SLEEVELESS WRAP-JACKET OF BLACK MOIRE, PEA-GREEN TULLED ANDULIE LACES.

A jacket, made of double black pea-green tulle and sleeveless. The tulle reaches below the waist. The front of moire has a breast seam, and is cut out of one piece, together with the side. The revers facings are turned up out of the front material, and fastened near the shoulder by long passementery clasps. The shoulder parts are sewed on to the back, but leave space enough between each other to show the lace arrangement of the back. This lace arrangement is shaped jabot-like and ends at the waist with a moire loop. Below the latter one is an 18-inch wide black tulle lace, which reaches below the jacket and is very much tucked at the front and in the back. Closed in the front by hooks, covered by a folded lace, which is formed into a loop at the collar, and at the waist is bound by a moire-ribbon belt with loop. Lay-down collar, which is cut bias at the back and scalloped.

CAPE WRAP OF BLACK MOIRE ANTIQUE WITH BEAD TRIMMINGS.
Composed of four parts, which at the waist are combined by gum cords. To the front, a black tulle lace is put on, forming loops at the collar and at the waist. Two long strips of black, 9 inches wide moire ribbon, with satin back fall down over the collar, covered by black bead passementery. From the collar edge to the shoulder, the collar is pored, and therefore has the appearance of a yoke. Then follows a very tucked lace ruffle, with round bead trimming and fringes. This yoke-like part is stiff-lined, and has a slit at the back, from which a double black lace ruche is standing out. The wrap is lined with black silk.

STREET COSTUME WITH REVERS WAIST AND MOIRE TRIMMING FOR MISSES.

The materials are dark indigo-blue repand black moire, the latter one being used as edging, revers collar and skirt trimmings. Such a trimming like the upper one (about 3 inches wide) is at the lower skirt about 7 inches distant from the bottom; this trimming being cut bias and lined with muslin. The waist has tight-fitting lining and is seamless at the back. The front is double, the upper one can be either bias or have a breast seam and is closed by two hooks at the end of the revers. The lower one is closed by hooks, and covered by a plain cloth insertion. Standing collar, to which the revers collar is joined. Below the revers are three circular cape parts, edged with moire. Belt of satin duchesse ribbon with loop. Blue sleeves with tight-fitting lining.

HOW SOME MEN PROPOSE.

Due Person Who Is Interested in the Subject.

"I am a crank," said the club man on the subject of proposals. I would rather hear a story of how a man asked the woman he loved to marry him than to take a trip to Europe. I don't know why I take so strong an interest in this, unless it is that I had such a hard time to get my wife to accept me. I had been in love with her for two years. I had proposed to her seven times and she refused me every time. Finally I went to her in despair and said: "Well, Mollie, I've asked you to marry me seven times, and you have declined my name. I'm going to ask you once more, and if you don't marry me, I shall go out West and stay there."

"Well, Jack," she said, "if you feel that way about it, I'll marry you. To this day she cannot tell me why she refused me so often to marry me after all."

"There's my friend, Congressman X. He was a poor young man, and one day he went to a young woman whom he had known for a long time."

"No," he said, "I have been waiting all I have enough money to get married. My salary was raised yesterday. Will you marry me next week?"

"Wait until next month," she said.

"No next week, and they were married next week."

"Brown, the lawyer, was a careless young fellow. The woman whom he loved would not marry him."

"You are the most reckless man in the world," she said, about money affairs. "When you get $5,000 in the bank I may marry you; if you still want me."

"He went away and saved $5,000. She married him and to-day she's a rich man. He learned economy while winning his wife."

"My friend Colonel H. enlisted at the outbreak of the war."

"Joe," he said to the girl he wanted to marry, "I am going down South to fight. Will you marry me now or wait till I come back?"

"Right now, Sam," she said, and that afternoon he marched away.

"No officer proposed in a cool way. He hadn't been able to make up his mind what he was going to do in life, and one day the woman who is his wife now said:

"Charlie (you were second cousin), what in the world are you going to make out of yourself?"

"Just whatever you make out of me," he said, "you've got lots more sense than I have. Mame."

"He told me one day in a story to tell about proposals," continued the story-teller. "I don't know of a single case where a man went down on his knees. I would like to hear of one. No one will tell me about it. I'm sorry. I like to hear about proposals."—New York Tribune.

Phoenix Town in Burma.

A good illustration of the influence of the bamboo on the ways, and even on the character of the people, may be found in observing one of the most frequent incidents of Burmese life—a house or village on fire.

In this country where the smoking of tobacco is limited neither by age or sex, nor time nor place, and where houses are shingled and for half a year as dry as tinder, it will be understood that men become familiar with the phenomenon of fire. It is less easy to realize the comparative indifference with which such a visitation can be received or to credit the truth that to the easy-going population of this primitive region even fire itself seems robbed of its terrors.

At a spark from a cigar or pipe a Burmese village is ablaze, and in a few hours whole streets are in ashes. But in the flutter and excitement that ensues we look in vain for any such evidence of ruin and despair as a similar calamity elsewhere brings inevitable in its train.

Loss by fire at a Burmese fire is almost unknown. The shingle house-hold stuff is quickly emptied from the single-story cottages and heaped under the trees by the road side—for to a people who live habitually in outdoor life there is no hardship in passing the night under the open sky; and when the fire has once gained an irresistible hold, it is a sight for philosophers to see the calmest of the villagers as they sit and smoke quietly in groups watching the progress of the flames.

In a few days the ephemeral city rises once more in clean and orderly streets, and beyond the main supports of timbers, or in the houses of the leading townsmen, from end to end of the street, and from floor to roof of every house, the bamboo from the jungle hard by has supplied, at the cost of labor only, the principal material of which it is built.

A Lighthouse Success.

"I hear you took the West by storm." "Well, I should say so. Why, the first time I got on a cable car half the men offered their seats, the other half tried to pay my fare. The conductor gave me a pass and the motor-man came in and proposed to me."—Lille.

NO. 1 AND NO. 2 APRON DRESSES.

No. 1 is made of white batiste and arranged in dress into 2, at the back into 3 folds. Closed at the back by buttons; is cut out in a square manner and has at the front a yoke of white Entre-deux with blue ribbon laces. A very tucked lace ruffle, with blue silk loops at either side in the front, run over the shoulders towards the back.

No. 2 is also closed at the back by buttons. Four folds at the front and at the back. It cut out the round way. A round yoke insertion, bound by a lace ruffle, which goes over the shoulder toward the back. Small swing sleeves with lace attachment. On the right shoulder a pink silk loop.

Not to be worn.

That dogs are affectionate is universally allowed, and that they are jealous no observer can doubt, but that a dog may show true philosophy in accepting a hard situation is occasionally proved. Says the London Spectator:

"A young man had for some years owned a dog which was his constant companion. Recently, however, he married, and moved with his wife and dog into a house on the opposite side of the street from his father's house, his old home."

The dog was not happy, for attention which had once been his own were now given to the young wife. This master tried to console him by a hundred of getting an opportunity to speak to one while she is in church, in the altered state of things, and the bride endeavored to win his affection, but he constantly showed his displeasure and misery.

One day the master came home and sat down, putting his arms about his wife. Jack was lying by the fire and he at once rose, approached the two, and made the usual exhibition of his disapproval.

"Why, Jack," said the master, "this is all right. She is a good girl, and as she looks like a good girl, I like her."

"This is all right," said the dog, "and as she looks like a good girl, I like her."

"The son of a wealthy planter used to stand for hours opposite the window of this American girl. One day he heard a noise, and going into the hall, found him dragging his bed downstairs. He reached the front door, and whined to be let out. The door was opened, and he dragged his bed down the stairs, and across the street to his old home, where he scratched for admittance. Since then he has never returned to his master, and has refused all overtures toward reconciliation."

A Fighting Fox.

Harry Quimby, of Haverhill, Mass., set a trap for a fox about a quarter of a mile from his father's house, and while Mr. Reynard was smelling around the bait he suddenly got one of his feet into the trap, and the fox started toward the house, trap and all, and, finding this street to his old home, where he scratched for admittance. Since then he has never returned to his master, and has refused all overtures toward reconciliation."

THE SUNSHINY DOOR.

Oh! he met at morning enshrouded in doubt.

And cry, "I see nothing—The light is shut out!"

Full the drapery back! Push the shutters away!

And drink the first draught from the well-spring of day.

The goblets of danger will brim to teatons to drink.

It is open the sunshiny door of your heart.

Oh! sit not at evening in darkness and dread.

And watch for the shadows. Still life up your head.

Till the stars twinkle out. Their reflection will be

A light all sufficient until you can see

The sun smile above you. Doubt's demon will start.

If you open the sunshiny door of your heart.

Oh! sit not at midnight when troubles arise

With the fingers of wretchedness close to your eyes.

Though friendship prove faithless, though loved ones are dead,

Though the burden of sorrow is bowing your head,

Light the candle of hope, and its brightness

Through the windows of faith to the gloom of your heart.

Cheer up, though the shadows be thick everywhere.

On the far-off horizon. The sunshiny door.

It is coming—the coming, the darker the night.

The brighter and nearer the beautiful light.

Through the crimson of day all your fears will depart.

If you open the sunshiny door of your heart.

THE TURKISH SLAVE.

BY LILLIAN HANCOCK.

WAS sold in Constantinople when I was only six years old. My uncle, Handi Bey, who had lived in the city of Yoni-Cher, and I was sent to Constantinople.

The slave dealer to whom I was taken was a woman who knew nothing of our language, so that I was obliged to learn Turkish in order to understand my new mistress. Numbers of customers came to her, and every day one or other of my companion slaves went away with their new owners.

At last my lot seemed terrible to me. I was nothing but a slave, and as such I had to humble myself to the dust in the presence of my mistress, who brought us up to be able to listen with the most impenetrable expression on our faces to her smiles or her frowns, to all the good qualities or faults that her customers found in us.

The first time that I was taken to the bazaar (reception room) I was twenty years old. I was considered very pretty, and my mistress had bought me a costume of pink cotton, covered with a floral design; she had had my nails tinted and my hair plaited, and expected to get a very good price for me. I had been taught to dance, to courtesy humbly to the men and to kiss the ladies' feet (cloaks) to hand the coffee (jerid kneeling) to the visitors, or stand by the door with my arms folded ready to answer the first summons.

I felt very agitated on finding myself among the other slaves who were waiting for purchasers. Most of them were poor girls who had been brought there to be exchanged. They had been sent away from one home and would probably have to go to some other. My heart was filled with a vague kind of dread of I knew not what, when suddenly my eyes rested on three men who had come there to buy some slaves for their Pasha. They were all three leaning back on the sofa, discussing the merits and defects of the various girls standing around them.

"Here are two—see near together," said one of them.

"That one looks ill."

"This tall one is round backed."

I listened on hearing these remarks, while the poor girls themselves blushed or turned livid with anger.

"Come here, Felikaz," called out my mistress, for I was hiding behind my companions. I went forward with lowered eyes, but my heart was beating wildly with indignation and fear, as I saw the men who had come there to buy some slaves for their Pasha. They were all three leaning back on the sofa, discussing the merits and defects of the various girls standing around them.

"Where does this one come from?" asked one of them, after examining me carefully. "She is very intelligent, and such conditions is a subject of interest to me."

"Yes, sir."

"Well, who would?" remarked the judge, as he left the court room. And you believe it, that was all the satisfaction the New Yorker could get in Mexico."—Detroit Sun.

A Remarkable Case.

The sentiment expressed in the lines, "We all begin to live, We all begin to die."

was almost literally verified in the case of Simon M. Elder, who died at Portland lately. He was a man of remarkably robust health until his final illness, which was caused by a kick from a horse six years ago, when Mr. Elder was a small boy. The animal's hoof crushed the skull two inches above his right eye, and the operation above referred to disclosed a large orifice in the skull, through which it was seen that the right frontal lobe of the brain was entirely gone. How life and reason were sustained for years under such conditions is a subject of interest to medical science. "That as would have survived the accident was in itself a marvel," said his attending physician. "But he retained his faculties and led a life of useful industry, making it a truly wonderful case."—Boston Journal.

SATURDAY, MAY 5, 1894.

Two thousand unemployed men marched through the streets of Cleveland, O., routed iron workers, wrecked property and terrorized the citizens until routed after a lively fight with police.
Troops are in readiness for more trouble.

General Coxey, Carl Brown and Christopher Columbus Jones were arraigned in a Washington court for violating the Federal statutes. The army is encamped at the capital, and will not leave for the present.

Coxey doubtless thought he had as much right as Cleveland to give the country an "object lesson." Fortunately his power being less than Cleveland's his "object lesson" was less disastrous.

The Central Schools planted four trees last Friday. The High School named theirs "U. S. Grant"; Miss Salisbury's Rotary class dedicated one to Louisa M. Olcott; Miss Lilla Ruby's school chose "Gen. W. T. Sherman" as an appropriate name; James Scullin's scholars voted for "Oliver Wendell Holmes," and so pleased. All were interested in the exercise, and each school will take pride in the prosperity of "our" tree.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—I see that in the matter of that runaway, the other day, you state in your paper that I was going at a "high rate of speed." You have been uninformed. I was only going at half-speed. I was unwilling to go fast because my horse had no shoes on his hind feet, and I feared he might clip his hoofs against the pebbles. I carry a riding whip, but I never use it;
'tis only for show. I did not know the other horse was running away until I turned my head and saw he had left the path to Da Costa, and was chasing me along the narrow road on the South side of the Lake. I was afraid lest he might knock me and my horse over, as he was (I should imagine) 400 or 500 pounds heavier than mine; so I tried to keep ahead until I came to the Park, when I turned in and halted in front of the Park building. The other horse went on along Egg Harbor Road, towards the village, where some one caught him easily, as he was evidently tired. A big, strong, lively horse like that should never have been entrusted to a boy.

LESSON ANALYSIS.

1. UNEXHAUSTED GOOD-WILL.

New Conditions: And Joseph returned, after he had buried his father (41).

Jacob's death: Joseph went up to bury his father (Gen. 50:2-14).

Joseph's death: Joseph's death was mourned by all the Egyptians (Gen. 50:26-27).

Natural Fear: It may be that Joseph will hate us (15).

Ye shall see when I am dead (16).

The sound of a driven fowl shall chase them (17).

There were in the great fear, where no fear was (Psa. 56:3).

II. Example: We pray thee, forgive the transgression (17).

Forgive, I pray thee now, the transgression of thy brethren (Gen. 50:17).

Our father the word, and my servant shall be healed (Matt. 8:9).

Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee (Matt. 18:26).

IV. Abject Submission: My brethren, fall down, and worship me (Gen. 42:7).

Joseph's brethren came, and bowed down before him on the ground (Gen. 44:14).

V. Vengeance Disavowed: Joseph said, Fear not, for I am in the place of God (19).

Am I God, to kill and to make alive? (2 Kings 6:6).

Avenge not yourselves, beloved (Rom. 12:19).

Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense (Heb. 10:30).

VI. Guidance Recognized: Ye meant evil against me, but God meant it for good (20).

God did send me before you to preserve life (Gen. 45:7).

Let him curse, for the Lord hath bidden him (2 Sam. 16:11).

To do whatsoever ye counsel for, ordained (Act 4:28).

VII. Kindness Assured: I will nourish you, and your little ones (21).

There will I nourish thee (Gen. 45:10).

Joseph nourished his mother, and his brethren (Gen. 47:12).

If thine enemy hunger, feed him (Rom. 12:20).

VIII. Comfort Administered: He comforted them, and spake kindly unto them (21).

Comfort ye, comfort ye my people (Isa. 40:1).

Rather forgive him and comfort him (2 Cor. 12:7).

Comfort one another with these words (1 Thess. 4:18).

IX. PEACEFUL OLD AGE.

1. Long Life: Joseph lived an hundred and ten years (22).

With long life will I satisfy him (Psa. 91:16).

Length of days, and years of life, shall they receive (Prov. 3:2).

That which mayest live long on the earth (Eph. 6:3).

II. Children's Children: Joseph saw Ephraim's children of the third generation (23).

His righteousness unto children (Psa. 103:17).

OUR SOLDIERS OF THE SEA.

THE MARINER WIFE OF DANBURY UNDER SAIL'S FLOATING FORTRESS.

The New Style Man-of-War's Wife Is Not Much of a Sailor—The "Horse Marines."

II. Strong Confidence: We will surely bring you up out of this land (24).

Afterward they shall come out again, great substance (Gen. 15:14).

I will bring you up out of the affliction of Egypt (Exod. 17).

By the whole testimony, I have mentioned of the departure (Heb. 11:22).

VI. Peaceful Departure: So Joseph died, and they embalmed him (26).

I am to be gathered unto my people (Gen. 49:29).

The latter end of that man is peace (Psa. 47:27).

The time of my departure is come (2 Tim. 4:6).

If the members of the various "Industrial armies" now on their way to Washington had any confidence in Gov. Tillman's statement, that whiskey is free in South Carolina, they would at once change their route.
