THE HUDSON SUPER SIX

An Engineering Marvel

Patented by Hudson Motor Company, December 28, 1915

The motor in the new Hudson Super-Six is a little motor, 3 1/2 x 5 inches,—bore and stroke. It is therefore economical of maintenance, and simple. A glance of comparison reveals instantly that it dominates the entire field of design.

You can understand it. It is so accessible that everything is exposed, yet within this little engine there is 78 horsepower, an increase of 80 per cent over the best sizes built of comparative size. This is efficiency.

In a test, with five passengers and the top and windshield up, it ran for an hour at the rate of 70.74 miles for the entire period.

From a standing start, changing through gears, it attained a speed of 50 m. p. h. in 16.2 seconds. Sixty miles an hour was attained in twenty-three seconds, with three people, and windshield up.

SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1916

People Must Now Pay Their Debts.

Nearly all the States have found it necessary to make laws compelling the "careless delinquent" or "dead beat" to pay his honest debts. The Legislature of New Jersey has passed an act providing for the attachment of money due an individual and by order of the District Court to cause a stipulated sum, sufficient to cover the debt with court costs, etc., to be deducted from money due him as wages, salary or income until the proved claim of the creditor is satisfied.

This is called a "Garnishment" and when the Governor made this a law by affixing his signature he did it in favor of all the business people who have extended credit for household necessities, groceries, etc., in good faith, only to be ignored when payment is due.

Many merchants have failed in business and lost everything accumulated through years of hard work and worry simply through having misplaced their confidence and trusted people who would not pay. This act need not alarm the honest man whose good character is known to the business people he owes, for no honest man need fear the law, and no business man would invoke the law in his behalf against a debtor whom he knew to be conscientiously trying to pay for value received. All honest people will be glad to know that the new law is very drastic, and will where used, compel others to do right by the ones who have befriended them with credit.

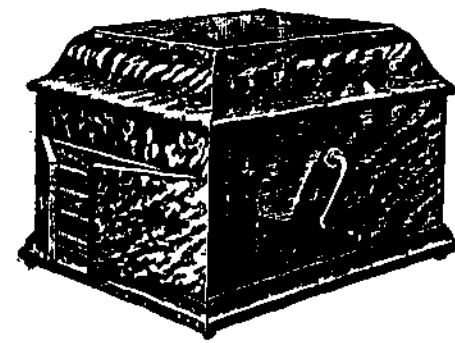

In regard to that delayed fire alarm from Elm, last week, the Keystone has no connecting wire from that point to Hammonton; hence the message had to be sent to Haddonfield, thence to Camden, thence to Hammonton. Then the operator, not knowing whether our local apparatus would be taken so far away, had to hunt up the fire chief, who together delaying the alarm a half hour. In our comment, last week, we did not know which phone brought the word. Only about two miles of wire are required to connect the Keystone, and many users of the Local would appreciate the accommodation.

The past few weeks of freeze and thaw have played havoc with roads all over the country, and we feel it especially in and around Hammonton. On some streets the ruts are six inches or more deep, and between the frozen ruts and horse tracks it is dangerous to horses and auto tires. Everyone who has to use the streets is willing to pay his share toward the proposed extension of the splendid new paving on lower Bellevue.

As a sample of the mischievous tendencies of some folks, we mention that a motor driver found five empty milk bottles deliberately placed in the wagon ruts on one of our much traveled streets. There was a chance for several ruined auto tires, with neither fun nor profit to the rascals. We are told that this is becoming altogether too common; and there being a severe penalty provided by state law, some one will get into trouble.

"School's out" is not hailed with as much glee by those who have been attending the six weeks course in agriculture, as 'tis by the small boy in June. The course has been of immense value to growers of all kinds, and Professor Armstrong and the County Demonstrator have found a warm spot in many a farmer's heart. We hope the course will be repeated. Of course, the Friday evening class will be continued.

INTERESTING CARTOON CO. N.Y.

WITH her brows knit in deep thought, Sarah Jane Polson sat by the table in her bare little room. Books, paper and pencil were arranged in a neat pile before her.

"It's not because I'm really stupid that I can't think of anything to write," she said to herself bitterly. "It's because I'm too tired."

All that Saturday morning she had swept and cooked, and washed dishes and kept her younger brothers and sisters in order. Now it was late in the afternoon, and as she picked up the pencil and made meaningless marks on the paper before her, her mouth drooped hopelessly at the corners.

Her worn face was flushed and tear-stained in her eyes.

"Sarah, dear," she asked in low sweet, gentle voice, "do you suppose you could get supper? I know you are a good girl, and I am sure you can find [I've such a headache! The twins have been so bad to-day! There's cold meat and potatoes; it won't take long."

"Mother, Sarah cried, "you ought to give those twins a good whipping!"

"No, no, my dear," said the mother in pained better. O dear," she went on in a disappointed tone, "I'd just begun—"

She looked at her mother—the gentle little mother who was so frail and yet so strong, whose heart had been filled with sudden tenderness. "Why, mother, of course I will. You go right into your bedroom and tie down, and don't you dare show yourself again to-day!"

Jumping up, Sarah threw her arms affectionately round her mother. "I'll get dinner and supper and breakfast and everything else you want, and I'll be in and dinner and supper, world without end."

At night, Sarah remembered how mother's eyes had lighted with infirmity when father told her about the customers who had come into the store that day, about little, barefoot Susan who had ridden a nail into her foot, who she had passing the door to the house that was building down the road.

On hearing that last bit of news, mother had said, "I must go to sleep. I have a million things to do to do for Susan's foot."

Florence and Mary had told her about a pretty hat, just the kind that she wanted, that they had seen in the window of a millinery shop downtown.

"We'll try to manage," mother had said, each of her girls' mother had said, with a cheerful smile. "Perhaps we could steal that old, half-worn velvet cape of mine, buy a bit of ribbon and make a new one."

And then, after a long, unfruitful, un-nated discussion of ways and means, How pleased and delighted mother had been when Sarah told her that of the room. She felt strangely lonely as her feet seemed scarcely to touch the floor. When she first began to move, she could not tell whether any sound was coming from her lips or not; and as she read on she seemed to feel that she was being watched and judged upon her, and her voice became stammering. The famous professor of Literature leaned forward in his chair. The president of the board of education, the president of the board of trustees, and the pompous and important.

As Sarah took her seat, Anne whispered to her, "Oh, Sarah! that was it! It's me! I'm sure that you'll take the prize this year." Every eye was upon the professor, and he looked at Anne with a stern expression. The board of education as they left the room in order to make the important decision. In the silence that followed, the pupils' faces were a look of devotion.

"See!" whispered Anne, touching Sarah's arm. "They're coming in to look at already! Didn't take them long!"

Nicknames are more often acquired, perhaps, by military men than by other class. Some of these titles have been bestowed upon martial heroes, writers and statesmen, but the most of them are the pen names by which the leaders were known in the ranks of the common soldiery. Many of the names were first assumed when the men became historic.

General Anthony Wayne, the conqueror of hostile Indians, has become famous as "Mad Anthony."

Francis Pickens was first called "Old Bull" during the Revolution by Major Andrew British spy, in a poem called, "Cow-Chase." The poem was of humorous character, and detailed the names of the men that were supposed to scuffle and forage, chiefly the Tories. Wayne had charge of expedition, but did not meet with

A husband who had dined and too well finds his way home a few small hours. He reaches the library just as he hears his wife at the head of the stairs leading to the bedroom. He reaches for the library shelves, into a big easy chair, and his book spread on his lap as he reads.

"John, what are you doing in this hour?" she asks.

"Just reading, dear. This book has been in the library five years."

"What? You mind books? You read it. To-night I'm going to take it. Don't worry, dear. You go to bed. I continue reading."

The wife, in tones of mingled surprise and indignation, replies:

"John, close that draught-board game to bed at once."

THE CHINESE COVERS.

...is that help give charm to the Essential Furnishings.

THE bedroom-dressing-room should be a comfortable bed with bedside table for reading light, a chest of drawers, a well-lighted dressing table and several easy chairs. These are the essential things supplied by a chaise-longue and a pier. If, possible, it does not take a great outlay of money to make a bed, charming and reposeful, as white cover is within the reach of all. A bed of cane is attractive, but not more so than the wooden furniture. Rag rugs and those of wool, and a decorative mirror, velvet over this completely, after painting with a box-painted skirt of cretaceous green, and a skirt of cretaceous green. For the mirror—any cheap-framed mirror may be taken apart and the mirror glass removed, and the frame covered with the figured material. Also, you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have done a thing that is not quite out of the ordinary. The top of the dressing table may be painted in a plain tint or covered to match the skirt. The skirt may be made of a piece of plain, heavy glass cut to fit top, insuring distinctness always. The skirt may be made of a material that is a smooth enameled finish, and a plain linen cover over it. Perhaps you would like to have more of a green tint, and a green dressing table. The wall paper is a green in a grey chamber, the floor rug is a green in a grey chamber, the skirt is a piece of green in the border. The oak furniture has been painted French grey, as has the wall paper. The woodwork, including the floor, is a green, and it forms a lovely, neutral background for the green of the skirt and chest of which the window probably tell me they are sanitary, but not any more so than the others. The color and the material of my color and are preferable. As one of our foremost decorators says: "If you can't get a wooden bed to keep it so, a wooden bed that has some relation to the rest of your furniture is the best possible compromise. A little better than a cot." There is never an excuse for a brass one. Indeed, I think we have three most glaring errors we make in the selection of chairs, curtains and brass beds. The truth that the "glitter of brass appeals to the untrained eye."

The Day Bed.

JUST the other day a business woman who makes her home in a room in a boarding house, was deploring the lack of a day bed. After consulting the janitor, she was told that it happened that a reception room on the first floor of the boarding house which she occupied had been turned over to a physician. As she had no place to receive any one, she had to go to the physician's frankly and apparently a bedroom, she hated to do it. There are so many the mattress is made from heavy taffeta and the bolsters are covered with a pleasing and decorative piece of furniture. Now, why buy an iron bed—a single one—and make a bed of straw? Why not buy a bed which would make a cover for it of cretonne with a box plaited ruffle coming down all around and cover the small bolsters.

In second-hand shops you can pick up a bookcase with drawers underneath, which, with the aid of a painter, will be worth the price of a new one. A shell-bureau. Think how attractive you could make your room with cheap furniture. A bedstead with a cane head, a rug of plain blue or gray or rose, combined with your gray day-bed, bureau and several other chairs. An attractive room. A bedstead with a cane head, chair cushions and day-bed cover would cost very little. This curtain of white cretonne might be made to look like a curtain of blue. Your day maybe you might be able to add little window boxes for flowers. It would be a real joy to own such a room. You could have a rug of blue or red and all the accessories you might have to make up a room like this.

This image shows a blank, aged, cream-colored page, likely an endpaper or flyleaf of a book. The paper has a slightly textured appearance with some minor discoloration and faint horizontal lines near the top edge. The right edge of the page is dark, indicating the binding or the edge of the book.

A LITTLE ROMANCE

"Robby" inquired the mother, "did you wash your face before the music teacher came?"

"Yes, ma."

"And your hands?"

"Yes, ma."

"And your ears?"

"Well, ma," said Robby, judiciously.

"I wanted the one that would be next to her."

Two travelers unknown to each other were chatting familiarly.

"On your way to Monte Carlo, sir, that delightful and exclusive home for gamblers?"

"Yes, it is exactly where I'm going."

"And you will play just a little, I suppose?"

"I do nothing else, sir; it is my business."

"Be cautious! You don't mean to say you make a business of it?"

"Yes, sir; twice a day regularly, and I never by any chance lose."

"That's certainly with pleasure; I will do the violin."

"There is more pleasure in giving than receiving," was the proverb that a mother was trying to instill into the mind of her child.

"That's true about castor oil mother," was the answer she got.

"My dear," remarked Judy, who had just finished reading a book on the wonders of Nature, "this really is a wonderful world. Nature is marvellous! Stupendous! When I read it I feel like this it makes me think how puny, how insignificant is man."

"I don't want to read that stuff," said a woman down the road to the same thing, 400 pages to find out the same thing.

The teacher was earnestly exhorted the boys in her class to endeavor to grow up honorable men, reminding them that "a good name is better than riches."

"Now, boys," she inquired, "what did you learn to have to prove to your eyes are men?"

And several voices simultaneously answered:

"None!"

"This book," said Edith, "is a piece of dismay at the curfew and closet of one shelf, I imagine Blinky used to call it 'I don't' retorted Beth; 'for everything.'"

"And everything out of place," Edith ironically, "is the shelf of cold cream of course it's there!"

"Yes, 'You see, I had to do for everything. See that package there? That's a towel I promised to give Mrs. Ames. She has so poor thing! And that little is something I promised to give my children the next day here."

"Those books in the corner I borrowed from Leah's room, and when I seen that shelf I am reminded that I have them, and must return them the first opportunity. That is why I shall give to Mrs."

"What do you want?" asked White, leaning back in his chair.

"Is it?" asked the oddball at the desk.

"Why, your refer to me?"

"Very well," answered the citizen, "I accept the apology now! I don't know how that fool man came to set the word down like that!"

"Added the editor, "I was robbed!" very plainly.

The late Valerie White, in her memoirs, records some of her three stories, one of which is stereotypically American.

"One fair day a city woman with fatigue, staggered small store to her door." Outnumberman was half asleep upon counter. She asked faint powder, whereupon the clerk slowly:

Included an admirably complete series of suggestions to parents and teachers, and a list of references. Give your child opportunities of wholesome activities and interests.

"Train your child to work steadily, to develop his own regular occupation until ability and talents, but to avoid idleness, and to be content by alternation of work and rest with the pleasures of play to the present situation.

"Train your child to arise early, to be cheerful, and to make his few important matters, and his duties in regard to the authorities.

Avoid conditions that tend to make him nervous, and to protect your child from fear, but not frighten him yourself or other people to do.

"Train your child a variety of games, and to be content, cooked, wholesome food in quantity at regular intervals.

"Train your child to avoid idleness, and to be content with his own work.

"Train your child to be healthy, to sleep in fresh air, giving plenty for the body, and to be clean than before the age of twelve.

If your child becomes worse, consult a physician.

Two automobiles came together with a crash, on Monday last; but fortunately no one was injured, though both machines were damaged. Stories are conflicting, but this one is told by an eye-witness. Leroy Jackson's car was coming down Bellevue, and W. L. Black's delivery car was going east on Horton Street, across Bellevue to Central, when they collided. The front and framework of Jackson's car was badly bent and broken; but Black's required two new rear wheels.

The next meeting of the Relief Work Committee will be held at the home of Mrs. Charles Layer, on Egg Harbor Road, Tuesday, March 7th, at two o'clock. Any donations of old linen, muslin, flannel, or turkish-towelings will be most acceptable; and every one interested in this work is cordially invited to be present.

Why it is to your interest to deal with us.

As we have kept constantly in touch with the different markets,
we could foresee the advance in prices of raw materials
so bought ahead, which enables us to sell most of our merchandise at former prices.

While others are compelled to advance their prices, we are able to sell our merchandise for less money;
and as our business, on a strictly cash
basis, has been very successful, we will continue to give customers our usual five per cent discount.
