For a Free Public Library.

MR. EDITOR: The question of giving to our Town some sort of a public building has been agitated for the past year in the Woman's Civic Club. It has now reached a climax, when, through the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Black, a piece of land will be given to the Town for such a purpose.

Through the efforts of a member, the Club communicated with those in authority in our neighboring Town of Vineland, as to how the Carnegie Public Library was built there.

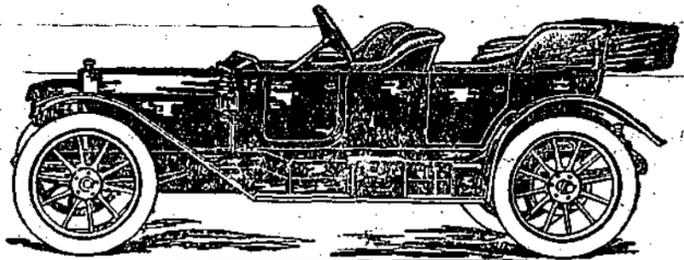

Mr. Carnegie will give to any town or township one thousand dollars toward a building for each one hundred dollars the town will appropriate yearly to maintain it. To Vineland he gave a $12,000 building, and they raise $1,200 each year for maintenance.

Mr. Carnegie has no "string" attached to his gifts, but trusts the people to adhere to the agreement and keep up the good work.

It is for the people of Hammonton to agitate the subject. Through our public men, a mass meeting will soon be called here, which the Vineland officials will attend, and try to convince our people of the great need of this educational advancement.

Farmers, and residents of the smaller neighboring towns may be equally benefitted. It seems a fitting time, since the recent depredations, to arouse the people to the necessity of taking steps to raise the moral standard of our Town and people.

MRS. CHAS. CUNNINGHAM,
Cor. Sec'y of Civic Club.

A GAME OF HIDE AND SEEK.

Years and years ago, in the time of Queen Mary of England, there stood in the county of Surrey a quaint, ivy-covered manor house...

THEY WERE TRULY ENGLISH

Those were trulhy English times, as all who have read English history must know. Queen Mary was a cruel woman. She put to death many people who would not make any statement on religious matters...

LET'S HAVE A GAME OF HIDE AND SEEK.

Let's have a game of hide and seek," he said, with a poor effort to be jovial.

WHY DID GOD PROPHET JACOB?

Why did God prophesy to Jacob from the first, seeing that Jacob was selfish, sharp and irritable, while Esau appears to have been free from these faults?

Playing With Death

FLIPPANT COMMENTS.

Playing With Death

"It is practically impossible," writes Hudson Maxim, in "Adventure," "to make the ordinary laboring man appreciate the necessity of care in the safe handling of explosives, and the works there for that purpose. It was winter. My wife had accompanied me as a precautionary measure. She was sitting in the laboratory to keep warm, near a big barrel stove charged with entering the laboratory for something my wife asked me what was in those two pills sitting near the stove. She said that she had a suspicion it might be nitroglycerin, and she informed me that one of my men had just been in to take it away. The sparks flew out in all directions, some of them lighting in the buckets to be quenched on top of the oily liquid.

Playing With Death

"Horror!" I said. "It is nitroglycerin!" I called the man who had placed it there and told him to take it away. As it was necessary to keep the material from freezing he took it into the boiler house nearby. A little later on going into the boiler-house I saw one of the men sitting by the fire while the other was standing with his coat tails outstretched in either hand, forming a shield to keep the sparks from flying into the nitroglycerin.

Playing With Death

"On the day preceding that accident I had had a gold cap put on a tooth. In consequence the tooth ached throughout the night and kept me awake a greater part of the time. In the morning I rose early and went down to my factory at Maxim, N. J. In order to keep the dryness of some fulminate compound I took a little piece of it, about the size of an English penny, broke off a small particle, placed it on a stand outside the laboratory, and lighting a match, touched it off.

Playing With Death

"Owing to my loss of sleep the night before my mind was not so alert as usual, and I forgot to lay aside the remaining piece of fulminate compound, but instead of doing so I placed it on a stand outside the laboratory, and lighting a match, touched it off.

Playing With Death

"Once when entering my storage magazine at Maxim, in which were several cartons of dynamite, along with 37,000 pounds of nitroglycerin, I saw John Bender, one of my employees, calmly, but emphatically, opening a case of dynamite with a hammer and a chisel. I promptly discharged him.

Playing With Death

"Not long afterward the foreman at Farmingdale called on me to buy some dynamite, and said he had engaged Bender to blow the stumps out of the land. The next day he was counting death for himself and everybody around when handling dynamite, but Bender still wanted Bender to do the work.

Playing With Death

"A few days later there was some talk in Bender's neighborhood. A particularly refractory old stump had resisted a couple of Bender's dynamite attacks. The failure to dislodge the stump Bender took it as a personal affront because it collected upon his skill as a stump puller. He had been well hidden, so none of the bystanders had seen him. He had been well hidden, so none of the bystanders had seen him. He had been well hidden, so none of the bystanders had seen him.

Playing With Death

"The closed walk with that is the worsted heaver that can be carried on earth," David Bender. "It is better to make a thousand miles once a year than a thousand times a day." "What do you say to a compromise," suggested Boniface, "of eight miles with you then."

Won By His Oratory

OF THE RUDER SEX.

Won By His Oratory

"Hah! hah! hah! Three cheers for Merrifield! Tiger!" Thus the cheers rang out on the calm night air, for the strenuous citizens of Valgreen were passing through an exciting political campaign. Factional disagreement in the dominant party had presented to the minority a rare opportunity for success. And opportunity never knocks too softly at the politicians' doors—sometimes they think it is opportunity when it is only the public emballer.

Won By His Oratory

But the face of Merrifield, the gray-haired, silhouetted chairman of the minority party—whose benches had the right of line in the parade now triumphantly wending its way preparatory to the beginning of a rally—did not light up with that beaming appreciation that is the wont—any, the pre-quest—of our political leaders. Neither did the face of James Lacey, the broad-shouldered young man who also occupied a seat in the barouche of honor. And thereby hangs our tale.

Won By His Oratory

It was but a decade and a half previous to the beginning of our narrative that Lacey had graduated from the Valgreen Academy, but also not with valetudinary honors—as naturally a horse should, but as his broad shoulders would indicate, magna cum laude in athletics.

Won By His Oratory

During Lacey's matriculation at the academy, at that overworked psychological moment, he became interested in one of the most enthusiastic rooters of the gentler sex, who had often spurred the Valgreen team on to victory. This fascinating young lady was no other than Alice, the daughter of Richard Merrifield, though not until Lacey's graduation did it become manifest to Alice's father that the seed of interest had brought forth the fruit of love.

Won By His Oratory

And then the city chairman lost no time in indicating his feelings in the matter, for he had a deep-rooted dislike for what he termed "modern B. G." a graduate of the academy of arts, but bachelors of athletics.

Won By His Oratory

Briefly and emphatically he informed Lacey that his attentions to Alice were disagreeable; and not only to him, but to the recipient also.

Won By His Oratory

Now Merrifield did not intentionally tell an untruth when he said, his daughter Lacey was a bachelorette. She was, in fact, a bachelorette. But he did not intend to say that she was a bachelorette. She was, in fact, a bachelorette. But he did not intend to say that she was a bachelorette.

Won By His Oratory

In proportion as men are strong in physical trials, so are they weak in the adventures of love; wherefore it is that many a bachelorette of art, but bachelors of athletics. Briefly and emphatically he informed Lacey that his attentions to Alice were disagreeable; and not only to him, but to the recipient also.

Won By His Oratory

THE CUP THAT CHEERS.

Won By His Oratory

A business girl who wished to brew an occasional cup of tea in her own room had upon this happy day a new and improved method of brewing tea. She went along to a second-hand furniture shop until she found an old mahogany table with the top removed. The top of the table was covered with asbestos, and on this she placed a small gas stove. The mahogany drawers were used for holding knives and forks, salt tea, coffee and sugar canisters and paper napkins. Several hooks fastened to the under side of the table held tea and coffee cups, saucers and a tray. A compact and useful device in this, says the Woman's Home Companion.

Won By His Oratory

When you wash your pretty little pieces, thus, try dropping a few drops of bluing in the suds. Then wash your pieces in the cold lumpy suds.

The Session of the Presbyterian Church has called a meeting of the Church and congregation for the purpose of calling a pastor in place of Dr. Countermine, who begins his pastorate in the city March 5th.
There is a general impression that
Rev. Wallace S. Marple, of Philachoice.

The Hammonton Rod and Gun

SPRAYING Season Coming! Get ready for it by ordering the Orchard Brand Lime and Sulphur Solution, manufactured by the

been used here for the past three seasons, not a dissatisfied customer to date. Sold in any quantity by W. H. Parkhurst.

Among the stories circulating,
last week, about Bellevue Avenue mud, was this: A pedestrian saw out in the street what he thought was a purse. Not wishing to soil his shoes or fingers in the sticky compound, he procured a pole and fished. It required some labor, but the inquisitive one was rewarded by finding, instead of a purse,
the ear of one of Mart's mules, which had sunken in the mire that morning. Happily, help came in time to save the critter.

Many people are calling for a report from the committee chosen to consider the subject of a "Boys' Club Room." The idea of the originators was to provide a room, place therein books, magazines and papers, furnished also for games,
and invite all boys and young men
to spend their spare time there, instead of on street corners or in pool-rooms. There is need for such a place to-day, and we cannot afford to wait for a possible public library building.
