Athletic Association.

The Association desires first to thank all who who assisted in making our opening day a success,—particularly the Band, which was a necessity for the program. Their numerous selections were greatly appreciated by the association and all who were present.

The track events showed some very good time. The meet was a novelty, and proved a strong drawing card. Summary of events:

Junior 100-yard dash. 1st, Russell Brown, 2nd Harry Cottrell, 3rd Russell Fisher. Time 12.85 seconds.
Half-mile Run. 1st, Frank Romeo, 2nd C. Hannum, 3rd Russell Brown. Time 2:24.15.
100 yard Dash. 1st Chas. Snyder, 2nd John Dickson, 3rd Carson Adams. Time 11.15 sec.
Junior quarter mile. 1st, Harry Cottrell, 2nd Salvador Grillo, 3rd Eugene Barber. Time, 1 m. 0.15 sec.
440 yard Run. 1st Chas. Snyder, 2nd Carson Adams, 3rd John Dickson. Time 59.25 sec.
Broad Jump. 1st John Dickson, 2nd Frank Romeo, 3rd Russell Fisher. 13 ft. 10 in.

First men in each event hold the association record. Officials, Prof. N. C. Holdridge, E. McAlone, H. L. Smith, H. C. Doughty, George R. Greis.

The base-ball game was called promptly at four, after Mayor J. M. Austin made a short speech and tossed the first ball. The Egg Harbor team won by 4 to 1,—their victory being due to their better placed hits. The score:

Two base hits... Garnich, Smith, Butler, and Perston.
Three base hits... Thielacker and Keyser
Double play... Tell to Black
Umpires... Sutton and Naylor

The entire programme was carried out, and the attendance was large for an opening,—greatly exceeding that at last year's.

To-day our team will meet the Brandywine A. C., a very strong team, and the game promises to be interesting.

Memorial Day, our home team will play at Pleasantville, and this will give you an opportunity to see our traveling team, who will play the Egg Harbor Athletics,—two games, morning at 10.30, afternoon at 3.30. The association is managing two teams, which are too nearly equal to be classed as first and second.

Come out Tuesday afternoon, and see how good the traveling team really is.

Because of the many announcements this week, we omit comments on Saturday's game. Beginning next week, the write-up will include the usual box score and a criticism of the game.

THE UNSPOKEN SENTENCE

Convicted On Circumstantial Evidence,
But Saved by Real Murderer's Confession

The most solemn moment of the trial was approaching—the moment that was to decide a man's fate, a question of life or death, consigning him to an ignominious end or unloving the gates that locked him from the living, outside world, restoring freedom to him again.

Every eye in that crowded and stuffy Court, however much it wandered round the sombre setting of that dramatic scene, always returned to the central figure, the man standing in the dock—a man of middle age, yet carrying his years with him, a buoyancy of youth—a fine, noble-looking man, the most magnetic figure present.

He was charged with murder, and the evidence, circumstantial though it was, had been strong enough to beat down a defence that had relied solely upon the prisoner's simple but unshaken assertions of innocence; at least, that was the general feeling through the Court, expressed by those instructed in such matters. Harvey Flood, a money-lender, had been found shot through the heart in his study on a certain evening some months previously. His only known visitor had been this man, George Cardew, whose account of his antecedents had been meagre to the last degree. He had rejected all offers of legal help, determined to conduct his own defence.

The one single thing in his favor was the openness with which he had made the call upon the man afterwards found murdered. Angry voices had been heard coming from that room shortly after, but the storm of roused passions had soon quieted down, and at least an hour had elapsed when, from a distant part of the house, a maid-servant had heard the report of a revolver, and, alarmed at the ominous sound, she had sought out another servant, and together they had made their way to the study, there to find their master stretched on the floor, dead, as a glance showed.

The weapon was subsequently found hidden behind a flower-stand—a revolver that Cardew had been forced to confess was his property.

But the latter declared that he had taken leave of the money lender less than half an hour of his entering the room, and with regard to the revolver he admitted that, exasperated almost to the point of madness during that interview, he had taken it from his pocket, intending to use it, but, mastering his momentary fury, he had flung it down upon Flood's desk, and had neglected to resume possession of it.

With quiet insistence Cardew had suggested in Court that no one, unless he were a madman, would have left his weapon behind him in such a case; that murder; it was against all common sense, against the very instinct of self-preservation, which would be awakened in the most peace-stricken wretch. And as for his inability to prove the exact moment at which he left the murdered man's presence, he pointed out that he had made his exit, at Mr. Flood's desire, through the open door-windows leading into the front garden, and had returned at that time, possibly by the means by which the murderer had gained entrance to that room.

But police and prosecution, convinced that they had the right man, made light of his feeble defence, paying out in damning facts his reluctance, his refusal to discuss his guilt, his weapon found there, the admitted quarrel, the murdered man's suggestion that his name was announced—a deadly array.

There was a sudden stir in Court, a buzz of excitement, pointing like a wave of emotion throughout the building, followed by an absolute silence as Judge and Jury resumed their places.

The fatal question was asked, and the anticipated answer returned: "Guilty!"

In a brief statement, Mr. Justice Higgs had seemed to show some favor towards the prisoner, taking pains to intimate to the jury what he suggested were weak links in the chain of circumstantial evidence, and they could not now that he was suffering acutely in passing the sentence of death.

As he addressed the prisoner, his voice, though solemn in tone, uttered a little, the words coming more slowly with each syllable, to break off at last with a choking whisper that only those close to him could catch.

ANECDOTE OF WASHINGTON

In the fall of 1776 General Washington and his staff visited Chantilly, near Boston, to study the land thereabouts. They stopped for food and refreshment at the home of Mr. John Daxter. The house sat back fifteen rods from the street and had many stately elms growing to a remarkable height in front. When Washington and his staff were seated at the table, a servant brought in a letter which he handed to the general. The letter was from the British, and it was a most interesting one. It was a letter from the British, and it was a most interesting one. It was a letter from the British, and it was a most interesting one.

evidence might be forthcoming that would clear the man he had never imagined would be suspected of his crime.

"That is true," replied Arnold, slowly. "But, father, have you any hope that this man you suspect will come forward? It is only inference upon your part, after all. Besides, if guilty, he may have fled the country, making it impossible to bring the crime home to him."

"I know he is in England still," rejoined the Judge. "And I think, if you are not too hasty, my son, that I may find him and persuade him to do the right thing, at whatever sacrifice to himself—and others."

It was evening of the same day, and the Judge was alone. He had been resting quietly in his study, threatened more than once by a return of that faintness.

He glanced up as a knock sounded at the door, and his servant entered. "A person wishes to see your lordship, a roughish kind of man. Shall I admit him?"

The Judge nodded. It was his custom, as the servant knew, and one that was sometimes sorely abused, to admit whoever came to him, and he was not willing to accept the rebuke of the Holy Spirit for neglecting to do so.

A moment later the caller entered, an undersized, shifty-eyed man, with foxey gaze and cringing manner. He waited until the door was shut, then he entered the study, and he began to speak.

"Who are you, and what is your errand?" The Judge's quietly severe voice broke the silence.

The man moistened his lips before replying. "It's like this, my lord," he began, in hoarse tones, his words hesitating. "I happened to see something and to hear something on a certain night some very long ago. I was an eye-witness of Harvey Flood's murder."

"Father—Arnold—restored forward across the table, his face pale as death, his hands trembling. "You know this cruelly wronged man?"

The Judge bent his head. "Yes, I had the story from his own lips."

"And you—you believe that it was he who killed this scoundrel?" "I believe it," said the man, with a look of intense conviction. "Let me tell you my story of what occurred. Suppose that, in after years, the husband discovered the truth—that he, and no fondness on her part for the companion of her flight, had induced his wife to go away, and that her fall action, for all its outward show of guilt, was really one that sprang from a generous desire to give freedom to a man who was tricked into supposing no longer loved her."

"You mean that upon such a discovery," said the Judge, "you would bring a belated revenge upon this lying villain?"

"I do not say he went to Flood with any actual intention of killing him. Let us imagine for a moment that he did. The room within a few minutes of Cardew's departure from it. He had never discovered, we will say, the ultimate fate of his lost wife. But now he demands to know from this man, who should at least have made his future his care, some account of how he has dealt with her."

The Judge's last conscious action had been to write down words that would clear a falsely-named man—words that acknowledged that his was the hand that had shot Harvey Flood.

he ejaculated. Then he recovered himself almost at once. "This—is this a terrible affair. I—I must see the Judge."

"He is no longer here. The Judge is dead."

"Oh, my dearest, it is I who must try to comfort you now. But what can I say—what can I do?"

"I have yet many things to say into you, but you cannot bear them now. Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth."

There are two particularly prominent signs whereby a man may know that he is being guided by the Holy Spirit into all truth:

1. That he is being kept from all sectarianism and fanaticism. For, mark well, the Holy Spirit "shall not shall bear," but shall be "drawn out" by the Holy Spirit.

2. That he is being kept from all selfishness and self-interest. For, mark well, the Holy Spirit "shall not shall bear," but shall be "drawn out" by the Holy Spirit.

3. That he is being kept from all pride and self-exaltation. For, mark well, the Holy Spirit "shall not shall bear," but shall be "drawn out" by the Holy Spirit.

4. That he is being kept from all envy and jealousy. For, mark well, the Holy Spirit "shall not shall bear," but shall be "drawn out" by the Holy Spirit.

5. That he is being kept from all wrath and anger. For, mark well, the Holy Spirit "shall not shall bear," but shall be "drawn out" by the Holy Spirit.

6. That he is being kept from all strife and contention. For, mark well, the Holy Spirit "shall not shall bear," but shall be "drawn out" by the Holy Spirit.

health enough to keep on writing every week my articles, be they bad or good. He has given me numerous writing offers to me, and while more to write that which seems to do my readers good.

"Pleasant Musings" have been very pleasant to me to-day, and my desire is that something in them will be found pleasant and profitable to my readers.

He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him—Heb. 11: 6.

The great forces, the richest treasures of earth are hidden. Wisdom, the great forces, the richest treasures of earth are hidden.

One reason why the present generation has entered into the enjoyment of natural forces and unthought of wealth, in the discovery of new and precious elements, is that it has been an age of investigation—an age of seeking.

This is not only true of new treasures but it is also true of the old. Take, for instance, the great increase in the amount of the world's grain, standard of values—gold. An eminent man has recently said that the increase of gold is "partly due to the great increase in the discovery of gold."

But why this condition, men are diligently seeking it. Further and further north have they gone in their search for gold. Piercing the Arctic regions they have a new discovery of the short summer in the far north.

This does not mean that we need not try to understand prophecy. Quite the reverse. It is the duty and privilege of every child of God to study the ways and purposes of God and to learn all we can about them. Inasmuch as the wisest and best of God's children do not all gather the same lessons concerning His plans and purposes from the Bible, it is not surprising that there are many different interpretations of Scripture as to the coming kingdom of Christ on earth appears as a spiritual kingdom, but that is no reason why he should be any less a physical kingdom. Whether as a spiritual kingdom, or as a physical kingdom, it is a question that cannot be settled by a dogmatic assertion on either side, and there is nothing to be gained by disputing about it.

But, leaving that question aside altogether, let us see, if we will, what open eyes to the facts of history, that the principles laid down by Christ as the basis of His kingdom have given us very great ascendancy in the minds of men—taking the world as a whole.

The horrible cruel treatment of criminals, the suppression of criminals, and the punishment of criminals, are all things that are being done in the name of Christ. The world is being changed by the power of Christ.

The world is being changed by the power of Christ. The world is being changed by the power of Christ. The world is being changed by the power of Christ.

THE UNIVERSAL REIGN OF PEACE.

Mich. 4: 1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT—Nations shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. Mich. 4: 3.

This passage is evidently a prediction of the coming of a kingdom of God on earth, and the six verses in forms us that there will be a King reigning in Zion. It has been inferred from this and other similar prophecies that the Jews will eventually be restored to their own land, and that Jesus will reign to earth in flesh and blood and reign in Jerusalem. And this physical reign of Christ in Jerusalem has been identified with the Millennium spoken of in Rev. 20: 7.

If we assume, for the sake of argument, that this is a correct view of the matter, it remains true that our sole responsibility is to do the will of God to the very best of our ability day by day in the condition of things in which we are now living, and to look to God for grace and guidance day by day; for that is the only way in which we can help to prepare ourselves and the world about us for the future that may have in store for us and for it. If we do our duty faithfully every day, and do it in the fear of God and to the glory of God, we can safely leave the future in God's hands, assured that He will work out His own living purposes in His own good time and way.

This does not mean that we need not try to understand prophecy. Quite the reverse. It is the duty and privilege of every child of God to study the ways and purposes of God and to learn all we can about them. Inasmuch as the wisest and best of God's children do not all gather the same lessons concerning His plans and purposes from the Bible, it is not surprising that there are many different interpretations of Scripture as to the coming kingdom of Christ on earth appears as a spiritual kingdom, but that is no reason why he should be any less a physical kingdom. The Hammononton Paint

Is the very best paint that was ever used in Hammononton.

There are scores of buildings that you see every day, painted with the Hammononton Paint eight to twelve years ago, and looking well at the present time.

The Hammononton Paint is sold for less than any other first-class paint. It has no equal, as it works well, covers well, and wears well. Sold by

There was a fire alarm about four o'clock Sunday afternoon, but no work for firemen. It was smoke issuing from a pile of manure near Ordille's hog-pen, away out Third Street.

PROPOSAL. To the Town of Hammononton, County of Atlantic, and State of New Jersey.

To grade and resurface Bellevue Ave., between Main Road and Egg Harbor Road, a distance of Seven Thousand Three Hundred Feet (7,300) with gravel to conform with the lines and grades given by the Engineer.

The plans, profiles and specifications are on file at the office of the Engineer, Mr. J. C. Remington, Jr., second floor of the Spear Building, Bellevue Ave. Hammononton, N. J.

Gentlemen: The Bidder must carefully examine the annexed specifications and the drawings therein referred to, and will provide all necessary machinery, tools, apparatus and other means of construction, and do all the work and furnish all the material called for by said specifications in the manner prescribed by the specifications and the requirements of the Engineer.

Accompanying the bid is a certified check for the sum of Five Hundred Dollars ($500) payable to the order of A. B. Davis, Treasurer for the Town of Hammononton, N. J., which check is to be forfeited as liquidated damages if, in case this proposal is accepted, the undersigned shall fail to execute a contract with said Town of Hammononton, under the conditions of this proposal, within the time provided for by the foregoing advertisement for proposals; otherwise, said check is to be returned to the undersigned.

All bids must be sealed in an opaque envelope, entitled "Bid for grading Bellevue Avenue," addressed to Mr. Jesse N. Rogers, Chairman Highway Committee. Bids must be presented at the Town Hall, or Council Chamber, before eight o'clock p. m. on Tuesday, June 6, 1911. Council shall have a right to receive or reject any or all bids. Signed
W. R. BEELY, Town Clerk.

Summer Term beginning June 15

For farm, stock and poultry buildings, J-M Regal Roofing is unequalled. It keeps out the cold in winter and the heat in summer, and keeps them dry at all times.
J-M Regal Roofing also gives longer service than ordinary roofings. It is made of the best quality wool felt, heavily saturated and coated with genuine J-M TRINIDAD LAKE ASPHALT—a mineral which has stood the braving sun and the raging storms of the equator for centuries without deterioration.

IT IS GUARANTEED
The warranty given with J-M Regal Roofing means something. It is simple, honest and liberal. And this warranty is backed by a $100,000.00 concern that has never broken a promise nor shirked an honorable obligation during the 30 years it has manufactured roofings. Don't buy any roofing until you see a sample of REGAL. We'll send you samples of this Roofing and book if you can't call.
