On the Eve of War.

O, God of Battles, who art still The God of Love, the God of Rest, Subdue thy people's flery will,

And quell the passions in their breast ! Before we bathe our hands in blood We lift them to thy Holy Rood.

The waiting nations hold their breath To catch the dreadful battle-cry; And in the silence as of death The fateful hours go softly by. Oh, hear thy people when they pray, And shrive our souls before the fray

Before the sun of peace shall set, We kneel apart a solemn while; Pity the eyes with sorrow wet, But pity most the lips that smile. The night comes fast; we hear afar The baying of the wolves of war.

Not lightly, O, not lightly, Lord, Let this our awful task begin; Speak from thy throne a warning word Above the angry faction's din. If this be thy most hely will, Be with us still! be with us still!

DANSKE DANDNIDGE.

Rev. Mr. Killian.

The departure of this "man of God" from among us is a source of general regret. After four years of auccessful work, he has been called as he believes, and as many of his people believe, to another and larger field of usefulness, in the city of Trenton; and the prayers and good wishes of many go with him.

The severance of the pactoral relation, where people have worked together harmoniously for the upbuilding of a particular Church and for the improvement of the spiritual condition of a place, is a matter of great moment, and were it not for the conviction that comes to us from a variety of causes, that the Lord's hand was in it, we would be very reluctant to consent.

Among the characteristics of Mr. Killian may be named his sincerity, his open - heartedness, warm - heartedness, clear conception of truth, fidelity, courage, and pastoral oversight. His parting words were very touching, and he wisely urged the people to receive as kindly, and treat as generously, his successor of the near future, as they had

It is surprising how much a loyal and devoted people can do in making the Paster feel at home in their midet, while he is devoting his time to study and looking carefully and prayerfully after their spiritual interests. A kind word in his bohalf, a generons response to his temporal affairs, a cheerful and regular attendance upon the means of grace, are among the many memorable things that live in his ministry.

The Bicycle Question.

MR. EDITOR: Our friend Jacob seems to have a hard time of it. In looks as it he was the outy active mem ber on the Law and Order Committee and with your kind permission. I would like to assist him a little. He reminds me of the boy who "stood on the barning dock."

He says that our new Town Marshal has set an example by endeavoring to do his duty. Does he mean to insinuate that our other officials have failed to de their duty? For instance, when our Council enacts a law that its own members violate with impunity, does he think they have fuled to do their duty when they violate it, or when they make a law that they themselves cannot keep? I hope that Brother Jacobs will consider the extremely low salary paid some of our officials, and out be too harsh on them. Have charity, Jacobs, have charity.

Ho says that last wook an'olderly lady was injured by a sidowatk scoreher. It seems to no that here is a golden opportuntty for the Marshal to exercise his skill and bring the offender to justice. Most every our knows that during the past winter a majority of bicycle ridors have used the sidewalks, right in the face of an unjust law.

I would suggest to Council that no blevelist, while riding on the sidewalk, shall ride within fifty feet of any pedestrian. I think thin would be yory simple, and so just that every citizen would take a pride in seeing that it was enforced, and eave the friends of the Marshal, who do not wish to offend him, the trouble of keeping their eyes peeled when innocently using the sidewalks without disturbing pedestrians, who undoubtedly have first right to their use, but who should have no objections to bicycles using them if they would keep well away,

Let us hear from some one else, and see what public opinion really is.

C. E. FOWLER.

Justification of the body of the control of the con rights is not a man in this bouse to day so isolated in life but there is some one in heaven with whom he once shook hands. As a man gets older the number of his celestial acquaintaneous very rapidly multiplies. We have not had one glimpse of them since the night we kissed them goodby, and they went away, but still we stand paring at heaven. And when some of our friends go across the sea, we stand on the fock or on the stemn tug and watch them, and after awhile the hulk of the vessel ilsappears, and then there is only a patch of sail on the sky, and soon that is gone, and they are all out of sight, and yet we stand looking in the same direction, so when our friends go way from us into the future world we keep looking down abrough the narrows, and gazing and gazing as though we expected that they would come out and stand on some cloud and give us one glimpse of their bilasful und transitgured faces.

Pass on now, and I will show you one more pleture, and that is Stephen asleep. With a pathos and simplicity peculiar to the Scriptures the text any as of Stephen, "The fell asleep." "Oh," you say, "what a place it was to sleep! A hard rock under him, stones falling down apon him, the blood stremning, the mob howling. What a place it was to sleep!" And yet my text take, that symbol of slumber to desorthe be described as very laborious life. His clut of work had been to care for the poor. How wany loaves of bread he distributed, how anny loaves of bread he distributed, how anny loaves of kindness and love, I do not know, but from the way he lived, and the way he preached, and the way he died I know he was a laborious Christian. But

Pass on now and see Stephen looking ipon Christ. My text says he saw the Ston Man at the right hand of God. Just how Ho has fainting Hp. He has taken the looked in this world, just how He is the last fainting Hp. He has taken the last from his enemies. The che in heaven, we cannot say. A writer in the time of Christ says, describing the last stone to whose crushing weight he is asvour's personal appearance, that He had blue eyes and light complexion, and a rory graceful structure, but I suppose it was all guesswork. The painters of the lifterent ages have tried to imagine the from the brow, and then they pass around fantures of Christ and but there man age. findent ages have tried to imagine the country and the prox, and to look upon the calm countenance of him may but we will have to wait until with who had lived for the poor and died for ms, but we will have to wait until with mr own eyes we see film and with our own hars we can hear Him. And yet there is a say of seeing and hearing Him now. I neve to tell you that unless you see and lear Him in heaven. Look! There He is Behold the Lamb of God! Can you not see Him? Then pray to God to take the scales off your eyes. Look that way—try to look that way. His voice comes down to you his day—comes down to the blindest, to the deafest soul, saying, "Look unto Molil ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved or I have not the scaling to tell the weather. I can never tell by the setting sun whether I am God, and there is none else," for a baryon, and there is none elso."
