Harriet Victoria, the winsome

little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A.

L. Jackson, died on Saturday last,

May 22nd, aged four years, seven months, and eighteen days, after an illness of only two or three days. Her condition soon became so alarming that early on Saturday morning she was taken to Hahnman Hospital and placed in care of a specialist, Dr. Speakman, but before surgical treatment could be employed the little life flitted out, about 1.30 that afternoon. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the home, conducted by

Pastor E. vanDriht. The floral pieces, forty-five of them, gave an idea of the love the many friends have for the grief-stricken family,

every one feeling it a personal loss.

Harriet was an unusually bright child, a lover of friends, flowers,

home, and her Sunday School class,

who attended the funeral in a body.

A friend has selected this little verse, which expresses the parental feeling better than the writer could put it:

We had a little flower once.

She was our joy and pride;

We loved her, but perhaps too well.

God willed it, and she died.

We laid her in the silent tomb

One lovely day in May;

We'd just begun to view her bloom

When she was called away.

Memorial Day, Monday, May 31st, 1915

It is well to set apart at least one day in the year as a time for remembering,—a day when we think of Patriotism and heroism, and sacrifice, and fearless, unquestioning devotion to duty, when we remember the brave men, North and South, who gave their lives for a cause they believed in.

The differences for which they battled have disappeared, our Memorial is no longer for the Cause, it celebrates the Courage. We may formally decorate their graves or not, the true memorial is in the hearts of the men and women and children who now share the heritage of heroism those men left to us.

You may not see what this has to do with the Clothing business; there is no particular field of heroism in such work. We don't have to lay down our lives in selling Cloths; but we have the same sort of spirit in it,—a willingness to do all we can in the interest of our customers.

A great collection of Men's and Young Men's Clothes is here, ready. They were made for us by Hart Schaffner & Marx, and by A. B. Kirschbaum & Co. Prices range from $10 to $25. Shoes, Hats, and Furnishings,—maximum value for every dollar invested.

TURKISH WOMAN TO-DAY

Great Changes in their Life. — Why few Turks have several Wives

Turkish women have been affected almost as much as the men by the changes that have been taking place in their country. They are showing surprising alacrity in availing themselves of the opportunities found in new conditions.

One of the most interesting and remarkable events in the revolt of the Young Turks in 1908 was the attitude of the women. Being immune from molestation they undertook to deliver speeches and documents and traveled to and fro on missions of great secrecy and importance.

It was stated that during the revolution some of the ladies dispensed with servants and did the house work themselves in order to carry spirit. When their party triumphed many women discarded their veils and took part with uncovered faces in the street demonstrations of the men to celebrate their new liberties.

One woman headed a vast crowd at Istanbul and declared in favor of the new regime, calling upon her sisters to give it their utmost support, while others were seen in the streets, members of the Young Turk party at Sanjika was a lady graduate from the American College at Scutari. Women's clubs were also started, but were afterwards suppressed.

After having availed themselves of her own independence, she refused to assist their former companions in their struggles for a wider life, and have been endeavoring to win their way back into the seclusion of the harem. It has been found impossible to do this altogether.

Turkish ladies have often well educated, though it is only within the last fifty years that it has become customary for them to read and write. Their lives of seclusion, however, are being broken down by the influence of the new world, and they are passing the long winter evenings in, devouring any literature that comes to hand, and are acquiring excellent linguists. For many years past the education of the upper classes has been conducted on modern lines, which has had the effect of increasing their discontent, and they are intensely envious of their Christian and Jewish sisters.

Many of the leading Turks, especially those belonging to the official classes, are broad minded, highly cultured gentlemen. They are brought into touch with foreign ladies who are anxious for their womenfolk to resemble; they therefore offer but little opposition to the movement for women's higher education and greater liberty which is now going on in the country.

Besides having well trained English or French governesses at home, Turkish ladies are now allowed, to take advantage of colleges and schools which have been opened for girls of other races and creeds, while a bursary is about to be started to pay for the education of Turkish women who will undertake to give five years teaching to others after she has completed her own course.

A lady with a woman editor and with domestic concerns, and informed its readers that "my contributions in as far as I am concerned have been gratefully received." It must be confessed that the contributors would find it the information of any value; still, it was a beginning, and as such must not be despised.

It is not generally known that the Turkish woman is in a better legal position than her sisters in any country in Europe. In the Ottoman Empire the rights of her husband, and the law allows him to endow her at marriage with a separate estate over which he has no control. She has the disposal of any money or possessions that may have been hers before her marriage, and as in Turkey daughters

Inherit from parents equally with sons, this is often considerable. She can dispose of her possessions as she pleases. She can see her husband in the courts and be sued by him, she is allowed a sum for housekeeping expenses and no one has a right to inquire how it is spent, while her husband is obliged to maintain her and her servants according to his means. The case recently brought before an English Magistrate of a man who had given his wife $3, a day for herself and two children for nine years would be impossible in Turkey.

In fact, the rights and pretensions of the Turkish women are so powerful that though men are allowed four wives by law they rarely are found with more than one, chief among the reasons given being that they do not care to put themselves in the power of more than one woman.

It must not be supposed, however, that Turkish women are not subject to many and great disabilities. It takes the sworn evidence of two women to balance that of one man, and whereas men are permitted to marry those of another faith the women are forbidden to do so. It was recently announced in English and American papers that a law had been passed by the Turkish Parliament by which a woman could claim divorce from her husband on the ground of his infidelity.

Had this been true, it would have been a great and far reaching reform. The statement, however, is incorrect, and have been endeavoring to win their way back into the seclusion of the harem. It has been found impossible to do this altogether.

Turkish women are taking an increased share in the commerce of the country, they have always been employed in the textile industries, and by their untiring work they contribute in no small degree to the national revenue. This particular orchard which produced the prize winners, is ten years old and was set out in 1901-2. It is located two miles northwest of Zila, and is situated on the right bank of the North Yakima, which is the center of the great Yakima Valley.

This statement was made by Mrs. Ella D. Rowland, of the Zila section of the Yakima Valley, who on November 10, 1910, won the first prize of $100.00 for the best twelve box apple display and variety grown anywhere. Mrs. Rowland's apples, which were scored 882.6 points out of a possible 1000. While her exhibit competed with not only the finest apples from all other districts of the Yakima Valley, but also with the best of the best produced in many other sections of the country, thus without a doubt, the Rowland apples proved to be the equal of any grown anywhere—a fact, which the Yakima Valley had always claimed—and as a glimmer of the fact it may be stated that at the New York Show, held at the New York City, another important part of the great Yakima Valley, secured second prize with 878 points, making the contest between Yakima Valley fruit raisers the feature of that great show. Both of these winners own high-class orchards, and are located in territory, which, only a few years ago, like all other sections of this valley, was a dense mass of sage brush—giving ample proof of the argument that Yakima Valley fruit raisers produce the best fruit that grows.

"There is an abundance of just as good land all through the valley as this I have, and just as good results can be gained from it with any sort of care or orchard," continued Mrs. Rowland.

"My husband and I came here eighteen years ago from Kansas," she said. "We raised huge wheat and corn and they were doing far enough to abandon the hope."

"We paid $10 an acre for the ranch on which my three orchards are located. The one bearing the prize winning apples is on just a little higher ground, and is considered by fruit raisers in this section to be an ideal orchard. Its elevation is about 500 feet."

"I recall, I feel that I am sort of a novice at the business of fruit raising, as I have given the ranch my direct attention only since the death of my husband. K. M. Rowland, late June."

"Yes, I am happy over my luck," smiled Mrs. Rowland. "It was more than I had anticipated, for we had made the pack in such a hurry that I had no idea that I would win any prize at all."

"As the apples were being gathered we put aside thought to make fifty-five boxes from this number was selected the twenty-five box exhibit which won the prize."

"The packing, of course, was a strong point in my favor, on the pack was counted. It was difficult to secure perfect packing at the time when I decided to send an exhibit. I secured the assistance of Miss Lena Milton, a young lady who had had some experience, and Mrs. J. C. Rowland, whose husband was a fifty

Champion Apple Grower

North Yakima, Wash. (Special).

Everywhere champion apple grower and "other people" could have as good luck as I, for the soil is here, the conditions are right, and the Yakima Valley country is the greatest in the world to raise not only fruit of all kinds, but other farm products are raised in abundance and are raised with very little effort.

This statement was made by Mrs. Ella D. Rowland, of the Zila section of the Yakima Valley, who on November 10, 1910, won the first prize of $100.00 for the best twelve box apple display and variety grown anywhere. Jests from the Jokesmiths

NEW SCHOOLBOY HOWLERS.

Some delightful howlers are given in the "University Correspondent." The following is a selection:

"There are five continents, a, e, i, o, and u."

"The tides are caused by the sun drawing the water out and the moon drawing it in again."

"A circle is a line which meets its other end without ending."

An angle is a triangle with only two sides.

St. Andrew is the patron saint of Scotland. The patron saint of England is Union Jack.

A cold soldier is called a vegetable.

A centipede is a French measure of length.

The Home Office is where Home Rules is made.

A bishop without a diocese is called a runaway.

In the houses of the poor the drains are in a tenfold state, and quite unfit for human habitation.

THE CABMAN AND THE BISHOP.

It is not often that a cabman has any chance of influencing ecclesiastical appointments, but Dr. Browne points to such an occasion. When he was Bishop of Stepney he was once dismounting a lion at "Ames Court" when the driver said:

"That's an uncommon nice young man you've sent to take charge of the church in—square. If ever you have the chance to put him in a bigger job he'll do it well."

A little later the bishop did find and did use an opportunity to put the clergyman into a better job, and the cabman's words were justified, for he really did it very well indeed. Dr. Browne has been known to remark, "There is no doubt what the cabman said really influenced me."

A LOSING GAME.

Frederick Townsend Martin, who has abandoned social reform in order to take up a New York reporter's life, recently wrote an article in the "Social Reformer." In one respect, though, it has improved. It doesn't play bridge so desperately as it used to.

"A lady at the height of the bridge game was once discussing the game with me."

"I didn't know you played," I said. "Have you been playing long?"

"No, not for long," she answered. "Only about four check books."

ONE LESS TO FEED.

A. C. Dinkey, of Chicago, at the tenth annual meeting of the Carnegie Association at New York, said to a reporter, apropos of an unjust law:

"Such a law as that drains the life out of you. It is a law that would put business in the position of Mrs. Calhoun City."

A lady said to Mr. Clay:

"I've been over your sermon like her afford to dress so well? She didn't use to."

"I know she didn't use to," he replied. "I explained, 'but you see, her husband has left her.'"

THE CHARITY PLANT.

R. Fulton Cutting, the president of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, gave a good illustration of charity in an address in New York.

"Charity," he said, "is a plant which takes root in the heart, grows in the pocket, and bears fruit in the hand."

AN ABSENT-MINDED PROFESSOR.

A very absent-minded professor was humiliated in giving a scientific problem, when the nurse kindly opened the door to enter from the library and announced a great friendly event.

"The little stranger has arrived, professor."

"What?" said the professor.

"It is a little boy," said the nurse. "Little boy, little boy," mused the professor. "Well, what has he brought?"

"The nurse pressed his hand to his forehead. "More study!" he groaned.

ON LAZINESS.

Dr. Charles A. Eaton said in the course of an after-dinner speech in Cleveland:

"Laziness is responsible for too much of the misery we see about us. It is all very well to blame alcohol for this misery, but to what heights might we not have climbed but for our laziness?"

"He paused a moment, and then he said: 'You are too much like the superman in the dream.' He then sat down and went to sleep."

"My lord, the carriage waits."

"The nurse pressed his hand to his forehead. "More study!" he groaned.

"There is an abundance of just as good land all through the valley as this I have, and just as good results can be gained from it with any sort of care or orchard," continued Mrs. Rowland.

"My husband and I came here eighteen years ago from Kansas," she said. "We raised huge wheat and corn and they were doing far enough to abandon the hope."

"We paid $10 an acre for the ranch on which my three orchards are located. The one bearing the prize winning apples is on just a little higher ground, and is considered by fruit raisers in this section to be an ideal orchard. Its elevation is about 500 feet."

"I recall, I feel that I am sort of a novice at the business of fruit raising, as I have given the ranch my direct attention only since the death of my husband. K. M. Rowland, late June."

"Yes, I am happy over my luck," smiled Mrs. Rowland. "It was more than I had anticipated, for we had made the pack in such a hurry that I had no idea that I would win any prize at all."

"As the apples were being gathered we put aside thought to make fifty-five boxes from this number was selected the twenty-five box exhibit which won the prize."

"The packing, of course, was a strong point in my favor, on the pack was counted. It was difficult to secure perfect packing at the time when I decided to send an exhibit. I secured the assistance of Miss Lena Milton, a young lady who had had some experience, and Mrs. J. C. Rowland, whose husband was a fifty

A NOVEL IDEA.

"Do you know how to use a chafing dish?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Shiraz-Dark. "I have some novel ideas on the subject."

"What are they?"

"The best way I know of to use a chafing dish is to punch a hole in the bottom of it, plant it green, and plant flowers in it."

A BLAZE-KID.

"Do you love your parents, Reginald?"

"Oh, yes!"

"And why do you love your parents, Reginald?"

"Oh, it's the conventional thing!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

HIS POSITION.

"What was at the bottom of that fight between Thompson and Jimpson?"

"Thompson was ill! Thompson was pulled off!"

THEN EVERY ONE LAUGHED.

"Yes," said a man who had just narrated as funny story. "I was once to make a donkey laugh! I laughed till I cried!"

HIS ERRAND.

"Here's a man returning to his wife after an absence of twenty years."

"What excuse did he give for staying away all that time?"

"A little later the bishop did find and did use an opportunity to put the clergyman into a better job, and the cabman's words were justified, for he really did it very well indeed. Dr. Browne has been known to remark, "There is no doubt what the cabman said really influenced me."

A GENEROUS STORK.

Smith—A bear-Brown's wife presented him with rather an interesting birthday present.

"What?"

"You heard only half. It was another case of duplicate presents!"—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

STANDING UP FOR HUSBY.

"Your husband is not a religious man, is he, Mr. Wyrum?"

"I'd like to know if he isn't! He's one of the most advanced ethical cults in this country!"—Chicago Tribune.

A HARD JOB.

"Now, Bobby," said the mother angrily, "don't let me speak to you again."

"But," returned the naughty little fellow, "what can I do to prevent you, mamma?"—Bathos.

HIS MALADY.

Mr. Hildebrandt—When killed by a brother Yogi? Mr. Parson—He died he had a torpede liver, and I expect it was spoiled.—Puck.

THE VERY IDEA.

Clara—While I was playing with Mrs. Hildebrandt, she asked me what was the trump at least six times. I should—Where's my provokable Clara—I should say so! As I was—Puck.

NOT WHAT HE EXPECTED.

"Darling," he murmured, "whatsoever induced you to care for a fellow like me?"

"I really don't know, George," she replied. "He threatened to doct me to a brain specialist."—Boston Transcript.

A young man just returned from college was out cycling one day when suddenly he came to a steep gradient. While descending he lost control of his machine, and two men came and found him lying on the ground. When asked what was the matter he replied:

"Well, I came down that declivity with the greatest velocity and lost my control, gravity, and was precipitated on the head men's head."

"Away, leave him alone," said one of the men. "He's a foreigner."

"I want you to tell me plainly, doctor," said the man with the fat government position, "what is the matter with me?"

"Well," answered the old doctor, leaning back in his chair and looking at his beefy, red-faced patient, "you are suffering from underwork and overeat."

"ORDERED SHOT"

A MEMORIAL DAY STORY

THIS original manuscript of the following narrative is the possession of a grandnephew of the man who wrote it in the year 1862 in one of the camps of the Federal army.

It is here printed for the first time. The real names of persons and of places have been changed to fictitious ones. The signature at the end, which was somewhat roughly written, was apparently added later, since immediately above it there are obvious signs of a pen having slipped to the paper by means of dried ink.

As will be seen, it was intended for one who would already be in possession of some of the facts of the case, and it is in that light that it must be read. It is dated from the camp of the Federal army near Frederickville, Md., Sept. 25, 1862, and reads thus:

It is now 10 p. m., and I am to be shot at daylight. I am tired and have not much time before me for writing. Yet I am going to set down here briefly and so that no doubt may remain what happened in my case at the storming of Fredericksburg, Md., the day before yesterday, and how it was that I did what I did.

Writing this to you, my nephew, and stating to you exactly what I should try to get even with him if I had an opportunity.

Our regiment was almost in the center of the line when the day before yesterday at the storming of the big redoubt, and we had the brunt of the fighting all day. The enemy had thrown up some very strong works in front of the main defenses, and our artillery, aided by the infantry, had a lot of work to do in demolishing them and driving the enemy from them.

We had stormed the earthworks twice already, and had lost at least a third of our officers and men. I had two minor wounds only.

"The captain of my company, Frank Lee, was killed in the second assault, and Williams took his place in command."

There was a surge and a roar of fighting. One was conscious of nothing but the noise of the battle, the shouting, the firing, and the men struggling and men falling. At last I was on the slope of the foot of the breach, and I was killed in the third assault, and I lay there, half choked by smoke and dust.

And then suddenly I saw your father. I cannot explain what happened within me at that moment. I was half dead and perhaps half a child again. I cannot explain, but I saw him as though he were the only man before me. Despite all the noise and confusion, I saw him as though he were at home together in the old days.

It was as though I again flashed on me and made me unconscious of the ghastly holocaust around us. Perhaps your mother was near.

I saw my wife, and whether the same feelings were in him I do not know, but he stood as if turned to stone with his arms outstretched.

The next instant some one in front of me and to my right, I could not see who it was, dashed forward and buried his arms in mine, and I felt his hands on my face.

I saw George's face now. His face dropped, but his eyes remained fixed on me till he felt.

Then I went into him, I think, I felt choked, and things went before me. I killed that man. I do not actually remember how, but he held me as I saw it.

He was William, of course, the man who killed your father and who was killed by me in the end. I am tired and will stop. I have said everything, I think.

But I am not sorry. I believe utterly in the hereafter, and I think that I shall find Helen and George in a little while. I shall be glad to see them, my boy, and God bless you all—Sphero.

A burden to me for years—in fact, ever since that which I first told you of. For your mother, when I dared think of her, I could think of her. I would say, I never knew anything but love. I was not so grief-stricken when I heard of her death as I thought I should have been. I have loved her better and been more in peace since then.

Your father never let me know of the death of his mother. He was a good friend. So instead of a possible reconciliation between your father and me, a thing which I would have almost welcomed then over her grave, I think I hated him more. They say love can only turn to hatred, never to friendship, and so that chance passed.

It is midnight now.

Well, the next thing I must tell you is that the man in my regiment whom I killed first—as they said at the court martial today—an enemy of mine.

His name was Williams, and he was with us recently employed in our line, in a comparatively subordinate position. He was a troublemaker, self-opinionated, and of no great value to the business, and not long ago he was shot by me largely at my instigation and thoroughly as he deserved.

ALTHOUGH The Prudential has yet to span one generation, as men reckon time, and is the youngest of all the great life insurance companies, it is one of the top leaders among these great companies, and has a 2 Billion 600 Million Dollars of Insurance in force.

Progressive management of its business, fair, open-handed dealings with its army of policy-holders, and promptness in paying claims, are some of the things that account for its present greatness.

Hammonton Park is showing up better than ever, and will be a credit to Council's committee if they continue to improve it. The corner entrance has been narrowed, to keep teams off the path; new posts have been set, a new entrance opened in the south corner, bath houses repaired, the docks rebuilt. Other improvements will make it more than ever a popular resort.

Many people were disappointed when we announced that there would be no summer Chautauqua; but we are glad to say that there has been a change, and three days of the week following the close of school will be pleasantly occupied, as will be seen by programmes distributed about town. See their advertisement on this page.

The Sewer Assessment Commissioners invite all interested property owners to meet them at Town Hall on Tuesday evening, June 1st, eight o'clock. No oratory will be allowed, as this will be a purely business meeting, when those who see errors in their assessments may present claims for correction.

We are pleased that the stores are to close at nine o'clock, next Monday. While it will give employees nearly a whole day off, house-holders will have time to replenish the provision chest which ran low over Sunday.

No! the Baptist men folks who went to Egg Harbor last Sunday did not attend the ball game. They went to church, and assisted in raising more of a sentiment against such lawlessness.

Looks like new Bellevue paving. Mayor Burt and Councilman Pizer were in Atlantic City on Thursday, and discussed various materials with the officials.

Leave flowers for Memorial Day at Littlefield's office this evening, as the ladies wish to arrange them in time for an early start on Monday morning.

Purchase your Monday provisions to-day, as far as possible. Do not expect the stores to deliver anything on Memorial Day.

An Important Arrest.
For two years or more, mysterious robberies have occurred in Hammonton, and the perpetrators kept their trail well hidden. But in this, as in some other cases, the state's Land take articles easily identified led to their detection. Over a year ago, Mr. Rider's residence was entered, clothing, food, and a Masonic watch charm taken. Although suspicion pointed to a young Hammontonian, it was not until Wednesday last that he, Isaac P. Hannum, was taken into custody at Ellizabeth by County Detective Harrigan and brought back home. Word of the charm being lost had been sent about the state, and when 'twas pawned, Mr. Rider was notified. Mr. Rider's residence, then on Eleventh Street, was entered and clothing taken. In a pocket was a knife containing like's name, and was in Hannum's possession when he was arrested. With this chain of evidence, Justice Strouse held him without bail, and on Thursday he was taken to May's Landing to await Grand Jury's action. Friends of the young man are loathe to condemn him, blaming his downfall to evil companions.

Rev. Everett vanDright, Robert Steel and George Elvins attended the District Stewards' Meeting, of the Camden District New Jersey Methodist Episcopal Conference, at Pleasantville, Thursday.

Words cannot express to our many kind friends how greatly their expressions of sympathy helped us to bear our terrible grief. Our loss is irreparable, but our gratitude to the people of Hammonton is not to be measured in words.

Mrs. & MRS. ALBERT JACKSON.

As the natural result of little or no home training, and bad company, two boys, age nine and twelve years, Leonard Loecher and John Michael, walked down from Philadelphia, Saturday and Sunday, arriving here on Monday, having been picked up below Hammonton entirely exhausted. Chief Adams saw that they were well fed and sent back home on an afternoon train, with a bit of good advice.
The father of one boy wrote a letter of thanks for kindness, enclosing amount of fare paid. The other family has not been heard from.

The Letter "E."

Someone has advanced the opinion that the letter "e" is the most unfortunate character in the English alphabet, because it is always out of cash, forever in debt, never out of danger, and in hell all the time. For some reasons, he overlooked the fortunes of the letter, so we will call his attention to the fact that "e" is never in war and always in peace. It is the beginning of existence, the commencement of ease and the end of trouble. Without it there would be no meat, no life and no heaven. It is the centre of honesty, makes love perfect, and without it there would be no editors, devils, nor news.
