STRUCTURE OF CHRISTIAN FAITH

The text was from II Kings 11:2: "And Elisha said unto Elisha, 'Tarry here, I pray thee; for the Lord hath sent me to Bethel.' And Elisha said unto him, 'As the Lord liveth and as my soul liveth, I will not leave thee.' So they went down to Bethel."

We are to do our work for making the world wherever and whenever opportunity comes, but first of all in the place where we are living. If we are to do our work for making the world wherever and whenever opportunity comes, but first of all in the place where we are living. If we are to do our work for making the world wherever and whenever opportunity comes, but first of all in the place where we are living.

But Elisha also needed the friendship and training and spirit of his friend, as will be seen from the request, "Let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me." His devotion was one of the marked traits of Elisha. Loyalty to the cause for which Elisha stood in Israel and for the truth shown in the elder prophet's spirit and work is the spirit here manifest in Elisha.

Loyalty is the keynote in the arch of Christian faith without which the whole superstructure falls away and decays. It is important that we keep in mind this fact of our religion. The foundation of loyalty rests upon hope that He who speaks "in the still small voice" has a place for each in His plan of work. God is working out His lives according to the divine pattern, and the great end is the salvation of every individual soul. The Christian life is the appeal of every one to be loyal to God and our Leader, Jesus Christ. All who are faithful to the divine pattern are faithful to the cause of divine truth. This spirit and appeal of the gospel are intensified by the fact that the loyalty which we owe to God is also loyalty to the cause of divine truth. This spirit and appeal of the gospel are intensified by the fact that the loyalty which we owe to God is also loyalty to the cause of divine truth.

God is the one source of victory over the principles and powers of evil. The Leader, Jesus Christ, and the ever-living Spirit, transforming the power of the gospel—these are the source of salvation from sin and shame.

As Elisha was determined to remain loyal to his master, Elisha declaring with an oath "as the Lord liveth and as my soul liveth, I will not leave thee," so the Christian who is a devoted disciple of Christ will not leave his place of duty nor his field of service. Like Bethel, this decision of Elisha is the most striking evidence of the love and devotion of a younger person to an elder, of a disciple to his master, of a man loyal to the man and his cause. We have therein a good illustration of the spirit that should prompt the congregation to be loyal to the cause of the church, and the church to be loyal to the man and his cause. LESSONS FROM OUR LORD'S RESURRECTION

See last chapters of the Gospels and I Cor. 15

Perhaps the most striking fact brought out in the records of our Lord's resurrection is the unrestrained joy of His disciples to believe in it. He had "warned them that He would be put to death and had promised that He would rise again on the third day." (See Mark 8:31; Luke 24:7, 21; John 10:17, 18), yet in spite of this warning and promise the crucifixion of their Master was evidently a great disappointment to them, and it perplexed their minds so greatly that they did not know what to think. They had seen the body of their Master, and He had permitted us to go on to the place where they called him. Now God has permitted us to set up our tabernacle and display our banners for the time being, and we are to be faithful to the promise of the Lord. We are to be faithful to the promise of the Lord. We are to be faithful to the promise of the Lord.

And one reason for this unrestrained joy of the disciples to believe in the resurrection of Jesus was that He appeared to them in unexpected ways. He proved to them that He was really, then in the body, and not an apparition, by eating and drinking with them (see Acts 10:41) and by writing the doubting among them to put his finger into the print of the nails in His hands and to thrust his hand into His wounded side. But He did not live with them as He had done before His crucifixion. He appeared among them and to some of them as individuals, respectively, but in a mysterious way, coming as it seemed from nowhere, and disappearing in the same way, and that gave an air of mystery to His appearance which perplexed them greatly.

What was our Lord's purpose in visiting His disciples only in this way? No authoritative answer can be given to this question, but we know that our Lord had a definite purpose in everything that He did and we know that every act of His was intended to teach us something. It is our duty therefore to try and learn some helpful lessons from our Lord's appearances after His resurrection.

One thought which Jesus seems to have desired to present to the minds of His disciples is that although not visible He was always near them. "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." He said before finally disappearing from them in cloud. (Mat. 28:20; Acts 1:9.) That is a good lesson for us, at all events.

Another lesson we can learn is that we must not expect the Lord to do things in the ways that may seem to us best or most likely.

There is one very tender and suggestive detail in connection with our Lord's resurrection. It is that before any of the disciples had seen Him, He sent through an angel a special message to Peter—his closest friend and the one who was to lead the church. He sent him with a message, and he was to lead the church. He sent him with a message, and he was to lead the church. He sent him with a message, and he was to lead the church.

God is the one source of victory over the principles and powers of evil. The Leader, Jesus Christ, and the ever-living Spirit, transforming the power of the gospel—these are the source of salvation from sin and shame.

As Elisha was determined to remain loyal to his master, Elisha declaring with an oath "as the Lord liveth and as my soul liveth, I will not leave thee," so the Christian who is a devoted disciple of Christ will not leave his place of duty nor his field of service. MEXICO'S CRATER LAKE

HOW HATS ARE MADE

It is an interesting matter to follow stage by stage the evolution of the hat from the simple animal skin to the elaborate and costly material.

The more words "crater lake" carry with them a charm and mystery that are akin to romance. Mexico has a number of these lakes, but the most beautiful is the one in the state of Oaxaca, a little town of the name of Guadalupe, about four miles from the most perfect and beautiful of such lakes.

The village nestles among steep slopes, and the lake is reached by a series of steps. The water is of a deep blue color, and the surrounding slopes are covered with dense forest. THE JOY OF TINTED GLASSWARE IN THE HOME

(By Elsie Carlton Taylor)

Truly, and without exaggeration, we may say that the vogue for tinted glassware is one of the brightest spots in these grim war-time days. These classic shapes, these fantasies of glass, are by far the loveliest that we have had in many a long day. And what a relief to the eye and mind, coming as it does after that atrocious epidemic of overcolored and overdecorated glassware, whose ugliness, indeed, spoke nothing but a deadly message to the eye and mind.

But this colored glassware is not new. Way back we read that the ancients were highly skilled glass artists; Nero himself, being a keen collector of glass, Italy has probably bequeathed us the very finest examples, for the Venetian glassware, now so difficult to procure, stands apart from Bohemian and Austrian glassware in its variegated and imitable beauty. The Venetians, too, added to the colored glass effects of the Venetian glassware, the "cristallo" or "cristallo" glass, which until that time was practically unknown. Another feature which accounts for the particular favor accorded the Venetian glass is its extraordinary lightness.

Now that it is well-nigh impossible to obtain the real old Venetian glass, we have right here in America a reason for the native glass which is being blown to the depth of one-eighth of an inch with this tinted and saturated, which is now becoming felt. The machine is stopped, the cone is raised, and the workman extrudes a pool of the felt covering. Being built up on the cone, it is also cone-shaped, and looks like a giant sugar-loaf. It is the embryo hat.

In this first state it is a soft, wet felt cone, measuring twenty-four inches by thirty inches. It is covered with a series of processes and shrunk together so that it measures 10-12 by 14 inches.

Almost any room in the house will be glorified by the addition of tinted glassware. Yes, every room—even to the bathroom! For here we have a beautiful, preening glass as a tooth-brush holder, soap dish, tumbler and bathroom bottles of tinted glass with gay flowers of glass blooming on the stoppers.

At the top of the page are four pieces of engraved crystal with touches of vivid color. The fifth piece is a bon-bon holder of wistaria glass, with natural-colored top part.

In the second picture the two containers are black glass decorated with white lines and dots of bright lemon-tops with green leaves. The central fruit compote is of amber glass.

In the third picture the first container is of amethyst glass with clear crystal trimmings. The second is a pink opaque vase of classic lines, with black glass handles. In the center is an engraved crystal flower holder and bonbon dish with touches of blue glass, glass and clear crystal with lacquer top. The fifth piece is a very ornate combination of amethyst.

AMERICAN NAVAL HEROES

The American warship Philadelphia

blasted into Tripoli harbor last on the heels of a pirate schooner. In the chase she ran upon an uncharted rock and stuck there, helpless. The Tripolitans boarded the unlucky vessel, making a prize of her, and imprisoning her captain and crew. A young naval officer—Stephen Decatur—valiantly rescued the ship and crew, and the American flag was again seen flying from the ship's mast.

He renamed the ship the Intrepid, manned it with seventy-four volunteers, and set out on a mission of revenge. He captured the pirate schooner, and the American flag was again seen flying from the ship's mast.

HOW REUTER BEGAN

An interesting story of how Reuter, the founder of the famous agency for foreign news, began his life work appears in Mr. Richard Whittington's book, "Harvest." Reuter went to the Daily News, in the office of which he was employed, and he was to lead the church. He sent him with a message, and he was to lead the church. THE KNOWING MOON

EARLY SATISFIED

The New York Times says that a certain John Williams had been told that he was to receive a commission as a broken bargain. The witness called to give evidence was one Henry Collins. He was asked by the examining lawyer, "You know the defendant in this case, do you not?" "Oh, yes," answered Mr. Collins. "What is his reputation for veracity?" "He is a man who never tells the truth," replied the lawyer. "What is his reputation for honesty?" "He is a man who never tells the truth," replied the lawyer.

Monuments, Headstones and Markers Finished and Ready to Letter for Decoration Day

— MAY 30th —

We have over 100 monuments, 300 headstones and markers and 400 corner posts at our show yards and wareroom that we can letter and erect before Memorial Day.

The largest and finest stock we ever carried. We purchased the material and manufactured this work before the prices advanced and are in a position to sell it as reasonable as work in our line will probably ever be sold again.

We also have on hand material to make 50 monuments and 100 headstones and are equipped to manufacture and erect anything wanted in our line.

Call at our yards in CAMDEN or PLEASANTVILLE and make your selection. It is being sold rapidly, and because of the war, it is impossible for dealers, who did not provide for their work last year, to fill orders for Memorial Day. WE are equipped to supply most anything in our line, and before Decoration Day.
