THE OLD, SWEET, SILENT

Yonder, where the valley lies—
Where the river runs—
"Welcome," sings the "milkmaid,"
"Welcome," sings the "milkmaid,"
"We drive the cattle home."
"We come to spend a holiday."

Sure, that bird's sweet singing
Sounds familiar still—Valley-voiced singing
Echoes from the hill
That "welcome" heard it far away—
Sweet calling to a child at play.

And there are wild, sweet joys there
Where the river flows—
Just as of old, the boys there
Have played and romped—
And some one near the battle-line
Looks wistfully at the twilight stars.

O loved, remembered places!
I greet you once again;
Recalling in strange places
Your garden and the hill
But more than all, the joy that seems An echo in an old man's dream—
—Adapted from "The Old, Sweet, Silent."

BETWEEN ACTS

ANNIE WHEATLEY strolled to the window and gazed idly out. The view was strictly in accordance with the instructions conveyed in the little blue-covered book of typewriting which read:

"And I will explain it all to you (Gentle, walks to window R. and gazed idly out.)"

Considering that this was the 217th time she had done this, the view from the window had lost somewhat of its novelty.

She knew exactly what she would see there. At her right would be a huge electric calcium pouring its green rays upon her white dress. It had been decided that green would be better than blue. The moon had been given over since the night when the stage manager had arrived at this decision.

There were also a couple of stage breeches holding up the scenery, and sometimes a couple of stage hands in very dirty shawls lent animation to the view.

Though the men were absent and Annie was able to give her whole attention to the floor, on which some one had chalked, "I love you," in a clear pink.

She wondered why she might have done this. Some stage hand, probably considering it a good joke. Surely no one would make such an open confession and expect to be taken seriously.

She was wondering when she heard the door, which was her signal to turn with a cry of horror to perceive Lady Gwendolyn prostrate upon the floor, struck down by Hugh de Maltravers, who in his white dress was a most unusual sight.

After that it was a busy time until the fall of the curtain, when she had to run for the dressing-room for a change to the chalk marks no further thought until the following evening.

There, again, were the eloquent words neatly chalked for her inspection. She was the center of attention. She was the center of attention. She was the center of attention.

Gradually the legend began to annoy her. Every evening she came to her apartment, only to disappear before it came time to make the change for the next act.

She complained to the stage manager, but that official could offer no practical suggestion. He was certain that was what the stage boys, and that was all the satisfaction she could obtain.

The matter both annoyed and interested her. It lay but little to make talk the ladies, and she wisely held her peace; but she kept a sharp eye out in the hope of discovering the offender.

The green made a practice of running to the window the moment the curtain fell in the hope of discovering the writer erasing the lines, but by that time the marks had been obscured and she could only wait for time to unravel the mystery.

On the 20th performance Agnes Carleton celebrated the event by introducing a new gown. In place of the customary black, she was beginning to show the marks of wear and tear, she appeared in a handsome black satin, which caused every woman in the audience a pang of jealousy and indignantly got her several newspaper items.

As usual, Annie stood by the window wondering who her unknown admirer might be. Lady Gwendolyn, however, customary shrewd, and Annie turned with a scream of terror to behold the villain's wicked work.

To-night she supplemented her stage horror with a cry more natural. Lady Gwendolyn fell with her face toward the audience, that they might marvel at the play of her facial expression as she slowly died from the effects of Maltravers' cruel blow. Thord on the back of the black satin were the marks of a man's fingers clearly outlined in white.

In a flash it all came to her. "That's it! It's all coming to me!"

SATURDAY, MAY 21, 1904

The town water was shut off for a short time, last Friday evening, while workmen were putting in the new cut-off valve opposite the pumping station.

Strange, but at that time Howard Sooby's baby boy pulled a lighted lamp off the table, at their home on Maple Street, causing a quick blaze. Mrs. Sooby hastened to the apogee for water, but found it dry. Though nearly frantic, she hurried to a neighbor's pump; but "Uncle Chalk" came in just then, and the blazing lamp out of doors, and soon the danger was past.

Less than two months ago, the blackened ruins were all that could be seen of Cottrell's hosiery factory. Today, a fine new brick building, 40 x 100 feet, stands on the site, on a new foundation, one good story high, covered by a slab fire and water proof roof. It will be a better building than the old one, having better light, more air space, and a double-arched floor. It will interest any one to go over and see it. E. W.
Strickland is the builder, Kirk Spear doing the mason work. W. Bernhouse designed the building. It is expected to start the hosiery plant about the first of June.

Miss Mary Wescott, daughter of Chas. Wescott, of Neco, died yesterday (Friday) morning, 20th, aged 35 years.
Funeral on Monday. Meet at the house at one o'clock.

THREE SUMMER on Stone bridge. Call at this office.

Miss Bertha Edmell has been re-elected teacher at Richland, N. J., for the fourth year, with a substantial increase of salary.

As the School Board has no use for the $2500 appropriated for teachers' salaries, why not omit it from the assessment?

The J. G. C. N. B. A. baseball team expects to play this afternoon, on the school-house grounds. Admission to game, five cents.

HUGHES to Rent—furnished or unfurnished apartment house, 215 per month in advance. Inquire at this office.

The M. E. Sunday School are talking of changing the hour of their session to 2:30 p.m. They expect to vote on it to-morrow.

Dr. Mark Freese is reported ill with typhoid fever at New York, New York.

Were it not for those piles of brick, Bellevue Avenue would now be a very pretty street, since the trees have put on their green dress.

WANTED—a girl for general housework.
Mrs. A. J. KING.

A very limited supply of seeds came from Uncle Sam this week. But one variety can be given to each applicant, as long as they last.

Dr. S. S. Nilsson and family have made their annual move from the Hammon Sanitarium to Dryden Springs, N. Y., for the summer.

There were lots of automobiles in town last Sunday, but many of them seemed very anxious to reach their destination, judging by their speed.

FOR SALE—the old Dr. North homestead on Central Ave. Inquire of Mrs. C. F. OSGOOD.

The Assessors began their annual tour of the town yesterday. Treat them well, for, as the old maid said about the boys, "they are a necessary evil."

Flowers will probably be scarce this year, hence the G. A. R. will welcome all that can be spared. Leave them at Murdoch's store early on the 30th.

Town Council's License Committee will meet in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening next, May 24th. Jos.
Borah's application is the only one to be considered.

FOR SALE—the most unoccupied building in town, at a bargain. Inquire of W. M. COLWELL.

Kirk Speer, Esq., Chairman of Council's Property Committee, will receive proposals to furnish a piece of ground, within half a mile of station, on which to locate the dog-pound.

On Wednesday evening, May 18,
a stranger, who couldn't speak a word of English, arrived at the home of Mr.
and Mrs. R. H. Goff, on Grape Street, Hammon. But "wasn't a girl."

FOR SALE, at a bargain, a Victor gramophone in good condition. Particulars at this office.

Miss Jessie Rogers' school, at Newark, closed on Friday last, after a successful season. They had a little social gathering that afternoon, which was enjoyed by the teacher, pupils and visitors.

David P. Davies, Jr., one of our Hammon boys, has graduated with honors from the Dental Department of the Medical College, and accepted a position as demonstrator in the same institution.

FOR SALE. A good substantial foot lathe, and screw saw, also a machine and tools for making wheels. Mrs. A. GUSTAFSON.

While Robert Duble, of Blue Anchor, was sawing a board, the board saw struck a knot, twisting his hand in such a way as to sever two fingers. He is getting along well, and is fortunate in retaining his hand.

The men's meeting held Sunday afternoon was a success, — so say those who attended. Mr. Vautier gave them a good address, and was followed by several laymen and ministers. The next one will be held June 10th.

TABLE for rent, with carriage room and shed, on Bellevue Ave. Inquire of Miss Uchida, N. J.

Perhaps you may not know it, but orders for any kind of engraving,— wedding invitations or announcements, visiting cards, etc., are received at this office, and the best of work guaranteed, at prices a shade better than usual city figures.

The Hammon assessors are adding five per cent to the valuation of all property within the water district, and deducting an equal amount from all outside those limits. They claim that we should pay for fire protection.

H. M. Trowbridge has leased

stead, Grand Street. Key at this house most. Inquire of ELLA L. BORTON.

The Red Men have long planned a picnic during the afternoon and evening of Decoration Day,—the first of the season, at the Park. They intend to put in some hours of hard work, improving the grounds, and have the picnic features for a rest after labor.

The United States authorities proposed to spend $300,000,000, if necessary, to exterminate injurious insects like the boll weevil in cotton, the apple worm, grasshoppers, etc. Hammon farmers should not await this paternal care, however, but move on the pesti-ferous bug and worm and scale like wily Japs after Russians.

Tomatoes, Peppers, Sweet Potatoes, and Cabbages
Fresh. D. COLWELL & SONS.

Andrew J. R. Craig died last Thursday evening, 18th inst., at the home of his sister, Mrs. L. B. Joely, Egg Harbor Road, Hammon, aged 29 years, after prolonged illness. He leaves a wife (formerly Miss Maud Lobley) and four children. Funeral service at the house to-morrow afternoon, at two o'clock.

Terrified by the snorting of a large automobile, Tuesday afternoon, a team of horses, with another bled behind the hay wagon, went tearing up Bellevue Avenue, narrowly missing several teams and many shade trees, and only stopped when they reached Elvins' wagon sheds, Main Road. The halter strap was hanging, broken, thus abnormal the driver from all blame.

Mrs. Damaris Porch, a sister of the late Mrs. Geo. Elvins, died suddenly on Sunday morning, May 15th, 1904, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank E.
Borah, in Camden. Mrs. Porch had been ill for a long time, apparently recovered, but was taken with erysipelas not many days ago, and died from an affection of the heart. The family resided in Hammon for some years.
Funeral services were held at Williamstown on Wednesday.

THE BAD BOY.

The knelt beside the bed where lay the boy. Who all the weary day had been so bad. Tears wet her cheeks, and prayer was on her lips. The while she drank grief's gall in bitter sips. "If you but knew my boy," I heard her say, "How you have hurt me through this living day. If you could know the love a mother bears, Or that your name's the burden of her prayers."

And then she prayed till how came back to her And happy tears replaced the grief-drops' blur: She prayed for patience, prayed for light; but more Prayed for the boy for whom such love she bore. She prayed that he might choose the better part And lose the growing hardness in his heart. She prayed till joy unto her soul returned And mother-love through all her being burned.

How like her God she seemed while kneeling there. Her lips attuned to sweet unselfish prayer: "How like the Christ that nightly over me Bends, trusting that my love for him may be Such that upon the morrow I may go More meekly on his errands here below." Some day that boy must feel his thrilling thrill— "I wish you were dear to my Master's will."

FROM GENERATION TO GENERATION

There was no death dance, no low wailing, no burning. Of the five survivors of the horrible massacre, Sikra was the only one unscathed. When the first light thinned the blackness around her sufficiently to give her bearings, she crept out of her covert, back to the scene. The white men were gone, but their work had been well done. The grames were dabbled with blood, the pools were dotted and red, there were still faint groans from the dying and mocking grins on the upturned faces of the dead.

In the midst of the mangled bodies, Black Wing lay dead. Sikra was only a squaw; she did not know how to swoon and drip tears, but the sun was high before she moved a muscle or drew a deep breath. When at last, however, she trudged over the sand, slipped into her canoe, and paddled slowly down the bay there was not one shadowy detail of the massacre of Indian Island not seared deep into her soul.

The government was held responsible for the massacre by outsiders, and the overt acts of hostility on the part of some of the chiefs were cited as the cause by those more closely implicated. The perpetrators, perhaps citizens of Alaska, although suspected, were never charged with the crime, but as time went on it was generally recognized that the work of private individuals, who had their own object in view.

As time went on and the Indians were herded onto the Hoopa Reservation, the story of the massacre was buried beneath other debris of its kind—treachery on the part of the redskin and bad faith of the whites—until the stronger race had gotten all the power into its hands, and driven the Indian, his wrongs and his rights, out of the path of progress.

But the lapse of time that accomplished this condition did not wipe out the injustice of Black Wing's death and Sikra's memory. Green hangers and old in the interim, she had not lost one detail of the island scene from her mind. The boy she bore a few months after the massacre was named and called in the hope of revenge. His tribulations were the death-groans of the wounded warriors and the wallings of the women and children who fell in the struggle. His first halting words were a vow of vengeance for Black Wing's blood. He knew the gruesome story glibly before he was old enough to understand it, and by the time he was able to grasp the meaning of his early training, Roosevelt was written large in the very fiber of his being.

"He is like Black Wing," Sikra said, as each year his straight young limbs grew longer, his little young frame stronger, and she saw his hope of her life's object being realized. His, how, who lived in the big white house, often asked, when the old squaw came to do the weekly washing: "Why don't you make the boy work, Black? But she steadfastly refused to bend back, and grunted: "Wein! I not raise him for that."

Maudling the boy fished up and down the stream, content to bank in the sunshine or to creep through the forest and mountain solitude, idly but thinking, always brooding, plotting, thinking.

"You will spoil the boy, Sikra. If you do not make him work, the Indian is an of the white house said again, one afternoon, while a pile of snowy linen grew under the knotted hands of the old Indians. "Idleness will get him into mischief," she added, "the old warrior of the young buck against the driveway, and snarled up by the back porch, where his mother was working. No one would have said that with Sikra, for her boy was the one raw spot in her nature. She never permitted the kind-hearted Mrs.

How's advice to bother her, however, and only mumbled to herself as the big fellow slumped down on the cellar door, his keen eyes following the children preparing to noot in the cedar trees.

But while the scowls splashed at the water stream, and dripped over the floor, the thrifty housewife bustled herself at tidying things on the porch, for a glance at the young black made her realize the propriety of her presence on the scene. "I'll do with this game-bag," she said half aloud. "It has hung here long enough collecting trash. This is a good time to overhaul it and throw the rubbish away."

The game-bag was a ponderous leather thing, and its capacity apparently unlimited. Old fish hooks and stumps of stems first rusted and rotted, then longed, then hatched, horse shoes, gopher traps, dog knobs, coils of wire, shot pouches, fly boxes, empty shells, a whisky flask, old pipes, rubber gloves—everything in short, that a catch-all of such sort collects in the course of twenty years. The last thing brought up was an old hunting knife—an ugly-looking weapon, broad and short, with a rude deer-horn handle. The blade was rusted, and looked as if it had not been used for a long time.

"I don't know what to do with all these things after all," the woman said, looking up into the quizzical eyes of the old young fellow, who came singing "Bonnie Doon" through the house, whistling the dogs over from the stable, stirred the drowsy canary into a flood of song, and sent the cats scampering away from the neighborhood of the most safe. "They were your father's things, Hal, when he was a much older than you," she explained, in the subdued tones in which one instinctively refers to the dead. But the duty on hand was temporarily dropped when the boy announced that a book agent was in the front hall, and the contents of the game bag were left in a heap on the floor.

Sikra still bent low over her tubs, but now her head was up, and every nerve in her body tingled with excitement. The back of her benefactress was scarcely turned when the hunting knife was swept into her hands and she began to carve with excited fingers. Her boy did not follow her actions, but sat idly in the sunshine, watching the lower branches of the cedar filling with the tenants for the night. Meanwhile the pile of clean clothes grew with surprising rapidity. A wonderful energy was at work, rubbing, rinsing, wringing, and the squaw departed with her son.

The next week's washing was accompanied with the same degree of unaccounted energy. Sikra stood upright, no longer bent and decrepit. Her hour of triumph was come. The knife still hung at her belt—the knife she had watched Black Wing make. She had slain her man's murderers. This fact worked itself slowly into her darkened mind, for the knife in the game bag cried out Howe's implication in the crime.

But now, at the very moment of her impending triumph, a shadow fell upon her gleam of hope. The boy, attracted into slumber by the sun, had fallen into slumber by the sun, and his eyes were closed. He had fallen into slumber by the sun, and his eyes were closed. He had fallen into slumber by the sun, and his eyes were closed.

"The kind eyes up at the white ones grow large with sympathy and tears. 'You are a brave boy, Sikra,' young Hal came forward to assure her, and catching up his hat he followed the distraught mother to her little hut. The wild, black eyes that met him as he entered, stared him with their ferocity, and the white words 'hold him on the threshold. But Sikra's dumb look of appeal prompted him to enter the room. The calm presence, and the cool, firm hand of the white boy seemed to lay the fever aside. And the thought that the fever might be contagious was overbalanced in his mind by the grief of the squaw mother. 'We must not die, but Sikra, not more she wailed. 'I raise him for now! For just now!'

The weeks that followed were a grim struggle with the fever. Death that filled the Indian boy's frame. When his wild ravings and threats of vengeance rose to shrieks and threatened to exhaust the flickering flame of life, nothing but the cool, strong hands that had first quelled him had any power to calm him. Sikra's eyes followed the struggle with the Destroyer was waged.

"Poor old Sikra's heart seems set on her accomplishing something before he dies," young Howe explained one day to his mother. "It is pitiful to see her hopelessness whenever the symptoms are discouraging. And when others said: 'Let the good-for-nothing redskin die; he is a menace to the neighborhood,' the boy's blue eyes flashed his scorn at their sentiments. 'He is all she has,' he answered."

When at last they were able to say to Sikra, "He will live." It was at young Howe's feet she flung herself, her eyes full of tears. Her husband, she declared, had saved her life.

In time the old conditions of the two households were re-established. Mrs. Howe tried to see her benefactress whenever the symptoms are discouraging. And when others said: 'Let the good-for-nothing redskin die; he is a menace to the neighborhood,' the boy's blue eyes flashed his scorn at their sentiments. 'He is all she has,' he answered."

In Chancery of New Jersey.

To Robert A. McLean, H. Ahrenstedt, J. D.
(or Joseph) Armstrong, Mary F. Armstrong his wife, Fannie A. Newman, Timbrook Newman her husband, David E.
Zasek, and Mrs. David E. Zasek his wife:
By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein Rachel Miller is complainant and you and each of you are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant, on or before the ninth day of June next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage given by Robert A. McLean to W. A. Clough, Trustee, dated February 4th, 1897, on certain lands in the Township of Mullica, Atlantic County, New Jersey, which said mortgage was duly assigned to complainant; and you, Robert A. McLean, H. Ahrenstedt, J. D. (or Joseph) Armstrong, Fannie A. Newman, and David E. Zasek are made defendants because you own said lands or some part thereof; and you Mary E. Armstrong, Timbrook Newman, and Mrs. David E. Zasek are made defendants because you may have some claim of dower or curtesy in said lands or some part thereof.
Dated April 6, 1904.

BASE-BALL.

The season opened last Saturday with two games. The home team need more practice, of course, but played a pretty fair game. The features were Abbott on first, and the battery work.

This afternoon, Hammoncton versus the Nesco team.

We must not forget the "kids." The H. A. A. defeated the "Youths" on Saturday morning, by 17 to 15. The victorious team made no errors, while their opponents are charged with 2; but the Youths made four home runs, and the other team none.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of John A. Quinn, deceased.
Pursuant to the order of Emmanuel C. Shaner, Surrogate of the County of Atlantic, made on the twenty-sixth day of March, nineteen hundred and four, on the application of the undersigned, administrator of said deceased, notice is hereby given to the creditors of the said deceased to exhibit to the administrator, under oath or affirmation, their debts, demands and claims against the estate of the said deceased, within nine months from said date, or they will be forever barred from prosecuting or recovering the same against the administrator.
WILLIAM L. BLACK,
Administrator, Hammoncton, N. J.

The Booklets.

Ten thousand booklets of the Town of Hammoncton, beautifully illustrated, have just been issued by the Board of Trade. Every citizen is entitled to a copy, free of charge, which may be procured by calling on the Secretary, Dr. Charles Cunningham, at his residence, Second Street.

Additional copies may be obtained by paying the following prices:
eight for 25 cents; three for 10 cents; or 5 cents each. These prices include envelopes for mailing, when desired. They can be purchased of the Secretary, from P. H. Jacobs, Chairman of Printing Committee,
and at Henson's news room.

The cost of these booklets largely exceeds the above prices, and all money obtained from their sale will be kept separate from the general funds of the Board of Trade, and be used exclusively for advertising the Town in other ways.
