ELVINS & ROBERTS HAMMONTON, N. J.

You will excuse us, we feel assured, if our advertisement this week is not as interesting as usual, when we say that business has been so rushing we could not find time to prepare it.

We cut 3 cents per pound more from the price of Butter, but nothing from the quality, which is the finest we ever handled,—28 c.

Those Toast Crackers seem to fill the bill. Have you tried them? Best crackers they ever tasted, is the verdict of customers.

Did you get a sample package of Graham Flakes? If not, we are sorry; but call and buy a few—you'll want more,—simply delicious.

We add to our Fancy Grocery stock — Hasty Lunch Chocolate. As its name indicates, you can have a cup of the finest Chocolate at very short notice. Simply place a tablespoonful in a cup and pour boiling milk or water upon it. Then it's ready for the table. We guarantee the goods, and the price places it within the reach of all,—viz: 15 cents for a full half-pound tin.

Have you tried those Mackerel we mentioned some time since? If not, this is a good time to do so. No finer fish were ever caught,—white, fat, and appetizing. Note the price, 10 c. per pound.

To those who object to using lard, we can now offer Cottolene at an interesting price. We quote by the pound at 10 c.; in 3 or 5 pound tins at 11 c.

Those canned Peaches at 12½ cents are elegant goods. Try them.

Canned Salmon, 2 cans for 25 c., is very cheap, considering the quality,—fine solid red fish. We warrant them to please.

While there are many makes of Matches on the market, we think the Vulcan takes the lead. Boxes of 500 at 5 cents,—every match sure to light.

We keep the price of Rolled Oats at the cut price of last week,—3 cents per pound.

Yielding to numerous demands, we have put in a small lot of Cleveland Baking Powder, which we can fully guarantee to be equal to Royal or any other now on the market. When in need of Baking Powder, try Cleveland's.

Garden and Field Seeds all here; but at the rate they are moving out, will have to restock very soon. Depend on it, though, we shall endeavor to keep all the leading and most popular varieties constantly on hand. Remember, the price for small seed in large papers is 2½ cents per package,—warranted fresh and true to name.

Onion Sets.

Our sale of Onion Sets this year bids fair to exceed any previous one, being now nearly up to last season, and the demand constantly increasing. We quote at 15 cents per quart,—special price for large quantities.

Holton Rose Potatoes seem to be the leading variety for early seed this year. We have them in stock. Would be pleased to have your order for one bushel or more. $1.15 is the price. A little steep you say. But remember, this is genuine Maine stock.

Fertilizer.—We now have our ware-houses well filled, can furnish you anything you require in the line, viz: Mapes' Complete Manures.

Dried and Ground Fish Guano.

Fish and Potash.

Kainit.

Muriate of Soda.

Pure Bone.

Plaster, Dissolved Bone, etc.

Sole agents for this section for Taylor's Fertilizers. These fertilizers have become quite popular, giving good results wherever used, and the price is quite an object, being considerably lower than some others.

Garden Tools, Plows of all kinds, and Plow Repairs. Planet Junior Tools always in stock.

Mrs. Stanford seems to have some of the late Senator's business shrewdness, if she may judge from the manner in which she is playing the Southern Pacific railroad people.

If the liquor question was permanently out of Iowa politics some folks would find themselves without an occupation. Perhaps that may account for recent legislative happenings.

The more the Wilson bill is studied, the more clearly does it prove itself a Southern measure.

The Republican tariff policy was never more tersely stated than in the National platform of 1892—"That on all imports coming into competition with the products of American labor there should be levied duties equal to the difference between wages abroad and at home."

The U. S. Senate having refused to order an investigation of the sugar stock-jobbing charges against certain Senators—the whiskey-stock-jobbers appear to have grown bolder.

There is one point in common between the king of Belgium and Mr. Cleveland; they both neglect their official business to go on private pleasure trips.

Col. Breckenridge will discover, if we are not mistaken, that men of his age educational and social standing are not excusable when they deliberately offend against morality. The verdict of the court matters little in such a case; it is the verdict of respectable society that counts, and that was passed against Breckenridge when he confessed his relations with Miss Pollard for a period of nine years.

A Forty Mile Ride.—E. R. Sweetnam, of Fairfax Station, Virginia, says: "A party came forty miles to my store for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and bought a dozen bottles. The Remedy is a great favorite in this vicinity, and has performed some wonderful cures here." It is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup, and whooping cough, and is a favorite wherever known. For sale by A. W. Cochran, druggist.

HE WAS NOT AN ACTOR.

But his last performance was taken to the audience as a tragedy.

For several days the young boy had been hanging about the Chicago theater begging for a chance to prove his ability as an actor.

"My dear young man," said the manager, "when you have been given an interview, I would advise you to go home and study the stunts of the theater. There are too many actors already, while the stunts of the country have been too much neglected. I know that you feel hurt, but I think that after while you will give me your gratitude. Now don't tell me that thousands of young men have thrown their bones into the city to become great. I know all about that. You take my advice and go home."

"Your advice may be good," the young fellow replied, "but something tells me that I can act."

"But I tell you that you can't," "You haven't seen me try," "I have," said the manager, "and I have seen you fail. I have seen you fail in the four-act comedy entitled 'Painting the Lily,' but it could not be called a success. Only one bit of work was evident in your drawing room where a brilliant company was gathered together. He was a bumpkin, visiting the city for the first time. Upon entering the room—he was to show embarrassment, and then proceed to permit the company to have fun at his expense."

Before the manager could reply this persistent fellow spoke up.

"Let me take Smiley's place," he urged. "I can do anything you want. I want to show you that I'm an actor."

"All right," said the manager, "for a chance to cut your self and leave a name."

The time came. The young fellow, frightened out of his half-wits, waited to be called. Now he felt that the manager had given him straight advice. He had a swim—he heard a roar from the audience. He was summoned. He tottered and almost fell when he stepped upon the stage. He forgot his lines and in his red confusion he gazed like a lost soul at the audience. The host made him take a seat, and missing the chair, he sat on the floor. The audience fell from one side of the stage. The poor fellow was determined, in the depths of his eternal disgrace, to throw himself into the sea. He was taken up by a wagon run over him. The stage manager seized him by the hand.

"Turn me loose."

"My dear fellow, let me congratulate you. You've come back and bow to the audience and you're a wild. You have proved your genius. Come."

He was dragged forward and he blundered a bow. The audience shouted. The young fellow was covered that the man on board the approaching ship were French uniforms.

"You have come for me!" cried the ex-captain.

"The next morning his eyes bulged with astonishment. The new-nuptials had been given. He declared that he had given the most natural and delicious taste of acting ever seen on the Chicago stage. He was unquestionably a genius."

He went back to the theater that night. The manager bowed profoundly. "I thought you were a mere novice," said he, "but you are an artist."

The young fellow was swollen with pride. "I was not at my best last night," said he, "but to-night I will show you something."

That night he waited as a conqueror might wait. He was full of confidence, and when he was called, he smiled. Then he stepped out and began to act. The house greeted him with applause, but soon fell into silence. He sat down as though he had missed the chair, and the gallery tittered. He crept out of the theater, and the next morning the papers "roasted" him.

Humble Ministry.

It is a common mistake for all to wish to be leaders and teachers, and for people to shrink from humble ministry which is equally acceptable to the Master. He has given gifts differing to the various members of His church, and it is His will that they should be content to follow the diversity of their gifts, and instead of striving after the gifts which have been bestowed upon others. If each one would be content to use the talent or talents which God has entrusted to us, instead of trying to reach after a task for which we are not fitted, the work in God's kingdom would go much more smoothly and would prosper. God intended that each should do his own part. It is the wisdom which has made us able to differ, and we ought to be able to do the work which God has given us. It is for each member to do the work allotted to it and for which it is fitted. No work is too humble to do, and God appoints it for us, and the great and small are alike blessed ministry when done for His sake.

THE MARRIAGE MARKET IN DAHOMY.

All the female population of Dahomey belongs to the King, who sells a few, once a year, to any subject who can pay for them. The king's wives, if a wife is a subject, are sold to him as a subject's wife. The king's wives, if a wife is a subject, are sold to him as a subject's wife. The king's wives, if a wife is a subject, are sold to him as a subject's wife.

The candidate lays the sum of money at the King's feet, and the king receives in exchange a young girl, who is then sold to him as a subject's wife. The king's wives, if a wife is a subject, are sold to him as a subject's wife. The king's wives, if a wife is a subject, are sold to him as a subject's wife.

If any wife quarrels with her husband, and wishes to leave him, she is sold to an old custom who has a right to return to the King's palace. The present monarch is said to possess only a few hundred wives, but there have been Kings of Dahomey who possessed 3,000 consorts.

All the officials at the Court, when they enter the King's presence, lie on the ground and strike their foreheads on the floor, as a sign that they humbly themselves to the King. Even the chief Minister is compelled to crawl towards his sovereign's feet when he has a communication to make.

The women of Dahomey, after their marriage, lead a miserable life. They are never allowed to eat with their husbands, and receive any instruction he may wish to give them when they are in his presence with only his special permission.

Intervenor at Last.

Sentinel's have accomplished wonders of faithfulness and endurance, but the service of a sentinel on the island of Iguen, as reported by himself, is a more exacting task.

A detachment of the French General Davoust's army was stationed on the little island of Iguen. An order to leave it immediately was received, and the soldiers embarked and sailed away with the greatest haste. One man was forgotten.

He was on sentinel duty. Back he forth he marched for hours after he was told to leave. He forgot his lines and in his red confusion he gazed like a lost soul at the audience. The host made him take a seat, and missing the chair, he sat on the floor. The audience fell from one side of the stage. The poor fellow was determined, in the depths of his eternal disgrace, to throw himself into the sea. He was taken up by a wagon run over him. The stage manager seized him by the hand.

AMPHIBIOUS KAUKA BOYS.

For amphibious humanity commend me to the Kauka boys of Honolulu. It is a fact that the Kauka boys are now sold under the name of comfortable print. The barrels that pulverized sugar comes in are of good size for this purpose. Carefully break out all nails that project, both on the inside and outside. Line the inside of the barrel with smooth, brown paper, or remnants of wall-paper can be used, using flour paste to fasten the paper to the barrel. Cover the lid of the barrel, allowing four inches extra for the drill at the top. Join the pieces and run a strong thread around the lower edge to draw it on; fold over two inches at the top, and gather at the bottom. Draw this cover over the barrel, over the fullness, and secure it in place with small tacks. Place a two-inch band of silesia around the top and bottom of the barrel, hilt the tacks, cover the lid of the barrel, inside and out, with the print. Make a knob in the center of this lid by putting a screw through the hole in a medium-sized spool and screwing it down to the print. Cover the spool with silesia like the bands on the handle. This makes a neat "hilt" handy for place to keep rolled articles and each week when they are washed, the barrel is given a new "hilt" and is exposed to the sun and air.

Between spells of swimming they float around, resting as comfortably as if sunning themselves upon the beach. I have seen boys diving at St. Thomas, in the Bahamas, and in Brazil, but they never equal these Kauka boys. One of our Washington's Birthday aquatic sports were in order for the sailors on the different men-of-war. One of the events was a half mile swimming race. Long before the start a half dozen Kauka boys were sporting around in the water beside the boat where the sailors were to take their dive. Hard work did these men-of-war's little make of their struggle, but the men youths swam all round them, diving beneath the contestants, and coming up with a splash, and behind, only to come up again and cry from ear to ear at the men, who were blowing and snorting like grampuses. At the finish one sailor was so exhausted that he lay on his back, and the Kauka boys, who had been in the water for some time, came up and found the sailor dead. His company had departed in obedience to imperative orders.

He was on sentinel duty. Back he forth he marched for hours after he was told to leave. He forgot his lines and in his red confusion he gazed like a lost soul at the audience. The host made him take a seat, and missing the chair, he sat on the floor. The audience fell from one side of the stage. It is a common mistake for all to wish to be leaders and teachers, and for people to shrink from humble ministry which is equally acceptable to the Master. He has given gifts differing to the various members of His church, and it is His will that they should be content to follow the diversity of their gifts, and instead of striving after the gifts which have been bestowed upon others. If each one would be content to use the talent or talents which God has entrusted to us, instead of trying to reach after a task for which we are not fitted, the work in God's kingdom would go much more smoothly and would prosper. God intended that each should do his own part. It is the wisdom which has made us able to differ, and we ought to be able to do the work which God has given us. It is for each member to do the work allotted to it and for which it is fitted. No work is too humble to do, and God appoints it for us, and the great and small are alike blessed ministry when done for His sake.

A VERY SATISFACTORY RECEPTACLE FOR SOILED CLOTHES CAN BE MADE, SAYS THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN.

By covering a barrel with what used to be called furniture calico, and now sold under the name of comfortable print. The barrels that pulverized sugar comes in are of good size for this purpose. Carefully break out all nails that project, both on the inside and outside. Line the inside of the barrel with smooth, brown paper, or remnants of wall-paper can be used, using flour paste to fasten the paper to the barrel. Cover the lid of the barrel, allowing four inches extra for the drill at the top. Join the pieces and run a strong thread around the lower edge to draw it on; fold over two inches at the top, and gather at the bottom. Draw this cover over the barrel, over the fullness, and secure it in place with small tacks. Place a two-inch band of silesia around the top and bottom of the barrel, hilt the tacks, cover the lid of the barrel, inside and out, with the print. Make a knob in the center of this lid by putting a screw through the hole in a medium-sized spool and screwing it down to the print. Cover the spool with silesia like the bands on the handle. This makes a neat "hilt" handy for place to keep rolled articles and each week when they are washed, the barrel is given a new "hilt" and is exposed to the sun and air.

Between spells of swimming they float around, resting as comfortably as if sunning themselves upon the beach. I have seen boys diving at St. Thomas, in the Bahamas, and in Brazil, but they never equal these Kauka boys. One of our Washington's Birthday aquatic sports were in order for the sailors on the different men-of-war. One of the events was a half mile swimming race. Long before the start a half dozen Kauka boys were sporting around in the water beside the boat where the sailors were to take their dive. Hard work did these men-of-war's little make of their struggle, but the men youths swam all round them, diving beneath the contestants, and coming up with a splash, and behind, only to come up again and cry from ear to ear at the men, who were blowing and snorting like grampuses. At the finish one sailor was so exhausted that he lay on his back, and the Kauka boys, who had been in the water for some time, came up and found the sailor dead. His company had departed in obedience to imperative orders.

He was on sentinel duty. Back he forth he marched for hours after he was told to leave. He forgot his lines and in his red confusion he gazed like a lost soul at the audience. The host made him take a seat, and missing the chair, he sat on the floor. The audience fell from one side of the stage. The poor fellow was determined, in the depths of his eternal disgrace, to throw himself into the sea. He was taken up by a wagon run over him. The stage manager seized him by the hand.

"Turn me loose."

"My dear fellow, let me congratulate you. You've come back and bow to the audience and you're a wild. You have proved your genius. Come."

He was dragged forward and he blundered a bow. The audience shouted. The young fellow was covered that the man on board the approaching ship were French uniforms.

"You have come for me!" cried the ex-captain.

"The next morning his eyes bulged with astonishment. The new-nuptials had been given. He declared that he had given the most natural and delicious taste of acting ever seen on the Chicago stage. He was unquestionably a genius."

He went back to the theater that night. The manager bowed profoundly. "I thought you were a mere novice," said he, "but you are an artist."

The young fellow was swollen with pride. "I was not at my best last night," said he, "but to-night I will show you something."

That night he waited as a conqueror might wait. He was full of confidence, and when he was called, he smiled. Then he stepped out and began to act. The house greeted him with applause, but soon fell into silence. He sat down as though he had missed the chair, and the gallery tittered. He crept out of the theater, and the next morning the papers "roasted" him.

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure.

Mr. W. J. Wilson Suffered such agony from Rheumatism that he Considered Death Preferable to Life. He is Entirely Cured.

In reply to the question if he had been benefited by the use of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure, Wm. J. Wilson, 2815 Taylor St., Philadelphia, said: "I have had rheumatism for thirty years, and have suffered untold agonies; was completely discouraged, and felt that death was preferable to life in my suffering condition. My shoulders were so sensitive that even the weight of my coat caused me much pain. I tried everything I knew for relief, and spent hundreds of dollars in medicines, but found nothing that did me any good until I procured a bottle of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. Before I had taken half of it, I felt relieved. The pain disappeared after taking three doses, and I am now entirely free from suffering."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure never fails to relieve in three hours, and to cure in a few days.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Company put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cts. a bottle.
