BULL-DOG DRUMMOND

The Adventures of a Demobilized Officer Who Found Peace Dull By CYRIL MCNEILE

IT IS TO LAUGH.

Bynepsis—In December, 1913, four nen gather in a hotel lib Berne and bear one of the quartet outline a lian to paralyse Great Britain and at the same time saiks world power. The other three, Hocking, American, and Steineman and Von Gratz, can, and Stancounn and Yon Grats, Garmans, all, millionaires, agree to the scheme, providing another man. While dining with Phyllis and her father Drummond leaves The Larches and explores leaves The Larches and explores. The Elms. He discovers Latington and Paterson using a thumberrew on Kiram Potts, who signs a paper. Drummond secures half the paper. Toscues him after a struggle and takes him to his own home. Peterson calls and demands the half of the torn paper and Potts. Hugh laughe at him.

There was something so incredibly menacing in the soft, quiet voice that Drummond looked at the speaker fas-clusted. He had a sudden feeling that he must be dreaming—that in a moment or two he would wake up and find that they had really been talking about the weather the whole time, Then the cynical gleam of triumph in Peterson's eyes acted on him like a cold douche.

Your candor is as refreshing." he knowered genially, "as your similes are apt. I shudder to think of that poor little fly, Mr. Peterson, especially with your chauffour grinding his pieces." He held open the door for his visitor, and followed him into the passage. At the other end stood Denny, ostentationsly dusting a book-shelf, and Peterson glanced at him casually. It was characteristic of the man that no trace of annoyance showed on his face. He might have been an ordinary visitor taking his

And then suddenly from the room entside which Denny was dusting there came a Yow mounting and an incoherent bubble, A quick frown passed over Drummond's face, and Peterson regarded him thoughtfully

"An invalid in the house?" he re-"How inconvenient for you He laid his hand for a moment on the soldier's arm, "I radly fear you're going to make a fool of yoursels, And It will be such a pity." He turned toward the stairs. "Don't bother; please; I can find my own way out,

Hugh turned back into his own goom, and lighting a particularly noisy chair. He was under no delusions as to the risks he was running. Under rating his opponent had never been to fault of his, either in the ring or in France, and he had no intention of beginning now. The man who could abduct an American millionaire, and drug him till be was little better than a baby, and then use a thumbscree to enforce his wishes, was not likely to prove over-scrupulous in the fu

After a while he began half-uncon actously to talk aloud to himself, "Two attenuatives, old buck." he comurked embhing the air with his pipe. "Onegive the Potts bled up at Berner street? two-do not. Number oneout of goart at once. Proposterousthe field," He rang the boll.

The servant took a protonged our yes, and Anally announced that he fulled to see him.

"Then that proves conclusively fluid he's there," sold Hugh, "Write-It down James: Four Owing to the watcher without, Potta cannot leave the house without being seen." "Yes, sit," "squrmed James duffully, through his instructions, and molded

"And in order to get him there, we | approvingty. must get rid of the watcher without. How can we get rid of the bird—how can we, James, I ask you? Why, by giving him nothing further to watch for. Once let him think that Potts is no longer within, unless he's an imbecile he will no longer remain without. Now trot along over. James, and my compliments to Mr. Darrell. Ask him to come in and see me for a moment. Say I'm thinking and daren't

James rose obediently, and Drum-mond heard him cross over the passage to the other suite of rooms that lay on the same floor. Then he heard the murmur of voices, and shortly afterward his servant returned.

""He is in his bath, sir, but he'll come over as soon as he's finished." He delivered the message and stood waiting. "Anything more, sir?"
"Yes, James. I feel certain that there's a lot. But just to carry on with, I'll have another glass of beer." As the door closed. Drummond rose and started to pace up and down the room. The plan he had in his mind was simple, but he was a man who believed in simplicity. Peterson will not come himselfnor will our one and only Henry. Potts has not been long in the country, which is all to the good. And if it falls we shan't be any worke off than we are now. Luck—that's all; and the more you tempt her, the kinder she is." He was still talking gently to himself when Peter Darrell strolled Into the room.

"Can this thing be true, old boy, remarked the newcomer. 'I hear you're in the threes of a brain-storm." "I am, Peter. I want you to help

"All that I have, dear old flick, is yours for the asking. What can I do?" "Well, first of all, I want you to ome along and see the household pet." "He plioted Darrell along the passage to the American's room, and opened the door. The millionaire looked at them dazedly from the pillows, and Darrell stared back in startled surprise.

"My God! What's the matter with him?" he cried.
"I would give a good deal to know,"

said Hugh grimly. Then he smiled reassuringly at the motionless man, and led the way back to the sitting-

"Sit down, Peter," he said. "Get outside that beer and listen to me carefully."

For ten minutes he spoke, while his ompanion listened in silence. Gone completely was the rather vacuousfaced youth clad in a gorgeous dressing gown: in his place there sat a keen-faced man nodding from time to lme as a fresh naint At length Hugh finished. "Will you do it, old mun?" he asked.
"Of course," returned the other.

"But wouldn't it be better, Hugh," he said pleadingly, "to whip up two or three of the boys and have a real scrap? I don't seem to have anything

Drummond shook his bend decided ly, "No. Poter, my boy—not this show, We're up against a big thing; and if you like to come with me, I von'll have all you want to the screeping line before you're untered. But this time, low cunning is the order, Darrell rose, "Right you are, dearte. Your Instructions shall be carried out to the letter. Come and feed your

This effusion he also enclosed in a sealed envelope, which he again addressed to his bank. Finally, he etemped the first, but not the second-and placed them both in his pocket:

.With the departure of the Dennys for Paddington, which coincided most aptly with the return of Peter Darrell, a period of activity commenced in Half Moon street. But being interior activity, interfering in ho way with the placid warmth of the street outside, the gentleman without, whom a keen observer anight have thought strangely interested in the beauties of that well-known thoroughfare—seeing that he had been there for three hours -remained serenely unconscious of it. His pal had followed the Dennys to Paddington. Drummond had not come out-and the watcher who watched without was beginning to get bored.

The veins stood out on Drumn forehead, and he controlled himself ith an immense effort. "Are you aware that this man is a guest of mine, and sick?" he said, his voice shaking with rage. "You don't say," remarked the leadr, and one of the others laughed, "Rip the bed-clothes off, boys, and gag the young cock-sparrow." Before he could resist, a gag was thrust in Drummond's mouth and his bands were tied belied his back. Then, helpless and impotent, he watched three of them lift up the man from the bed, and putting a gag in his mouth also, carry him out of the room.

"Move," said the fourth to Hugh. You join the piculc." 100 join the picule."

A large car drove up as they reached the street, and in less time than it takes to tell, the two beinless men were pushed in, followed by the leader; the door was shut and the car drove on. "Don't forget." he said to Drumond suavely, "this gun is silent. You had better be the same."

At one o'clock the car swung up to The Elms. For the last ten minutes Hugh had been watching the invalid in the corner, who was making frantic efforts to loosen his gag. His eyes were rolling horribly, and he swayed from side to side in his seat, but the bandages round his hands held firm and at last he gave it up.

Even when he was lifted out and carried indoors he did not struggle: he seemed to have sunk into a sort of apathy. Drummond followed with dignified calmness, and was led into a room of the hall.

"In a moment or two Peterson entered, followed by his daughter. "Ah! my young friend," cried Peterson affailly. "I hardly thought you'd give me such an easy run as"this." He but his hand into Drummond's pockets, and pulled out his revolver and a bundle of letters. "To your bank," he "Oh! surely, surely not that as well. Not even stamped. Part ONE.

"It is a little difficult to know what poursoif, I know it's nameating, but to do with you, young man," said Po-terson gently, after a long silence. "I knew you had no tact."

Drummond leaned back in his chair and regarded his light with a faint "I must come to work for lessons. Me Peterson. Though I frankly admit."

he added gentally, "that I have never been brought up to regard the forcible abduction of a harmless individual and a friend who is sleeping off the effects of what low people call a jag as being exactly typical of that admirable and Peterson's glance rested on the dis heveled man still standing by the done and after a moment's thought he leaned forward and pressed a bell.

Take that man away," he said abruptly to the servant who came into the room, "and put him to bed. I will consider what to do with him in the gioralag."

"Consider be d-d." howled Mat lings, starting forward angelly. "You'll consider a thick ear, Mr. Blooming Know-oll. What I wante to know-

The words died away in his mouth, and he gazed at Peterson like a bird looks at a snake. There was some-thing so ruthlessly malignant in the stare of the gray-blue eyes that the ex-soldier who had viewed going over the top with comparative equanimity as being part of his job qualled and looked apprehensively at Drummond.

"Do what the kind gentleman tells you, Mullings," said Hugh, "and go to bed." He at a cigarette, and thoughtfully blew out a cloud of smoke.

"Stop this fooling," snarled Peter "Where have you hidden Potta?" "Tush, tush," murmured Hugh. "You surprise me. I had formed such a charming mental picture of you. Mr. Peterson, as the strong, slient man pho never lost his temper, and here you are, disappointing me at the beginning of our acquaintance. For a moment he thought that Pe terson was going to strike him, and his own fist clenched under the table.

"I wouldn't, my friend," he said quietly, "indeed I wouldn't. Because in you hit me, I shall most certainly hit you. And it will not improve your beauty.*

Slowly Peterson sank back in his chair, and the yeins which had been standing out on his forehead became pormal again. He even smiled; only ceaseless tapping of his hand on his left knee betrayed his momentary loss of composure, Drummond's fist girl. She was in her favorite attitude on the sofe, and had not even looked

"I suppose that it is quite useless for me to argue with you," said Peterson after a white.

"I was a member of my school de baring society:"/remarked Hugh reminiscently. "But I was never much good. I'm too obvious for argument, l'm afraid."

"You probably realize from what has happened tonight," continued Pe-"I should be sorry to think so," answered Hugh. "If that is the best you can dow I'd cut it right out and start a tomato farm." The girl gave a little gurgle of laughter, and lit/another elgarette. Will you come and do the dangerous part of the work for us, Monsley Hugh?" she asked.

"If you promise to restrain the little fellows, I'll water them with plensure," returned Hugh lightly.

Peterson rose and walked over to the window, where he stood motionless, staring out into the darkness. High realized that the situation was what in military phraseology might be termed critical. There were in the house probably half a dozen men who, like their master, were absolutely un-scrupulous. If it aspited Peterson's book to kill him, lid would not hesitate to do so for a single becoud.

For a moment the thought crossed his mind that he would take no chances by remaining in the house; that he would rush Peterson fron bohind and escape into the darkness of the garden. But it was only me mentary-gone almost before it had come, for Hugh Drummond was not that manner of man-gone even before he noticed that Peterson was standing in such a position that he could see every detail of the room behind him reflected in the glass through which he stared.

Both Hugh and Poterson nerrowly escape death in the dark.

Washington's Religion.

There has been considerable controversy over the extent to which religlous better entered into Washington's character. His zowie chronicles show that most of his Sundays, except during the presidency, when he felt obliged to not an example, he spent in maworing lefters, going over his/accounts, hinting or doing any bustness that these with whom he was pegetiating had no heruples. In choosing people to work for him he set up no barriors of creed, judging men from the standpoint of honesty, industry and abliler.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overgoming these conditions. The mild and begins influence of Dr. Kimer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the rominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are re-jected. In because kidney, trouble is so common to the Atherican people, and the common to the American people, and the farge majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

At the time of the settlement of America uncoffined interments were the rule among the humbler classes. In England "some decent coverings were deemed necessary, but this was all." It is more than probable that many of the pilgrim fathers were thus interred.

1683, so that for the past two hundred and fifty years inhumation in coffins may be said to be the custom in this country. In the memory of the living these cossins were all made by hand by the undertaker, who attempted little more than this for the dead. The labor-saving machinery of the last half-century has transformed the undertaker from a carpenter to a funeral director, for his chief duty is no longer to painfully steam long boards into the sides of a coffin, but to intelligently and scientifically care for the dead. By his skill decomposition can now be held in check at will, for with the means and knowledge at present at his command he may choose the autiseptics best suited to his particular purpose. The American funeral director, as a result, has

SHE DIDN'T DARE TO LEAVE HOUSE

On Verge of Nervous Collapse, Indiana Woman Was Almost Helpless.

"I was on the verge of a collapse and was actually afraid to leave the house, but I am overloyed now at the way Taniac has restored my health so perfectly," declared Mrs. Cora M. Jackson, 504 Mulberry St., Terre Hante, Ind.

"I was almost a nervous wreck, and at times for anyone to even talk to me upset me completely. Even at night I could not get easy and quiet and would lie wide-awake, hardly able to sleep at all, and often just got up out of hed, I was so restless. New-one-hendachies often came on me and frequently lasted for days at a time. Then ! had rheumatism so bad in my foints I was almost helpless. My legs and elbows hurt fearfully and some times I just ached all over. There seemed to be no relief for me. my friends were all worried and I was almost disheartened.

But, happily for me, one of my friends suggested that I try Tanlac. I never will forget how I hegan to improve and now I think it is wonderful, that I am feeling so well and strong. My nerves are just as steady as can be and I haven't a rheumatic pain about me. I am in just splendld health and wish everybody knew what a grand medicine Tanlac is."

Tom, Mix, "The Hornets' Nest."

"A Ridin Romeo," is a Tom. Mix story, and was turned over to the producers with the title, "A Hornet's Nest," but was re-named by the critics, "A Ridin' Romeo." It is a story of an inventive cowboy in the land of trouble and romance, who could invent many things but nothing that would keep him out of trouble. This picture is so full of laughs and thrills it is unsafe for any prohibitionist to see, for fear they might become "intoxicated" with joy, and of course this would "brew" such a storm that even the moon might get full. Don't forget the matince at 4 o'clock, admission to which is 17c, thereafter 20c.

"Don't Tickle" Clyde Cook Comedy,

Our offering for the week of May 30, is unusually attractive, and as a special feature for Monday, Decoration Day, we are presenting your old favorite of the screen, Pearl White in a story of dying and reckless adventure. Our Friday's special, "The North Wind's Malice," is a drama of the frozen North when men and women are driven almost to madness by the monotony of solitude. And by the way—beware of monotony. The best preventive at all times is a visit to the Palace or Ragle Theatres-20c worth of prevention is better than $20.00 worth of
