Our New England Correspondence.

WORCESTER, Feb. 21st, 1871.

Mr. Editor.—I think that I gave you a partial promise to send you now and then some news jottings from this quarter, for although we labor under the disadvantage of "living so far off," I remember that many of your readers were once dwellers in these frosty regions, and have not yet lost all their interest in the place they still fondly call "home." As the weather is the first and often most fruitful topic which suggests itself in what is called society, it would not do for me to ignore the subject lest I should be thought to be "putting on airs." This is just what the goddess who is popularly supposed to preside over this department of nature in this vicinity, has been doing for some months past. In the early autumn she shone and smiled upon us so ardently and even persistently, that not only vegetation yielded to her fascination, and fruit and vegetables came to a precarious and false maturity, but the little brooks and rivulets were beguiled from their duty of supplying the lakes and reservoirs, so that we have ever since been put upon short allowance, by our prudent water commissioners, and so have labored under the inconvenience of a threatened drouth. This fickle weather nymph (she certainly must be of the feminine persuasion,) has paid little regard to the prognostications of the knowing ones who insisted that we must have a stormy and unpleasant winter to atone for our glorious autumn, and we have had what is called an "open winter," without a single old-fashioned snow storm as yet. What snow we have had, has come in small instalments just enough to give us a dash of sleighing, and tantalize stable keepers and others, whose horses were getting restless in their stalls for want of exercise, and whose sleighs were far less likely to "wear" than to "rust" out. Scattered in promiscuously in this mild sunny season, have come some fearful cold days, and now and then old Boreas has bestirred himself and given us a gale which would do honor to South Jersey, and you know, Mr. Editor, that is no stinted praise. One of them blew down the water apparatus at New Worcester, which the city had erected at considerable expense to supply the temporary water deficiency from a pond in that vicinity.

Looking over the advertising columns of a daily not long since, I saw a notice of a course of lectures upon Astronomy, to be given in this city, by Dr. Joseph Treat, and at once recognized him as one of our old citizens and my childhood neighbors, and contributor to the poetical department of the S. J. REPUBLICAN under the administration of your predecessor. To be sure, I had only known him as plain Mr. Treat, but knowing the case with which titles are required in the literary and scientific world, I was not at all staggered by the Dr. or Professor, which were simultaneously affixed to his name. An engagement took me out of the city at the time, but I learn that his lectures were so little patronized, that he did not complete the course, and no doubt left with the impression that our aspirations are not heavenly. But the gentleman may console himself with the fact that his experience is only a repetition of that of many others who have lectured here this winter. For the first time since the institution of the Lyceum, the audiences in our lecture rooms have been thin and comparatively unappreciative, and Mechanics' Hall, which in former years has hardly been able to hold the crowds which thronged to hear any one of our first-class lecturers, has only been completely filled once this season, and that was on the occasion when John B. Gough lectured in the Temperance course.

Yours, C.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs,

such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping

Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has any thing been so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a course of years, and among most of the races of men, it has been higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its untold character and power to cure the various diseases of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effective remedy that can be given for impetuous consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as it is sometimes subject to colds and coughs, it should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When well used it could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

For a Cough and Cold, no better remedy can be had. Take small doses three times a day and put the feet in warm water at night, until the disease is broken up.

For Influenza, when it affects the throat and lungs, take the same course.

For Whooping Cough, give small doses three or four times a day.

For Croup, give large and frequent doses until the disease is overcome.

No family should be without the Cherry Pectoral on hand to protect them, in case of attack from the above complaints. Its timely use often spares the patient a great amount of suffering and which he would incur by waiting until he could get other aid. Parents, keep it in your house as the safeguard that arises. Live dear to you may be saved by it.

No generally are the virtuous knows, that we are not publish certificates of them here, or do not have assume the public that the best qualities are necessary are strictly maintained.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass., and sold all around the world.
