There will be another of those "famous" suppers, prepared and served by the men, at the Universalist Church, in the near future. Watch for date.

There will be a district conference of the "Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage," at Strand Hotel, Atlantic City, on Tuesday afternoon next, three o'clock.

A County Christian Endeavor rally will be held next Friday eve, in Christ M. P. Church, Atlantic City, at 8 o'clock. A flag will be presented by the P. O. S. of A., to be used as an award for the society reporting the largest percentage of gain in efficiency, etc.

Walter L. Howard is not in the employ of the Children's Home of Egg Harbor. Capt. Johnson and his wife will do their own collecting hereafter. Because of the bad weather and roads, their wagons have been unable to come up for donations of clothing, etc.

Probably on account of clogged chimney, smoke backed into the house of John Woolbert, out on Eleventh Street, and caused two alarms to be sent in for help, about 2.05 on Thursday afternoon. The down-town company, and a dozen jitneys, went out over the rough roads, and after a search, found the place; but there was nothing for them to do.

Mr. H. R. Crowley's house, at First Road and Eighth Street, was again entered by burglars, last week. Mr. C. secured evidence enough against a near-by Italian, Polippo DeBillo, to procure a search-warrant, and on Monday Constable Pinto found many of the stolen goods in the accused man's house. He was arrested, and held in bond by Justice Strouse, for Grand Jury action.

At a pigeon shoot at Freehold, N. J., on the 17th ult., Arthur C. King, C. I., of Tom's River, son of Chas. S. King, Esq., and grandson of A. J. King, Esq., of Hammonton, broke 184 clay pigeons, consecutively, breaking the world's record,—it having been 163 before. He broke 198 out of 200 shots, and won the champion's cup and $300 premium. He is a Hammonton boy, born at the home of his grandfather.

Miss K. Anna Ramsey died last Saturday, in Bristol, Pa. With her father, sister and brother, she resided in Hammonton for years, being a teacher in our schools and in this vicinity. She went to Bristol years ago, and long held a position in their city schools. Her remains were brought to Hammonton on Wednesday, and buried in Oak Grove Cemetery. The family were universally respected here.

The treasurer's report showed a fine sum in bank toward their new organ.

A committee was appointed to try certain instruments in Philadelphia, with a view of buying. Meetings will be held each month at the members' houses.

THE HUDSON SUPER SIX

An Engineering Marvel

Patented by Hudson Motor Company, December 28, 1915

The motor in the new Hudson Super-Six is a little motor, 3 1/2 x 5 inches,—bore and stroke. It is therefore economical of maintenance, and simple. A glance of comparison reveals instantly that it dominates the entire field of design.

You can understand it. It is so accessible that everything is exposed, yet within this little engine there is 78 horsepower, an increase of 80 per cent over the best sizes built of comparative size. This is efficiency.

In a test, with five passengers and the top and windshield up, it ran for an hour at a rate of 70.74 miles for the entire period.

From a standing start, changing through gears, it attained a speed of 50 m. p. h. in 16.2 seconds. Sixty miles an hour was attained in twenty-three seconds, with three people, and windshield up.

JOHN ISN'T like a second son to me. He doesn't act a bit as if he had expected him to, after he and Helen were married." The Old Fashioned Widow's tone was not exactly playful. But it seemed so to the ears of the Modern "maison" who said: "What possible fault can you find with John's treatment of you? Isn't he providing you with all the luxuries and comforts that you ever had in your own home?"

prospect of having his own home with a governor factor in his marriage. He will covetous meet Yama, regret to be at the head of an establishment, however plain it may be. And it's a perfectly natural instinct to grow more and more the strictly materialist after meeting the straitlaced wife, from the disavowal of that long-madness, to the permanent existence of the establishment, around the husband of his

"Yes," he admitted, the mother-in-law gradually.

"I'm not at home," she said. "I'm not at his head."

"Certainly you're not at his head!" exclaimed the other woman, laughing merrily a great deal. "Don't make your visit too long."

"A guest! Stay too long!" ejaculated the Old-Fashioned Widow, while her face looked as though it were already stamped by her lifelong friend.

"Why, that's my permanent house here! That master was very generous when I came here, and I am here now, when I have been often engaged to leave him."

"If none of them ever leaves me," cried the Old-Fashioned Widow, exclaiming to herself that Helen would never have consented to marry John.

"Any dutiful daughter would want her widowed mother to live with her!" The manner of the "wedded mother" was so talking, so convincing.

"Helen didn't demand anything unbecom from John."

The other woman promptly agreed to the latter portion of the remark.

"Helen's demand was not an unusual one, much as the other woman found it unreasonable. She knew, as well as did John's friends, that he married for the money."

"There! There!" she exclaimed impatiently. "What's excited me. We all know that he's been a miser."

"For years," the other woman replied. "That he had scarcely looked at any other girl. Nevertheless the

"Then you think it should now be his own turn to be loved and to love?"

"I think that you should be living with your own mother. Helen's suffering what I know to support it. There would not be any excuse for you to be lonely or forlorn because the other woman who would be glad to attend to her comfort with you."

"The woman could take the place of Helen," complained the other.

"You mean a stranger could take the place of a daughter?"

"The place of a daughter, not the place of a woman whom we both knew would be a comfort to you."

"I am leaving Helen to her fate," Helen's husband's non-plussed attitude toward you. Such women would lead you to believe that they were the only women whose only child had been dead something more than the position

BLACKMAIL

WELL, you've seen it. Sit—sit—You know all possibilities; it's up to you to make good."

The Kaffirs, having unshipped their loads, had kindled a fire; and in its circle of safety the two white men lay and smoked and talked.

"That's all right!" krautist Dick

"Dirty business!" growled Simola. "I placed the other to talk, and you a good listening."

"Dirty! I tell you! hanging to go for such swarrows. Dicks! steering—back—through—through—could let daylight find a bit of about transactions. Plenty of talk about the disaffected Dutch in the Doldo some time back. That's all right. Dicks say a few of 'em were all smarting from the old nose—only he man nature. But what's fostered the what's kept it upmost. I should think they'd be all right."

Stearns: "What about yourself?"

"I?" Hurvey Morison relighted his pipe with some new Kentucky cane.

"Well, we're not boys, that's plain. I won't be fetch 'Ponahlonga' again. I'm hooked for another destination."

"Oh, rat! Nothing of the sort! You must try to be back at night."

"This isn't the first time of fever you've had."

"No. But I'll know it as well as I do, sonny. You're likely to be as late, also. And I've had a good deal of this 'only one thing that rankles' business. I want to meet Ambrose Stearns again just to tell him to his face what a swellhead he is. I stuck his dirty gold!" And Ambrose Stearns' knee moved about it then any self-proclaimed Brithaker ought to! Sell him for twenty per cent., would you?"

"Secured?" "Well, yes, purely, rat, rat. Let's turn him!"

Stearns and his companion then climbed up six months earlier. Stearns' was a farmer near Ponahlonga, Stearns, a mining engineer, and he is known in one of his wanderings, he struck the patch of rich ground where they were now camped, and the pair had trekked up country to view it with an eye to the future.

Never, however, claimed Northness; as the homeward journey languished

"It was under the One Key notation
"Go over it, and report, Morton?"
he told me. I was manhandling myself at the time. "Give it a good haul," you know the style of thing and I put you down for a couple of hundred shaves?"

"But the place is here!" I said.
"There isn't an ounce of gold to be seen."

"Pooh! What does that matter?"
he answered. "A big constance don't flourish in this climate, Morton. Cut ivate your lunchtable! It says here!"

"Perhaps, but I don't like the man. There are limits, you know that."

"Oh, well, men in my employ have to obey orders. If they don't, they're fired. That's straight, isn't it? And I want a good man to take the place of black, with your name at the head of it, in a week from now. Under stand?"

"Well, I think to be fired, it makes no difference, of course. They brought over a college swell from England, and his report drew pots of money from the mugs who read it. Heering and life was braced up to a beautiful acrop; and I found myself with an easy conscience and nobjah."

"I don't know how you got on," said I, "but I know how, and sure day please God." "There were fast men, and he broke off hastily."

"You'll wait?"

"To the end of the world, [laughter]"

That whisper, thrilled back on me, suddenly, had been very precious to me. It had bridged many chances, and I had been through dozens of changes in the years that followed. Now, with potential wealth in his pocket, he had reached the point from which to leave his life. He was to be a man of affairs, with all the abilities and talents. Newspapers were scarce at Pankajabad, news of

"Do I know? Yes—a lot. But I don't know how to tell you. I've got a lot of lines of poetry sent to remember that at the case. The mills of God grind slowly, yet they grind exceeding fine; and who knows how close the doors are shut? Only he that knows—to think—to collect myself. You've knocked me all in a heap. Well Olivo says that's the way to get the news. God willing! One more question. I hardly like to put it. How much does your father owe—or from?"

"A matter of twenty-five or thirty thousand, I believe—not more," said Olivo. "I'll tell you the rest later, or present. You've given me lots to think about—a world of hope!" That's in his hotel, Sinclair sat long.

"Steady! Yes, my name's Sinclair. It condenses up unpleasant memories, no doubt. You and I were colleagues not many years ago. You have not forgotten me, have you? I'm glad our acquaintance terminated."

"You bided to escape arrest for embezzlement, I think," was the sneering answer.

"I don't recall it," I put. "I've only just learned, greatly to my surprise, that I haven't done so. I wanted to save another man a third person was guilty enough."

"What the deuce are you saying? Have dare you lunked me in to this fashion?"

"I'm not sure of his capacity. The finest housewife does the same to me in her home. All efficient human beings are accomplishing the greatest things in the world, and I am not sure which they are placed. All efficient animals are doing the same thing which I am."

"And upon what does this ability to accomplish depend in man?"

"In the brain," he answered.

"And why, when the horse, the cat, the dog, and all other animals are fitted for the special purpose of an efficient development, is the greatest of them being, no more, than a classically neglected?"

"It has been my privilege and pleasure

"I shall leave you when I'm ready, and that is not yet. Seriously, father, I advise you not to bind any further. It's waste of time. As I told you, the family's up. And I know enough about you to make me convinced that ultimately we shall part on my terms not yours."

"Why are you talking loudly? Do you think I'm afraid of menaces? Good heavens, man, I've not your father before!"

"I think you have little desire to see the inside of a prison or to feel the hangman's axe," said the young man. "Similarly was deliberate. He planned to let the words have their fair church decorated, bridegroom and all the rest of it?"

"No," replied the other, slowly; "was an eloquent."

"An eloquent? Oh, you romantic man! And did the bride father how you?"

"The said-fared man heard a de light he answered:

"Yes, and he's been with us all object!"

From Office Boy to Owner of Great International Business, He Is Anxious to Try His Hand at Being the "People's Manager" of New Jersey's $15,000,000 Annual Business.

(From the Trenton Sunday Times-Advertiser.)

"Sound business principles applied to the administration of the public government of New Jersey—a fifteen million dollar annual business turnover."

That, in a line, will be the shibboleth of Senator Walter Evans Edge, of Atlantic County, in his campaign for the office of Governor—a shibboleth that has guided the entire private and public life of the Senator.

Senator's Views.

Discussing his political ambition the other day, the Senator said, "I haven't the time or the inclination to assume such a responsibility and I can render much more than a mere political service." I believe implicitly in party organization and in government by parties, but I believe that the governor of New Jersey ought to be more than the titular leader of his party. I believe he ought to be the business manager, if you like, of the government of New Jersey—the business agent of all the people, regardless of partisan affiliation.

ma exposition, came out promptly and frankly in a number of public speeches pleading for the people of New Jersey to support President Wilson loyally in the crisis with Germany.

In reply to a question concerning the lines along which he would apply business principles, he was the governor of the state, the monitor outlined his policies briefly, succinctly, clearly.

He said: "Of course, my chief reason to be governor is because of the splendid honor which is conferred on that man who is given the privilege of officiating in the highest office of the state, the office of the great state of New Jersey; and because of the desirable record which I feel that I have made."

Of course, much more was said, but the governor was very few minutes late in his appearance and the time was precious. The interesting wedding
