our friend, Mr. Par- ker. The morning when history finds him, the lone lieutenant, acting as post adju- tant, was sitting in his room, waiting for the colonel's office. He was perusing papers to himself in some of his many capacities, such as quartermaster, com- missionary, ordnance officer, post treas- urer, chief of accounts, overseer of schools, or perpetual poison of the day. His format words one would have thought him on very frigid terms with himself. Instead, for instance, of saying "Par- ker, will you take a squint at this?" he wrote: "Respectfully referred to Lieu- tenant Parker, who will take the action required." Meanwhile the colonel was knitting his brows over an order from headquar- ters. "What do you think of that?" he said at last, handing the paper to Par- ker. The young man read the order but made no answer. He liked to have his opin- ion asked, but he did not suppose that his crude ideas would be of value to an officer of so many grayed experiences. "What do you think?" repeated the colonel mildly. "I suppose I'll have to be done," said the lieutenant vaguely, not know- ing on what subject he was asked. "Yes," mused the colonel, "but how?" This says he is supposed to be at San- ford, but the description is vague to make a search on." "O, that," said Parker. "Why I think

I know the man already. I saw him last summer when I was surveying the line from Gila, Benito to Tucson. He was in a saloon in Sanford. The colonel shook his head. "I was going to send for an older officer, but if you can identify the man you'll have to go. Humph! not a very pleasant or easy duty—and he'd be killed at the young man's feet. He's a real bad fellow. He's a fighter. Maybe I had better have an older officer with you." "If you think it necessary." "I don't," said the colonel, instantly determined by Parker's look; and he wrote in pencil a draft for an order immediately to Sanford, Ariz., with a detail of six men, and arrest military convict John Devine." "Just have that published." Parker hesitated; but as the responsi- bility of the arrest was to be upon him he decided to publish it. "If that order is published, word of it will go to this convict by the 'underground,' and he will give me the slip." "Suppose you were to go without an order," said the colonel, "that would excite suspicion as well." "Let it be a false order." "It won't do any good, when those fellows see a soldier they are on the alert, order or no order. They know the soldier is after some one, and they send the word on by the underground and the fellow who it may concern. You will have to take the chances of traveling as fast as the news of your coming." But Parker had an idea. He thought he could entrap an Arizonian as easily as if he had worn a red shirt from the frontier. "I'm going to do it," said he, "last summer when I was survey- ing. When they knew I was survey- ing, I could have had as many black- ies in my society as I wished. Mr. Devine himself waited on me in his saloon. He was a good fellow, and he was down on telegraph business again." "Good!" cried the colonel. "Make me out an order to examine the line and publish it here. You will have your real order and warrant in your pocket." In half an hour the ambulance rolled out of Fort McDowell into the long road across the desert. The soldiers were in good spirits over their holiday. Very true they carried carbines and revolvers, but in Arizona carbines and revolvers are as readily associated with good sports as cheerfulness with beans and big grocery bills in New England. The lieutenants having no one to begay with, wondered what Miss Helen would think of his expedition, and having time for no conclusion, they decided to wipe the alkali dust from their eyes and began a new "belle histoire." The roads were deep, but the six-mile team of "shave-tails" slid steadily on, and by night sixty-five miles of sage brush and about four additional miles of alkali lay to their century-old and hoary coat of alkali. This travel brought them to Sacaton the Gila, where Parker had been the summer previous. When the people learned his present errand he was up his French. "Madame, le capitaine con vous lequel began "Madame je suis vous racontier une tres belle his- toire." Besides, as mentally he still lived in the east, he followed in a dozen pages the society, theater, and sporting news of civilization. If at any moment he had been translated to Chicago, his choice for the evening theater would have already been made; he would have been au fait with current gossip; and his base ball bats would have been marked by a knowledge of the most startling intimacy. It was arranged between Miss Helen and Parker that when he could leave it should be for a wedding journey. It was his peculiar notion of this arrange- ment that it was made without the colonel's assistance or knowledge. Lovers must have their secrets. A lover without a weighty secret would act as poor a figure as a secretless statesman. However, the chances of Parker's getting a furlough were dim. His captain was on an indefinite sick leave, having a splendid time and enter- ing heartily into business, while his first lieutenant was engaged in Washington on some occasion, which required his peculiar talents and considerable "in- fluence." "One officer," said the law- lover, "must be with the troops," and when the law uttered these words it ignored the astute captain and the powerful first lieutenant, and looked with its crooked finger directly at our friend, Mr. Par- ker. The morning when history finds him, the lone lieutenant, acting as post adju- tant, was sitting in his room, waiting for the colonel's office. He was perusing papers to himself in some of his many capacities, such as quartermaster, com- missionary, ordnance officer, post treas- urer, chief of accounts, overseer of schools, or perpetual poison of the day. His format words one would have thought him on very frigid terms with himself. Instead, for instance, of saying "Par- ker, will you take a squint at this?" he wrote: "Respectfully referred to Lieu- tenant Parker, who will take the action required." Meanwhile the colonel was knitting his brows over an order from headquar- ters. "What do you think of that?" he said at last, handing the paper to Par- ker. The young man read the order but made no answer. He liked to have his opin- ion asked, but he did not suppose that his crude ideas would be of value to an officer of so many grayed experiences. "What do you think?" repeated the colonel mildly. "I suppose I'll have to be done," said the lieutenant vaguely, not know- ing on what subject he was asked. "Yes," mused the colonel, "but how?" This says he is supposed to be at San- ford, but the description is vague to make a search on." "O, that," said Parker. "Why I think

I know the man already. I saw him last summer when I was surveying the line from Gila, Benito to Tucson. He was in a saloon in Sanford. The colonel shook his head. "I was going to send for an older officer, but if you can identify the man you'll have to go. Humph! not a very pleasant or easy duty—and he'd be killed at the young man's feet. He's a real bad fellow. He's a fighter. Maybe I had better have an older officer with you." "If you think it necessary." "I don't," said the colonel, instantly determined by Parker's look; and he wrote in pencil a draft for an order immediately to Sanford, Ariz., with a detail of six men, and arrest military convict John Devine." "Just have that published." Parker hesitated; but as the responsi- bility of the arrest was to be upon him he decided to publish it. "If that order is published, word of it will go to this convict by the 'underground,' and he will give me the slip." "Suppose you were to go without an order," said the colonel, "that would excite suspicion as well." "Let it be a false order." "It won't do any good, when those fellows see a soldier they are on the alert, order or no order. They know the soldier is after some one, and they send the word on by the underground and the fellow who it may concern. You will have to take the chances of traveling as fast as the news of your coming." But Parker had an idea. He thought he could entrap an Arizonian as easily as if he had worn a red shirt from the frontier. "I'm going to do it," said he, "last summer when I was survey- ing. When they knew I was survey- ing, I could have had as many black- ies in my society as I wished. Mr. Devine himself waited on me in his saloon. He was a good fellow, and he was down on telegraph business again." "Good!" cried the colonel. "Make me out an order to examine the line and publish it here. You will have your real order and warrant in your pocket." In half an hour the ambulance rolled out of Fort McDowell into the long road across the desert. The soldiers were in good spirits over their holiday. Very true they carried carbines and revolvers, but in Arizona carbines and revolvers are as readily associated with good sports as cheerfulness with beans and big grocery bills in New England. The lieutenants having no one to begay with, wondered what Miss Helen would think of his expedition, and having time for no conclusion, they decided to wipe the alkali dust from their eyes and began a new "belle histoire." The roads were deep, but the six-mile team of "shave-tails" slid steadily on, and by night sixty-five miles of sage brush and about four additional miles of alkali lay to their century-old and hoary coat of alkali. This travel brought them to Sacaton the Gila, where Parker had been the summer previous. When the people learned his present errand he was up his French. "Madame, le capitaine con vous lequel began "Madame je suis vous racontier une tres belle his- toire." Besides, as mentally he still lived in the east, he followed in a dozen pages the society, theater, and sporting news of civilization. If at any moment he had been translated to Chicago, his choice for the evening theater would have already been made; he would have been au fait with current gossip; and his base ball bats would have been marked by a knowledge of the most startling intimacy. It was arranged between Miss Helen and Parker that when he could leave it should be for a wedding journey. It was his peculiar notion of this arrange- ment that it was made without the colonel's assistance or knowledge. Lovers must have their secrets. A lover without a weighty secret would act as poor a figure as a secretless statesman. However, the chances of Parker's getting a furlough were dim. His captain was on an indefinite sick leave, having a splendid time and enter- ing heartily into business, while his first lieutenant was engaged in Washington on some occasion, which required his peculiar talents and considerable "in- fluence." "One officer," said the law- lover, "must be with the troops," and when the law uttered these words it ignored the astute captain and the powerful first lieutenant, and looked with its crooked finger directly at our friend, Mr. Par- ker. The morning when history finds him, the lone lieutenant, acting as post adju- tant, was sitting in his room, waiting for the colonel's office. He was perusing papers to himself in some of his many capacities, such as quartermaster, com- missionary, ordnance officer, post treas- urer, chief of accounts, overseer of schools, or perpetual poison of the day. His format words one would have thought him on very frigid terms with himself. Instead, for instance, of saying "Par- ker, will you take a squint at this?" he wrote: "Respectfully referred to Lieu- tenant Parker, who will take the action required." Meanwhile the colonel was knitting his brows over an order from headquar- ters. "What do you think of that?" he said at last, handing the paper to Par- ker. The young man read the order but made no answer. He liked to have his opin- ion asked, but he did not suppose that his crude ideas would be of value to an officer of so many grayed experiences. "What do you think?" repeated the colonel mildly. "I suppose I'll have to be done," said the lieutenant vaguely, not know- ing on what subject he was asked. "Yes," mused the colonel, "but how?" This says he is supposed to be at San- ford, but the description is vague to make a search on." "O, that," said Parker. "Why I think

I know the man already. I saw him last summer when I was surveying the line from Gila, Benito to Tucson. He was in a saloon in Sanford. The colonel shook his head. "I was going to send for an older officer, but if you can identify the man you'll have to go. Humph! not a very pleasant or easy duty—and he'd be killed at the young man's feet. He's a real bad fellow. He's a fighter. Maybe I had better have an older officer with you." "If you think it necessary." "I don't," said the colonel, instantly determined by Parker's look; and he wrote in pencil a draft for an order immediately to Sanford, Ariz., with a detail of six men, and arrest military convict John Devine." "Just have that published." Parker hesitated; but as the responsi- bility of the arrest was to be upon him he decided to publish it. "If that order is published, word of it will go to this convict by the 'underground,' and he will give me the slip." "Suppose you were to go without an order," said the colonel, "that would excite suspicion as well." "Let it be a false order." "It won't do any good, when those fellows see a soldier they are on the alert, order or no order. They know the soldier is after some one, and they send the word on by the underground and the fellow who it may concern. You will have to take the chances of traveling as fast as the news of your coming." But Parker had an idea. He thought he could entrap an Arizonian as easily as if he had worn a red shirt from the frontier. "I'm going to do it," said he, "last summer when I was survey- ing. When they knew I was survey- ing, I could have had as many black- ies in my society as I wished. Mr. Devine himself waited on me in his saloon. He was a good fellow, and he was down on telegraph business again." "Good!" cried the colonel. "Make me out an order to examine the line and publish it here. You will have your real order and warrant in your pocket." In half an hour the ambulance rolled out of Fort McDowell into the long road across the desert. The soldiers were in good spirits over their holiday. Very true they carried carbines and revolvers, but in Arizona carbines and revolvers are as readily associated with good sports as cheerfulness with beans and big grocery bills in New England. The lieutenants having no one to begay with, wondered what Miss Helen would think of his expedition, and having time for no conclusion, they decided to wipe the alkali dust from their eyes and began a new "belle histoire." The roads were deep, but the six-mile team of "shave-tails" slid steadily on, and by night sixty-five miles of sage brush and about four additional miles of alkali lay to their century-old and hoary coat of alkali. This travel brought them to Sacaton the Gila, where Parker had been the summer previous. When the people learned his present errand he was up his French. "Madame, le capitaine con vous lequel began "Madame je suis vous racontier une tres belle his- toire." Besides, as mentally he still lived in the east, he followed in a dozen pages the society, theater, and sporting news of civilization. If at any moment he had been translated to Chicago, his choice for the evening theater would have already been made; he would have been au fait with current gossip; and his base ball bats would have been marked by a knowledge of the most startling intimacy. It was arranged between Miss Helen and Parker that when he could leave it should be for a wedding journey. It was his peculiar notion of this arrange- ment that it was made without the colonel's assistance or knowledge. Lovers must have their secrets. A lover without a weighty secret would act as poor a figure as a secretless statesman. However, the chances of Parker's getting a furlough were dim. His captain was on an indefinite sick leave, having a splendid time and enter- ing heartily into business, while his first lieutenant was engaged in Washington on some occasion, which required his peculiar talents and considerable "in- fluence." "One officer," said the law- lover, "must be with the troops," and when the law uttered these words it ignored the astute captain and the powerful first lieutenant, and looked with its crooked finger directly at our friend, Mr. Par- ker. The morning when history finds him, the lone lieutenant, acting as post adju- tant, was sitting in his room, waiting for the colonel's office. He was perusing papers to himself in some of his many capacities, such as quartermaster, com- missionary, ordnance officer, post treas- urer, chief of accounts, overseer of schools, or perpetual poison of the day. His format words one would have thought him on very frigid terms with himself. Instead, for instance, of saying "Par- ker, will you take a squint at this?" he wrote: "Respectfully referred to Lieu- tenant Parker, who will take the action required." Meanwhile the colonel was knitting his brows over an order from headquar- ters. "What do you think of that?" he said at last, handing the paper to Par- ker. The young man read the order but made no answer. He liked to have his opin- ion asked, but he did not suppose that his crude ideas would be of value to an officer of so many grayed experiences. "What do you think?" repeated the colonel mildly. "I suppose I'll have to be done," said the lieutenant vaguely, not know- ing on what subject he was asked. "Yes," mused the colonel, "but how?" This says he is supposed to be at San- ford, but the description is vague to make a search on." "O, that," said Parker. "Why I think

I know the man already. I saw him last summer when I was surveying the line from Gila, Benito to Tucson. He was in a saloon in Sanford. The colonel shook his head. "I was going to send for an older officer, but if you can identify the man you'll have to go. Humph! not a very pleasant or easy duty—and he'd be killed at the young man's feet. He's a real bad fellow. He's a fighter. Maybe I had better have an older officer with you." "If you think it necessary." "I don't," said the colonel, instantly determined by Parker's look; and he wrote in pencil a draft for an order immediately to Sanford, Ariz., with a detail of six men, and arrest military convict John Devine." "Just have that published." Parker hesitated; but as the responsi- bility of the arrest was to be upon him he decided to publish it. "If that order is published, word of it will go to this convict by the 'underground,' and he will give me the slip." "Suppose you were to go without an order," said the colonel, "that would excite suspicion as well." "Let it be a false order." "It won't do any good, when those fellows see a soldier they are on the alert, order or no order. They know the soldier is after some one, and they send the word on by the underground and the fellow who it may concern. You will have to take the chances of traveling as fast as the news of your coming." But Parker had an idea. He thought he could entrap an Arizonian as easily as if he had worn a red shirt from the frontier. "I'm going to do it," said he, "last summer when I was survey- ing. When they knew I was survey- ing, I could have had as many black- ies in my society as I wished. Mr. Devine himself waited on me in his saloon. He was a good fellow, and he was down on telegraph business again." "Good!" cried the colonel. "Make me out an order to examine the line and publish it here. You will have your real order and warrant in your pocket." In half an hour the ambulance rolled out of Fort McDowell into the long road across the desert. The soldiers were in good spirits over their holiday. Very true they carried carbines and revolvers, but in Arizona carbines and revolvers are as readily associated with good sports as cheerfulness with beans and big grocery bills in New England. The lieutenants having no one to begay with, wondered what Miss Helen would think of his expedition, and having time for no conclusion, they decided to wipe the alkali dust from their eyes and began a new "belle histoire." The roads were deep, but the six-mile team of "shave-tails" slid steadily on, and by night sixty-five miles of sage brush and about four additional miles of alkali lay to their century-old and hoary coat of alkali. This travel brought them to Sacaton the Gila, where Parker had been the summer previous. When the people learned his present errand he was up his French. "Madame, le capitaine con vous lequel began "Madame je suis vous racontier une tres belle his- toire." Besides, as mentally he still lived in the east, he followed in a dozen pages the society, theater, and sporting news of civilization. If at any moment he had been translated to Chicago, his choice for the evening theater would have already been made; he would have been au fait with current gossip; and his base ball bats would have been marked by a knowledge of the most startling intimacy. It was arranged between Miss Helen and Parker that when he could leave it should be for a wedding journey. It was his peculiar notion of this arrange- ment that it was made without the colonel's assistance or knowledge. Lovers must have their secrets. A lover without a weighty secret would act as poor a figure as a secretless statesman. However, the chances of Parker's getting a furlough were dim. His captain was on an indefinite sick leave, having a splendid time and enter- ing heartily into business, while his first lieutenant was engaged in Washington on some occasion, which required his peculiar talents and considerable "in- fluence." "One officer," said the law- lover, "must be with the troops," and when the law uttered these words it ignored the astute captain and the powerful first lieutenant, and looked with its crooked finger directly at our friend, Mr. Par- ker. The morning when history finds him, the lone lieutenant, acting as post adju- tant, was sitting in his room, waiting for the colonel's office. He was perusing papers to himself in some of his many capacities, such as quartermaster, com- missionary, ordnance officer, post treas- urer, chief of accounts, overseer of schools, or perpetual poison of the day. His format words one would have thought him on very frigid terms with himself. Instead, for instance, of saying "Par- ker, will you take a squint at this?" he wrote: "Respectfully referred to Lieu- tenant Parker, who will take the action required." Meanwhile the colonel was knitting his brows over an order from headquar- ters. "What do you think of that?" he said at last, handing the paper to Par- ker. The young man read the order but made no answer. He liked to have his opin- ion asked, but he did not suppose that his crude ideas would be of value to an officer of so many grayed experiences. "What do you think?" repeated the colonel mildly. "I suppose I'll have to be done," said the lieutenant vaguely, not know- ing on what subject he was asked. "Yes," mused the colonel, "but how?" This says he is supposed to be at San- ford, but the description is vague to make a search on." "O, that," said Parker. "Why I think

I know the man already. I saw him last summer when I was surveying the line from Gila, Benito to Tucson. He was in a saloon in Sanford. The colonel shook his head. "I was going to send for an older officer, but if you can identify the man you'll have to go. Humph! not a very pleasant or easy duty—and he'd be killed at the young man's feet. He's a real bad fellow. He's a fighter. Maybe I had better have an older officer with you." "If you think it necessary." "I don't," said the colonel, instantly determined by Parker's look; and he wrote in pencil a draft for an order immediately to Sanford, Ariz., with a detail of six men, and arrest military convict John Devine." "Just have that published." Parker hesitated; but as the responsi- bility of the arrest was to be upon him he decided to publish it. "If that order is published, word of it will go to this convict by the 'underground,' and he will give me the slip." "Suppose you were to go without an order," said the colonel, "that would excite suspicion as well." "Let it be a false order." "It won't do any good, when those fellows see a soldier they are on the alert, order or no order. They know the soldier is after some one, and they send the word on by the underground and the fellow who it may concern. You will have to take the chances of traveling as fast as the news of your coming." But Parker had an idea. He thought he could entrap an Arizonian as easily as if he had worn a red shirt from the frontier. "I'm going to do it," said he, "last summer when I was survey- ing. When they knew I was survey- ing, I could have had as many black- ies in my society as I wished. Mr. Devine himself waited on me in his saloon. He was a good fellow, and he was down on telegraph business again." "Good!" cried the colonel. "Make me out an order to examine the line and publish it here. You will have your real order and warrant in your pocket." In half an hour the ambulance rolled out of Fort McDowell into the long road across the desert. The soldiers were in good spirits over their holiday. Very true they carried carbines and revolvers, but in Arizona carbines and revolvers are as readily associated with good sports as cheerfulness with beans and big grocery bills in New England. The lieutenants having no one to begay with, wondered what Miss Helen would think of his expedition, and having time for no conclusion, they decided to wipe the alkali dust from their eyes and began a new "belle histoire." The roads were deep, but the six-mile team of "shave-tails" slid steadily on, and by night sixty-five miles of sage brush and about four additional miles of alkali lay to their century-old and hoary coat of alkali. This travel brought them to Sacaton the Gila, where Parker had been the summer previous. When the people learned his present errand he was up his French. "Madame, le capitaine con vous lequel began "Madame je suis vous racontier une tres belle his- toire." Besides, as mentally he still lived in the east, he followed in a dozen pages the society, theater, and sporting news of civilization. If at any moment he had been translated to Chicago, his choice for the evening theater would have already been made; he would have been au fait with current gossip; and his base ball bats would have been marked by a knowledge of the most startling intimacy. It was arranged between Miss Helen and Parker that when he could leave it should be for a wedding journey. It was his peculiar notion of this arrange- ment that it was made without the colonel's assistance or knowledge. Lovers must have their secrets. A lover without a weighty secret would act as poor a figure as a secretless statesman. However, the chances of Parker's getting a furlough were dim. His captain was on an indefinite sick leave, having a splendid time and enter- ing heartily into business, while his first lieutenant was engaged in Washington on some occasion, which required his peculiar talents and considerable "in- fluence." "One officer," said the law- lover, "must be with the troops," and when the law uttered these words it ignored the astute captain and the powerful first lieutenant, and looked with its crooked finger directly at our friend, Mr. Par- ker. The morning when history finds him, the lone lieutenant, acting as post adju- tant, was sitting in his room, waiting for the colonel's office. He was perusing papers to himself in some of his many capacities, such as quartermaster, com- missionary, ordnance officer, post treas- urer, chief of accounts, overseer of schools, or perpetual poison of the day. His format words one would have thought him on very frigid terms with himself. Instead, for instance, of saying "Par- ker, will you take a squint at this?" he wrote: "Respectfully referred to Lieu- tenant Parker, who will take the action required." Meanwhile the colonel was knitting his brows over an order from headquar- ters. "What do you think of that?" he said at last, handing the paper to Par- ker. The young man read the order but made no answer. He liked to have his opin- ion asked, but he did not suppose that his crude ideas would be of value to an officer of so many grayed experiences. "What do you think?" repeated the colonel mildly. "I suppose I'll have to be done," said the lieutenant vaguely, not know- ing on what subject he was asked. "Yes," mused the colonel, "but how?" This says he is supposed to be at San- ford, but the description is vague to make a search on." "O, that," said Parker. "Why I think

I know the man already. I saw him last summer when I was surveying the line from Gila, Benito to Tucson. He was in a saloon in Sanford. The colonel shook his head. "I was going to send for an older officer, but if you can identify the man you'll have to go. Humph! not a very pleasant or easy duty—and he'd be killed at the young man's feet. He's a real bad fellow. He's a fighter. Maybe I had better have an older officer with you." "If you think it necessary." "I don't," said the colonel, instantly determined by Parker's look; and he wrote in pencil a draft for an order immediately to Sanford, Ariz., with a detail of six men, and arrest military convict John Devine." "Just have that published." Parker hesitated; but as the responsi- bility of the arrest was to be upon him he decided to publish it. "If that order is published, word of it will go to this convict by the 'underground,' and he will give me the slip." "Suppose you were to go without an order," said the colonel, "that would excite suspicion as well." "Let it be a false order." "It won't do any good, when those fellows see a soldier they are on the alert, order or no order. They know the soldier is after some one, and they send the word on by the underground and the fellow who it may concern. You will have to take the chances of traveling as fast as the news of your coming." But Parker had an idea. He thought he could entrap an Arizonian as easily as if he had worn a red shirt from the frontier. "I'm going to do it," said he, "last summer when I was survey- ing. When they knew I was survey- ing, I could have had as many black- ies in my society as I wished. Mr. Devine himself waited on me in his saloon.

