It has been many years since we made Comrade Woodruff's acquaintance, and in common with those who knew him best, always held him in the highest esteem. Customers very often ask our advice,—if it is best to buy a ready-made suit, or have one made to order.

Here is our advice, after fifteen years of practical experience in the clothing business.

If you spend from eighteen to twenty five dollars for your suit, do not have it made to order unless your figure is way out from the average. You don't get in return the extra amount you spend to have it made to order.

The advantages the big manufacturers have, who make good clothing, over the custom tailor, are so numerous that it pays to secure it.

We call your attention to the fact that we conduct a merchant tailoring department, but as a matter of fairness to many people who are in doubt, we find it our duty to express our conviction, formed after giving the question very close consideration.

CARE OF SHADE TREES.

(Written for the Republican by an Expert)

Unfortunately, the subject of tree pruning is not generally understood, and is therefore frequently neglected. Very little thought is given to it considering the value trees add to a property; how in the summer time they are a shield from the heat of the sun,—how they throw off barrels of moisture during a hot day, and how their branches wave a cool welcome from sunrise to sunset. It is hard to conceive a comfortable home or a beautiful town or village without trees. It is a fair assumption to make, that every one does value trees when their importance is brought to his attention.

Every one should realize that trees in our cities and towns have originally been transplanted from their native haunts, where they protect one another and shield their roots from the sun by a mantle of branch growth, and where they continually fertilize themselves by the decomposition of leaves. From these natural conditions they have been taken and planted along the streets and roads, where the conditions are not only unfavorable, but where they become injured and torn by the gnawing of horses, and where other abuses tend to decrease their vitality. They are placed in open spaces, where the sun draws the moisture from the roots, and where all fallen leaves and other vegetation are promptly removed. How should they be expected to grow and thrive unless some of the conditions which naturally keep them in health are supplied artificially?

If, therefore, they are to succeed and reach maturity, giving to man the benefits for which they were intended, it is necessary that some special attention be given them to compensate for that which is lacking. First of all, they should be carefully protected by screens or other methods, to prevent injury particularly along public streets, where there are apt to be more accidents and carelessness than on private property.

In the case of older trees, they should be promptly pruned, removing all dead stumps and broken limbs, and having the wounds carefully painted. Where cavities are found, they should be cleaned, scraped to sound wood, cut to drain properly, and well painted. In many cases it will be found that there is also much more wood in the tree than can be properly supported by the root growth. This should be cut out. Excepting in very extraordinary cases, and for particular reasons, the tree should not be headed in. By careful and continuous pruning it is usually possible to reduce the height of the tree, where necessary, by this method of cutting out the wood in preference to that of heading in.

In the case of younger trees, or those recently planted along highways, it is advisable to have them pruned from year to year, for the purpose of training them into forms suitable for street purposes for which they are intended. Naturally, the branch growth should be well above the pedestrian, and in a general way the growth pyramidal. It is also likely that it will be necessary to remove some of the young wood for reasons already given in explaining the requirements of the larger trees.

Hammonton has a large number of very fine trees, but, unfortunately, their requirements have not been appreciated. It becomes the duty of every property owner to see that the trees are given attention, not only because of the value they are to him personally, but because it is his public duty. Many cities are realizing this fact, and in some instances the work is taken over by the municipal authorities. In rural districts, many of the states are compelling property owners to plant trees along the roadways. They have two objects in view, one being for the value of the trees themselves and second, because where the roadways are shaded it is found that the road material lasts much longer than where it is exposed to the drying rays of the sun.

Where trees are pruned scientifically every year it is not a difficult nor expensive matter to keep them in good health and well within the bounds of city requirements. It is hoped that every citizen of Hammonton will become interested in this subject, and do all in his power to aid and support the movement which has started for the betterment of the trees.

Burglars entered a cellar window at the residence of Thos. B. Delker, early Monday night, detached and removed the gas meter, with its contents.

Summer School for Teachers.

Announcement has been made by the Department of Public Instruction that a school for teachers and those intending to teach will be held at Ocean City, N. J., beginning Monday, June 29th, and closing Saturday, August 1st. The school is intended to help teachers now teaching, and to prepare, at least in part, those who have had but a limited preparation for the work to which they aspire.

Supervisors, supervising principals, and high school teachers should also note that Assistant Commissioner of Education, Mr. Meredith, will give instruction in School Organization for Principals, Supervisors, etc., Principles of Secondary Education for the administration of High Schools and History of Education. This is an extraordinary opportunity, and should be taken advantage of.

County Superintendent Cressman reports that such marked progress has been made by a number of Atlantic County teachers who have attended, heretofore, the summer school formerly located at Cape May City, that they really form a class by themselves. He strongly urges teachers, and those elected to teach in Atlantic County, to attend this school, thereby placing themselves in a position to help not only more effectively the children of the State, but at the same time themselves.

He further suggests that Boards of Education, in numerous instances, would do well to condition increases of salary upon attendance at this school. A number of instances can be cited where teachers have increased their salaries 50 per cent in a few years.

Commissioner of Education, Calvin N. Kendall, in the announcement just issued, calls attention to a waste in schools because of inadequate scholarship of teachers, also to a well-known fact that teachers who are not normal graduates often do not know how to teach. The purpose of the school is to reduce, at least in part, this waste.

It is hoped that teachers of Atlantic County, as well as those of other counties, will take advantage of this opportunity, and by their attendance show their appreciation of the opportunities offered by our State.

Tuition and books are free to persons now teaching in the State, and to those eligible to take the examination for a limited elementary certificate.
