At the arithmetic and spelling contest at May's Landing, last Saturday, the arithmetic problems were given to about fifty contestants, and collected in twelve minutes. Only eight completed papers were handed in, six of them from Hammonton pupils,—their prizes
being as follows: Esther Varella, second, $3; Tony Apalucca, third,
$2; George Rivins, Jennie Ruber-
ton, Ben. Foglietta, Ethel Craig, each $1. Claire Crossdale won a $1 prize in spelling.

"Princess Chrysanthemum."
Bellevue Hall was filled, both Friday and Saturday evenings last week, when the High School pupils presented the operetta, "Princess Chrysanthemum."

The young people did splendidly
—every character doing its part so naturally—from the Princess down to the sprites. The singing, both solo and chorus, was very much enjoyed. And the orchestra was also at its best, winning applause.
They have been asked to repeat the entertainment—both here and in other towns.

PULPIT TOPICS

TO HIM THAT HATH

"Whoever hath, to him shall be given; and whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have." Luke viii:18.

There are two kinds of sayings in the Bible which many people stumble. They are dark sayings and hard sayings. Dark sayings are such as are difficult to understand—sometimes apparently impossible to understand. Hard sayings are such as seem, upon the face of them, cruel and unjust. The text of the morning is one of many hard sayings. It is apparently a cruel saying.

Upon the face of it, those words seem arbitrary. They strike one as the fiat of a despot who issues commands—without, to show, his power. But when we look deeper into the words we shall find that they are not arbitrary. They would be true even if the Bible had never contained them. They are true because of natural law and natural law, as I have said, is unchangeable, considered as to its end. Consider, for a moment, another hard saying: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Is that cruel? Is it arbitrary? Nay, righteousness is life, and so the man who deliberately chooses unrighteousness is committing suicide. (It is very significant that in the revised version of the New Testament in almost every instance in which the authorized version uses the word "soul," the word "life" is substituted, so that we read, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own life?") Righteousness is light, and so the man who deliberately chooses unrighteousness is starting himself in the darkest city. It is inevitable law. Natural law prevails in the spiritual world.

Now come to the text. "To him that hath shall be given." Is this according to natural law? It would seem so. It is really according to the law of gravitation. Any two masses of matter in the world attract each other. The larger the mass, the stronger the attraction. See the children rolling up marbles in the street. The larger the ball, the more it accumulates as it is pushed along. To him that hath shall be given.

Let us see how this principle works in the realm of finance. It is much easier for a man of considerable capital to make headway than for one who has little or nothing. It is exactly so of spiritual gifts. Jesus was speaking of spiritual things. He had little or nothing to give to men to start with. He was a poor man. He left that to those who should thereafter specialize in such things. He was a specialist in the things of the spirit. And here He enunciates a spiritual principle. And it is absolutely demonstrable. The man of prayer finds prayer in the things of the spirit. He who has made truth the law of his life has no difficulty in telling the truth when temptation comes. He who has been devoted to duty does his duty in a crisis without thinking. Duty has become second nature to him. On the other hand, the man of prayerless habits accumulates doubts and fears. The man who has sacrificed truth to mere convenience finds it difficult to tell the truth when it comes to a choice. The man of spiritual gifts grows richer and richer. The man of spiritual poverty, that grows poorer and poorer.

SABBATH SCHOOL LESSON

PETER AND CORNELIUS

Acts 10: 1-23.

GOLDEN TEXT: There is no distinction between Jew and Greek: for the same Lord is Lord of all, and is rich unto all that call upon Him. Rom. 10: 12.

It is a very noteworthy fact that the Roman centurions mentioned in the New Testament seem to have been all good men, and two of them were especially honored by God. There was the centurion of Capernaum whom Jesus praised highly, and the centurion of our lesson to whom God sent an angel with a message of approval and instruction. The centurion who presented us the "EXERCISE" for Christ seems also to have been a sincere man and, open to conviction, and the two centurions who at different times had charge of Paul-treated him well. The conduct of these two Roman soldiers stands out very creditably in contrast with the conduct of the Jews; and two of the five learned to believe on Christ.

Cornelius had been a convert to Judaism; for he had been a worshiper of God. He had heard, it seems, about the life and work and teaching of Jesus (see verses 36, 37), and had perhaps been somewhat interested and not a little puzzled to understand what sort of a person Jesus was. But evidently he knew nothing of the real mission of Christ to the world, or of the great salvation which God had provided in and through Christ.

But Cornelius was honestly seeking God, and God is never far from those who seek Him with all their hearts, and with all their minds, and with all their strength. So God sent an angel to tell Cornelius to send for Peter.

Then God prepared Peter for the coming of the messenger of Cornelius and told him to go with them.

God can always find some way of making His will known to the man who is really anxious to do the will of God. Before this, Cornelius and God talked with man as with a friend. In ancient times, when there was no Bible, He made His will known through dreams or visions, or through angels or by the inward voice of the Holy Spirit. When Christ came He revealed the perfect revelation of the will of God in His own life and in His teaching. But even when Christ was on earth Peter needed and received a special revelation with regard to Him. (See Matt. 16: 17.)

The descent of the Holy Spirit on Pentecost marked the beginning of a new era in God's dealing with men. He came to form a new covenant between man and God. He came to give an inward revelation of God to the hearts of men, and to make men aware of the presence of God in their lives. He came to make men aware of the presence of God in their lives. He came to make men aware of the presence of God in their lives.

It was in this way that God made known His will to the man who was really anxious to do the will of God. Before this, Cornelius and God talked with man as with a friend. In ancient times, when there was no Bible, He made His will known through dreams or visions, or through angels or by the inward voice of the Holy Spirit. When Christ came He revealed the perfect revelation of the will of God in His own life and in His teaching. But even when Christ was on earth Peter needed and received a special revelation with regard to Him. (See Matt. 16: 17.)

The descent of the Holy Spirit on Pentecost marked the beginning of a new era in God's dealing with men. He came to form a new covenant between man and God. He came to give an inward revelation of God to the hearts of men, and to make men aware of the presence of God in their lives. He came to make men aware of the presence of God in their lives. He came to make men aware of the presence of God in their lives.

SIMON SIMPLE'S FIRST LESSONS IN CLOWNISN

A NARROW ESCAPE

It was in the early part of the eighties that I was in college for some two or three years in London. The story I now set myself to tell occurred during my residence there, as to its chief incidents: the actors' names, and those of the places, will, of course, be changed sufficiently to prevent the ordinary reader from penetrating too far into college secrets.

Our college had over one hundred resident pupils, most of them young men from eighteen to twenty-five, preparing for the high examinations. The principal, a very distinguished man, was a resident, and he was a very distinguished man.

WIT AND HUMOR

It was the rush hour in one of those quick-lunch places where you help yourself and use the arm your chair as a table. A man called for a piece of pie and chose a chair; then, remembering that he wanted coffee, he dashed over to the service counter. When he returned with his coffee his chair was occupied by another burry-up.

"Excuse me," said the first man, "but that is my chair."

"How do you know it is your chair?" demanded the occupant, in a surly tone.

"Because I can prove it," stated the first man.

"How can you prove it?" asked the occupant.

"By your trousers," was the reply. "You are sitting on my pie."

Once Mr. Gladstone had been cutting down a tree in the presence of a large concourse of people, including a number of "cheap trippers." When the tree had fallen and the Prime Minister and some of his family who were with him were moving away, there was a rush for the chips. One of the "cheap trippers" secured a big piece, and exclaimed:

"Ho, ho, when I die, this shall go in my coffin."

Then cried his wife, a shrewd, motherly old woman, with a merry twinkle in her eye:

"Says my dear, I should worship God as they worship Gladstone; they'd stand a better chance of going where they chip would burn!"

The impetuous author passed over the manuscript with a faltering hand. The editor of the "Daily" started.

"Mr. Wright," he said, with the air of a man who has just become addled with a great thought, "did you ever hear that Walter Scott received the suggestion of his first successful novel while he was washing his hands?"

"I believe I read of it," stammered the impetuous author, slipping his hands into his pockets. A for-away look slid into the face of the editor.

"I was merely throwing out the suggestion," he said, shrugging.

A professional boxer was badly beaten in a sparring match, and carried to his bed in an exhausted and melancholy condition.

"I wish you'd say something to cheer him up, doctor," pleaded the devoted warrior's wife. "He's getting low in his mind, and when he gets to go altogether that length with you, but you shall have my vote!"

"What can I say that will please him most?" asked the doctor.

"You might just tell him, in an off-hand way, that the stars you see in the night are his teeth, and when he gets to go altogether that length with you, but you shall have my vote!"

"No," retorted his victim. "I don't think it takes my face longer to heal nowadays."

"You don't count in as frequently and why, that you go rather home in the night, and when he gets to go altogether that length with you, but you shall have my vote!"

"No," retorted his victim. "I don't think it takes my face longer to heal nowadays."

The Hammonton Paint

Is the very best paint ever used in Hammonton.

There are scores of buildings in town covered with this paint, which look well after eight or ten years of wear.

The Hammonton Paint is sold for less than other first-class paint.

It has no equal, as it works well, covers well, and wears well.
