

Special Notice.

THE THIRTYTHREE TOWNS in the New Jersey will hereafter be as follows:
$2.00 a year, in advance;
$2.25 if paid during first six months,
$2.50 after six months.
When subscribers request the discontinuance of payment, the explanation of its time paid for, the request will be complied with.
In all other cases the discontinuance will be sent with an explicit order for its discontinuance. It receives, and all arrears paid according to law.
DOBUS B. SNOW,
Editor and Publisher.

HAMMONTON!

Rare Opportunity to Secure

A HOME

To All Wanting Farms.

In the great Hammonton Fruit Settlement, the best inducements are offered to all wanting farms in the most delightful and healthy climate, with a good productive soil, being among the best in the garden State of New Jersey; only thirty miles from Philadelphia on the Caledonia and Atlantic Railroad, and but few miles to the New York Railroad. These lands are sold to the actual settlers at low prices and easy terms, in five, ten, twenty acres and upwards to suit. The title perfect, warranty deeds, clear of all incumbrances, given when all the purchase money is paid.

The Soil

is fine sandy and clay-loam, suitable for all grains and grasses, and is pronounced the finest quality for gardening and fruit raising. It is a marine deposit, with a sandy substance mixed all through it in a very constituted form, and in the exact condition to support plants with proper firmness; it is very productive and profitable, worked, and warm and early. The bay of the land is slightly undulating, and is called level; it is free from stones or rocks.

The best fruit soil in the Union. Peaches, Apples, Quince, Cherries, Blackberries, Raspberries, Grapes, and all the other Vegetables delight in this soil; this branch of farming pays much better than grain raising, and is much easier work.

The Market

is unsurpassed; direct communication twice a day to Philadelphia, New York, and Atlantic City. The Railroad Company leaves cars to be filled with fruit every day in the season; they are filled in the afternoon, and the same night or next morning by daylight are in the market, where the highest cash prices are obtained, without any other trouble to the producer than delivering the produce to the car. None of the land, now offered, is over one and a half miles from the Railroads.

The Climate

is mild and delightful, the winters being short and open, our-door work can be carried on nearly all winter, while the summer is no warmer than the north. Persons wanting exchange for health will be satisfied here—the mildness of the climate is soon beneficially felt by delicate persons, and those suffering from Dyspepsia, Pulmonary affections, or General Debility, as hundred here will testify. This season has long been known for its health, and during the summer months none of the woods look for health. No Missions, Clubs, and Societies in this section.

The Water

is pure and soft, of the best quality. It abounds in strontium and is found by digging from ten to thirty feet. Wells are cheaply made here, as there is no rock to go through. We have the best stores in the country, where goods are sold as cheap as they are in Philadelphia or New York.—Good schools with competent teachers.—Clergyman of all denominations reside here, some of them in charge of congregations, others cultivating the fruits; also a number of retired physicians. The Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, Universalists, Separatists have their services regularly.—Miles convenient.

Rapidly practical improvements who furnish all kinds of trees, plants, and vines at the lowest prices.

The population of the settlement is large and rapidly increasing; it is composed of the best classes from New England, the Middle, and Western States,—intelligent, industrious and moral. The buildings are neat and handsome, and made of them fine. All materials for building, improving, &c., at hand; also valuable machinery which will give satisfaction. Every convenience to tool that can be found in any other place. Persons owning property here obtain tickets of the Railroad company to and from the city at a discount of twenty-five per cent on the regular fare.

We have here established by some of the best agriculturists and fruit growers in the country, who pronounce them the best in the U. S. for fruit growing. Mr. Sedon Robinson, the agricultural editor of the New York Tribune; Dr. J. P. Pringle, the State Entomologist; Mr. John G. Rogers, member of the American Institute of New York, and others, reported that they never saw a finer growth of fruit, green, and green, than they saw here, and recommended this settlement to persons desiring to till the soil for pleasure or profit.

These lands are being rapidly sold, and from the rapid and extensive improvements property will certainly increase in value. Inquire of R. J. BYRNEs, the founder of the settlement, who will show the lands free of expense. For further information inquire of address.

R. J. BYRNEs,

Hammonton, N. J.

All letters answered.

Several very desirable improved fruit farms for sale.

South Jersey Republican.

HAMMONTON, N. J., SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1866.

$2.00 PER YEAR

VOL. 3.—NO. 42.

AGRICULTURAL.

INSECTS.

The curculio made its appearance here some two weeks ago, and has been doing its usual mischief. Its ravages are general, but the insects seem most numerous in and about those fruit orchards where last year the stung fruit was allowed to decay on the ground. Where the affected fruit was promptly gathered and destroyed by burning or feeding—it can not well be destroyed in any other way—the destructive effects of the insect are comparatively moderate. This shows the importance of giving proper attention to the orchards, and of gathering and destroying all imperfect fruit that falls to the ground, or that can be found on the trees.—External vigilance—in this respect, is our purpose to publish the amount so far as ascertained, and when other reports shall be handed in, as we hope they may be, to add them to the amount now reported, and publish again. This is not what we would like to do, as it would then probably the first report will travel further than any of the succeeding ones. The amount now given will be taken up by our contemporaries, and will go from one to another as far as the name of Hammonton is known, and before half through the rounds will be passed as the full amount growing. Few people like to be underpaid, and still fewer like to have the city, town or village in which they dwell, undervalued. If such comes from the publication of this imperfect report, it will be the fault of committees, not of the manager of this paper. A cultivator has that can not make his land bring him a net increase of two or three hundred dollars per acre, annually, must be remiss in either an intelligent understanding of practical agriculture, or in industry. The only serious obstacle to be overcome is the ravages of the insect enemies of fruit and fruit trees. This can be surmounted. The one thing necessary is for farmers to realize the importance of unceasing vigilance. Nothing more can be said to rogue growers to the importance of this, than has been. "It is plain as the nose on a man's face" that unless the insects are kept in check, they will sooner or later destroy all the fruit, or nearly destroy it that the growing out of any considerable extent will be impracticable, and unprofitable. Fruit growers of Hammonton, if there is one of you not already engaged in an energetic fight against your fruit enemies, especially the curculio—the Jim Soots of the fruit orchards—let us entreat you as you value success and the prosperity and growth of this thriving town, go at it. It is only through neglect in past years that these enemies are so abundant now. Let them be properly looked after for a year or two, and they will be so subjugated that the work of keeping them in check will be trifling, especially as they will not be likely to be in northern states that did not rebel—to have the benefit of Esquire Johnson's reconstruction policy.

SELECTED.

GOING ASHORE.

(Continued.)

"Over seventy, sir," shouted a voice in reply to a query. "Old man—a war-man in many a storm; but this here's awful."

Awful it was; for so wild a night had not fallen upon that part of the coast for many years; and as the folks upon the shore gazed in the direction the boat had taken, they shook their heads, and shouted in each other's ears.

There was a long and awful pause, only broken by the shrieking of the wind, and then came a loud shout. "Here she comes!" and in another minute, obedient to their steersman, the rowers struck their strokes to a scowth, so that the boat, heavily laden, role upon the summit of a giant wave so far that twenty willing hands were at her side, and she was run right up the sides and fifteen shivering, half-drowned, fellow creatures flung out and hurried up the shaw.

"Now, my lad," cried old Marks, "on to the truck with her, and we're off again!"

The boat was soon mounted, and even man at his post, the latter of the two taking his place by the side of the old coxswain; for no amount of persuasion or entreaty could induce them to go again.

It obeyed—turning cold, and trembling as I did so—struck the soft bluish sky, now so placid and serene; almost wondering that so great a change could have taken place, when I started, for a voice behind me shouted. "Morning watch. Draw the curtain, and let that moon shine in."

I obeyed—turning cold, and trembling as I did so—struck the soft bluish sky, now so placid and serene; almost wondering that so great a change could have taken place, when I started, for a voice behind me shouted. "Morning watch. Draw the curtain, and let that moon shine in."

The boat was soon mounted, and even man at his post, the latter of the two taking his place by the side of the old coxswain; for no amount of persuasion or entreaty could induce them to go again.

It obeyed—turning cold, and trembling as I did so—struck the soft bluish sky, now so placid and serene; almost wondering that so great a change could have taken place, when I started, for a voice behind me shouted. "Morning watch. Draw the curtain, and let that moon shine in."

The boat was soon mounted, and even man at his post, the latter of the two taking his place by the side of the old coxswain; for no amount of persuasion or entreaty could induce them to go again.

It obeyed—turning cold, and trembling as I did so—struck the soft bluish sky, now so placid and serene; almost wondering that so great a change could have taken place, when I started, for a voice behind me shouted. "Morning watch. Draw the curtain, and let that moon shine in."

The boat was soon mounted, and even man at his post, the latter of the two taking his place by the side of the old coxswain; for no amount of persuasion or entreaty could induce them to go again.

It obeyed—turning cold, and trembling as I did so—struck the soft bluish sky, now so placid and serene; almost wondering that so great a change could have taken place, when I started, for a voice behind me shouted. "Morning watch. Draw the curtain, and let that moon shine in."

The boat was soon mounted, and even man at his post, the latter of the two taking his place by the side of the old coxswain; for no amount of persuasion or entreaty could induce them to go again.

It obeyed—turning cold, and trembling as I did so—struck the soft bluish sky, now so placid and serene; almost wondering that so great a change could have taken place, when I started, for a voice behind me shouted. "Morning watch. Draw the curtain, and let that moon shine in."

The boat was soon mounted, and even man at his post, the latter of the two taking his place by the side of the old coxswain; for no amount of persuasion or entreaty could induce them to go again.

Fruit in Hammonton.

Some weeks ago the Pomological Society of this town appointed committees in every part of it, to ascertain the amount of fruit in cultivation in this settlement. Much ardor has been manifested by many of the committees. All the reports are not yet in, though ample time has past.

I presume those who have failed to report have good reasons for their failure, but it is none the less an occasion for regret.

It is our purpose to publish the amount so far as ascertained, and when other reports shall be handed in, as we hope they may be, to add them to the amount now reported, and publish again. This is not what we would like to do, as it would then be probable the first report will travel further than any of the succeeding ones. The amount now given will be taken up by our contemporaries, and will go from one to another as far as the name of Hammonton is known, and before half through the rounds will be passed as the full amount growing.

Few people like to be underpaid, and still fewer like to have the city, town or village in which they dwell, undervalued. If such comes from the publication of this imperfect report, it will be the fault of committees, not of the manager of this paper.

"Has she gone to pieces?" he whispered, stopping to wipe the blood away that oozed from his lips.

"I fear so," I replied; "the shore is strewn with wrecks."

"I knew she would," he gasped.

"Poor things, poor things! How many did we bring ashore?"

"I told him fifteen."

"Ah!" he groaned, "not enough."

"But it was a most gallant act," I said;

and more would have been saved but for the accident. Where are you hurt?" It is not serious, I hope?"

"Serious?" he whispered; and then, with a sad smile, "No; it isn't serious."

"It is only one hurt, and my time's up long ago—four years and more. So it isn't serious."

"Where are you hurt?" I said.

"Kins all crushed," he whispered; "I was mid the gals of the boat; and it was all over. I could see it in the doctor's looks."

A gush of blood stopped his utterance, and I dared not whisper his name. I could not feel.

"It's all right, sir," he whispered, after lying with his eyes closed for about half an hour; "it's all right, and an old man can do better than do his duty. I never thought to; but I always felt, and so I shall; but I wish there had been more."

"More what?" I said.

"More saved," he whispered. "You see I've been born now in action; and the Almighty only knows how many souls I've cut off; and I should like to feel sure I'd saved more than I did for—that's all. Perhaps they might go in the scale, to help balance the bad."

"But you did all a part of your duty."

"Ah!" he whispered, "duty? Yes,

sailors should do their duty; and I felt it was mine, to-night, to go. We old men's men were trained to answer to a call in calm or storm; and when lives were at stake to-night, I felt that I was called, and I hope I did my duty. Will you ask them fifteen to just say a word or two for the old man in their prayers, sir? I am an angel I'm gone—I think I should like them to, for I am an old sailor, and can boast of my just life."

"It's all right, sir," he whispered, after lying with his eyes closed for about half an hour; "it's all right, and an old man can do better than do his duty. I never thought to; but I always felt, and so I shall; but I wish there had been more."

"More what?" I said.

"More saved," he whispered. "You see I've been born now in action; and the Almighty only knows how many souls I've cut off; and I should like to feel sure I'd saved more than I did for—that's all. Perhaps they might go in the scale, to help balance the bad."

"But you did all a part of your duty."

"Ah!" he whispered, "duty? Yes,

sailors should do their duty; and I felt it was mine, to-night, to go. We old men's men were trained to answer to a call in calm or storm; and when lives were at stake to-night, I felt that I was called, and I hope I did my duty. Will you ask them fifteen to just say a word or two for the old man in their prayers, sir? I am an angel I'm gone—I think I should like them to, for I am an old sailor, and can boast of my just life."

"It's all right, sir," he whispered, after lying with his eyes closed for about half an hour; "it's all right, and an old man can do better than do his duty. I never thought to; but I always felt, and so I shall; but I wish there had been more."

"More what?" I said.

"More saved," he whispered. "You see I've been born now in action; and the Almighty only knows how many souls I've cut off; and I should like to feel sure I'd saved more than I did for—that's all. Perhaps they might go in the scale, to help balance the bad."

"But you did all a part of your duty."

"Ah!" he whispered, "duty? Yes,

sailors should do their duty; and I felt it was mine, to-night, to go. We old men's men were trained to answer to a call in calm or storm; and when lives were at stake to-night, I felt that I was called, and I hope I did my duty. Will you ask them fifteen to just say a word or two for the old man in their prayers, sir? I am an angel I'm gone—I think I should like them to, for I am an old sailor, and can boast of my just life."

"It's all right, sir," he whispered, after lying with his eyes closed for about half an hour; "it's all right, and an old man can do better than do his duty. I never thought to; but I always felt, and so I shall; but I wish there had been more."

"More what?" I said.

"More saved," he whispered. "You see I've been born now in action; and the Almighty only knows how many souls I've cut off; and I should like to feel sure I'd saved more than I did for—that's all. Perhaps they might go in the scale, to help balance the bad."

"But you did all a part of your duty."

"Ah!" he whispered, "duty? Yes,

sailors should do their duty; and I felt it was mine, to-night, to go. We old men's men were trained to answer to a call in calm or storm; and when lives were at stake to-night, I felt that I was called, and I hope I did my duty. Will you ask them fifteen to just say a word or two for the old man in their prayers, sir? I am an angel I'm gone—I think I should like them to, for I am an old sailor, and can boast of my just life."

"It's all right, sir," he whispered, after lying with his eyes closed for about half an hour; "it's all right, and an old man can do better than do his duty. I never thought to; but I always felt, and so I shall; but I wish there had been more."

"More what?" I said.

"More saved," he whispered. "You see I've been born now in action; and the Almighty only knows how many souls I've cut off; and I should like to feel sure I'd saved more than I did for—that's all. Perhaps they might go in the scale, to help balance the bad."

"But you did all a part of your duty."

"Ah!" he whispered, "duty? Yes,

sailors should do their duty; and I felt it was mine, to-night, to go.

Hannington, Atlantic Co., N. J.
Saturday, May 26, 1861

SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1861

Political.

This has been a somewhat interesting and important week politically. On Tuesday evening Senator Stewart spoke to a large political gathering in Auburn, and Wednesday evening the Johnson Club on Washington City congratulated the President.

The speech was a somewhat interesting and important week politically. On Tuesday evening Senator Stewart spoke to a large political gathering in Auburn, and Wednesday evening the Johnson Club on Washington City congratulated the President.

Democratic Virtue.

Our Democratic neighbors protest against political corruption and fraud with considerable zeal and perseverance, but in their practice are not always exemplary. They have had some days before us, and that would be expected of them, and the purpose of the club had been made public. The speech of Eugene Johnson was wonderfully short, but did not lack either eloquence or oratorical power. He is a coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-conceited, and wanting in all that constitutes true virtue and high moral character. They have had some days before us, and that would be expected of them, and the purpose of the club had been made public. The speech of Eugene Johnson was wonderfully short, but did not lack either eloquence or oratorical power. He is a coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-conceited, and wanting in all that constitutes true virtue and high moral character.

They have had some days before us, and that would be expected of them, and the purpose of the club had been made public. The speech of Eugene Johnson was wonderfully short, but did not lack either eloquence or oratorical power. He is a coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-conceited, and wanting in all that constitutes true virtue and high moral character.

NEW YORK.

The engineers of the Morris and Daley Bay railroad are now surveying the road from New York to Albany, and they have decided that it is not.

He demands the unqualified admission of all the southern representatives, not of whom is loyal, and that the states shall have full representation while those who are not can be compelled to stop.

The following party has been formed:

The Select Mr. Stewart gave the President's, really the only policy of Congress, and the heads of departments for the purpose of securing from their expressions of their views, and in doing so, they have done what they have done.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that constitutes true virtue and high moral character.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was won-

derfully short, but did not lack either

eloquence or oratorical power. He is a

coarse, vulgar man, fearfully vain and self-

conceited, and wanting in all that con-

stitutes true virtue and high moral char-

acter.

They have had some days before us, and

that would be expected of them, and the

purpose of the club had been made public.

The speech of Eugene Johnson was wonderfully

