"WORN OUT."

Suggested by Seeing Boys Kicking an old, battered Domestic Utensil through the Street.

BY JOHN HICKEY.

This Coffee-Pot, which here now lies, Shorn of its shape and brilliant dyes, Has seen a better, brighter day, Though now by rust half hid away. The heedless throng that passes by Behold it with a mocking eye, As sportive boys, with well-shod feet, Kick the poor thing along the street. With spout awry, and handle broken, It scarce presents a single token Of the bright, glittering look it wore When fresh from out the tinman's store.

But yet, in time not long ago, It was a household's pride and show, And bubbled from its spout a spring Sweeter than those which fountains fling. How many a time it served full well At matin meals, who now can tell? And filled the welcome, steaming bowl, With Mosha's berry's fragrant soul, Whilst milk-white hands have lifted up To rosette lips the brimming cup, As loving hearts, in fond accord, Clustered around the festal board.

But now, its palmy days are o'er, It glitters on that board no more; Its purpose done, 'tis cast aside, Like faded beauty in its pride. Why so? Because 'tis tin, and known To have no value of its own, And when its use and shape are lost With kindred rubbish it is tossed. Then, reader, make your deathless mind Like precious silver, thrice refined, And when your spring of youth is spent, Your form by years and trials bent, You'll hear a glad voice say within: "Worn out—but yet not worthless tin!"

From Our Own Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.

FIELD DAY.

The annual inspection and review of the military of Philadelphia took place on Wednesday in the Park. The ranks were well filled, and the men looked remarkably soldierly. There were about three thousand under arms, and the evolutions were performed in a very creditable manner, eliciting frequent applause from the crowds of spectators.

In addition to a number of other prominent military men who were at headquarters during inspection, Gov. Hartranft, Adjutant General Latta, and Major Gent at Bolton, of the Second Division, appeared on the field at noon. A dress parade of the entire division, which was begun shortly before six o'clock in the evening, closed the exercises of the day. Gov. Hartranft reviewing the line from the division headquarters.

Landedowne in the Park has always heretofore been selected as the place for the Field Day, but it must now yield to its successful rival Edgeton, than which there is not a more suitable and beautiful spot in Philadelphia. Visitors to our city should be sure to see these charming places in the Park. They are easy of access by water and rail, and the scenery along the way is most pleasing at this season of the year.

JOURNALISTIC VISITORS.

A party of about one hundred gentlemen, comprising the Indiana Editorial Association, arrived in this city on Wednesday. They are on a pleasure excursion, and they intend visiting all the prominent cities of the East before returning to their homes. They have been taken through Independence Hall, the Park, Mum, Girard College, and several other public places, and they universally expressed themselves as being very much pleased with the attractions and beauties of Philadelphia.

BASE BALL.

It is strange that there is such an inclination among people with regard to this game. The persons who play on the nine are sporting characters, and their adherents belong to the same class. We have games for the championship, and in very many instances they are sold before-hand in the interests of the gambling fraternity. In a Christian and moral community like that of Philadelphia, it is singular to see emblazoned in attractive letters, upon the front of a large public house in a conspicuous part of Chestnut street, the announcement of "pools sold here," thus encouraging gambling, and demoralizing our young people.

There is a law in our State against betting and games of chance. Why should base ball be an exception, and betting be publicly permitted on the ground, even in the very presence of policemen, who are appointed to arrest all offenders? It is true that there were some reformation in this respect, or our youth will be in great danger of becoming ruined by the evil example set before them. The rising generation bid fair not to be an improvement upon their ancestors.

THE UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL.

This most excellent charity will soon be thrown open to the public. It is connected with the time-honored and deservedly popular Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and the building is put up facing on Spruce street between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth, in West Philadelphia. The front is of green stone, and the wings are of brick. The State contributed $200,000 to it, and the fund now consists of $350,000. It requires half a million to enable it fully to benefit suffering humanity, and no object appeals with greater force to the favorable consideration of our benevolent people.

The University Hospital is near the Almshouse, and gentlemen intending to study medicine cannot enter upon a better and more convenient school than that of the medical department of the University.

Their new building is progressing rapidly, and on October 1st it will be entirely completed. It is situated near Thirty-sixth and Locust streets, and the three large and beautiful buildings, viz.: Department of Arts and Science, Medical Department, and University Hospital, are making an improving display and receiving universal admiration.

AMERICAN STEAMSHIP COMPANY.

With almost clockwork precision the vessels of this most excellent line come and go on their destination. The Pennsylvania, that has stood the trial by fire and water, has recently arrived at her berth in the city, and has proved herself to be one of the staunchest vessels afloat. The Ohio was on fire, and it seems almost miraculous that she escaped total destruction. These vessels have been tested fearfully, and yet they are safe, and today are more secure than any vessels on the ocean. Our travelling community cannot do better than to take passage in the ships of the American Steamship Line, because for safety and speed, for superior accommodation and courteous attentions, they cannot be excelled, and they are but rarely equaled. It is the duty of American citizens to encourage American enterprise, and not to bestow all their patronage upon vessels sailing under the flag of a nation that destroyed our commerce during the late rebellion, and built the Alabama to sink our merchantmen on the high seas. American shipbuilders are now launching the best vessels in the world, and Pennsylvania is rapidly taking the foremost position in this important work. The Delaware river will soon be the great centre, and the skill of our mechanics is becoming known over the world.

THE STOCK MARKET.

During this last week there was quite a panic in the stock market, and Pennsylvania Railroad fell to 47 1/2. This is the lowest figure it has touched since the fall of Jay Cooke, and it is safe to predict that it will not attain to be brought so low. There is no reason why the stock of the company should not be $55 today. The bears had a gala time this week, but their joy is now at an end, and stocks are moving up in the bulls' interest. Persons become frightened, and thereupon they throw their shares upon the market, thus knocking down the prices, and creating a panic.

A visit to the Merchants' Exchange during an exciting time in the stock market would suggest the idea of Bedlam let loose. The stranger would not be likely to understand the manner in which the brokers dispose of stocks, and the scene presented is one of apparently mad confusion. We recommend a visitor to Philadelphia to attend a stock sale at the Exchange, and he will return home a much astonished man.

THE CENTENNIAL.

This important project has now reached a crisis. It has been determined, in executive session, to memorialize Congress for authority and power to execute the trust imposed upon the Commission by the act creating it, or failing to do that, to relieve them of their duties by repealing the act. This brings the responsibility of the success or failure of the Exhibition directly upon Congress, where it belongs. If aid is given by Congress, success is assured: if the aid is refused, then Pennsylvania, which must carry out the original design, should have the entire charge of the work, and not have it shared by paid functionaries from other States, whose representatives in Congress are hostile to the whole undertaking.

FINANCIAL.

There was no material change to notice in the money market to-day. Call loans rate at 4 1/2 per cent. Prime mercantile paper ranges from 5 1/2 per cent. per annum.

The stock market was active to-day, but prices generally were unsettled and lower.

Pennsylvania Railroad dividend scrip sold at 100 1/2; no change.

Railroad shares continue the most active on the list.

United States securities were in less active demand, and prices generally tended upward.

Trade generally has been very dull during the past week, but prices are without material change.

Truly thine,

BROADBENT.

St. Nicholas, Scribner & Co.'s Young Folks' Magazine, absorbed, with its first vital inspirations, that favorite of so many little ones, The Young Folks, with its corps of contributors, and a short time ago, another favorite, The Children's Hour, edited and published by T. S. Arthur, of Philadelphia, was purchased by the above enterprising firm, and the three have been made one—one grand periodical, a combination of style, variety and talent, that justly entitles it to a higher place, as an educator of children, of small and larger growth, than ever has been, and we had almost said, ever can be again attained. But from what this enterprising firm have done, there is no telling what they may not do. Such enterprise beseeches success, and we say to all our readers, that, in every house, where there are children—it is but a poor apology for a home where there are no children—there should this prince of young folks' magazines be found, to mould and form their minds for thought, for action, and the duties of after life.

OUR BOOK TABLE.

Our charming views of the beautiful and little known scenery in Northern Vermont, head the list of illustrations in the June Atlantic, a monthly as rare among other periodicals, as a June day is rare in the year. As heretofore, nothing yet published surpasses in beauty these pictures, which are exact copies of works of art, and characteristic of the country they depict. "On the Mississippi" is the first full-page picture, showing the rush and swirl of color, and the rocks and woods of this enchanting river. Another picture, the whole series being from the pencil of Thomas Moran, is "A Glimpse of the Mississippi," as it winds through a peaceful valley, full of quiet beauty. A large full-page picture gives the bold and rugged scenery of the Adirondacks, a well known summer resort, noted for the romantic beauty of its scenery. "Mount Mansfield from the Hill" is the last of this admirable series. A grand panorama of some forty miles of the noble Green Mountains is shown in this picture. Arthur Parton contributes a full page "Scene on the Shenandoah," which depicts a grand and remarkable scenery near Harpers Ferry, where the waters of the Shenandoah unite with the Potomac, a point when one can see Jefferson. Other pictures in this number are "Almost a Dinner," a beautiful view of a red deer, called "A Road Run," "A Turkish Court Yard Scene," in which a gypsy is dancing before a group of Turkish women. "Such a Shot" is a picture of real life, showing how, when boys, we went hunting, and met difficulties in the path, and a life-like portrait of John Lee for Wallace, the great actor, and the best of his name now on the American stage. A better list of pictures, of greater variety, and more general interest could hardly have been selected. The literary contents of this number of The Atlantic are of greater variety and extent than usual, embracing poetry, absorbing stories, facts and fiction, with editorial articles descriptive of the most beautiful illustrations, with music, art and literature of a high order of excellence. So a year, including a novel, "The East" and "The West," James S. Sutton & Co., publishers, 12 Market Lane, New York City.
