FIEDLER'S

A ROMANTIC CAREER.

The story of an American Viscountess in England.

Of all the beautiful and wealthy American girls who have contracted matrimonial alliances with titled Europeans few have had so romantic a career as Viscountess Deerehurst, who recently presented an heir to her distinguished husband.

Viscountess Deerehurst, who is accounted one of the most beautiful women of Europe, and who was also a heiress of great wealth when she married, was an Illinois girl by birth, and her earliest years were ones of domestic life. Her birthplace was a farm in Fulton County, near Farmington, and about twenty miles west of the city of St. Louis. Her father's name was William Daniel, but this was a fact known to only a few people when the beautiful and accomplished Virginia Danforth, a name that subsequently came to her, was known in London society with all the advantages that nature had lavished upon her, supplemented by the education of a prospective millionaire. Her success was instantaneous, and it was not long before she had the slighest of Great Britain's aristocracy at her feet. She was taken up by royalty itself, in the person of Princess Christian, and her presentation to the queen stamped her position in the great world of fashionable and exclusive society.

About this time came an event in Virginia Danforth's career which nearly wrecked her life and happiness, and she was almost driven to despair by the wreck of her brain fever, and brought her near death's door. Among the noblest of saviors that bearded her was a soldierman of high title, a long and distinguished career, and of distinguished character. His services were rewarded by the queen, and he was made a baronet. He was the son of a nobleman, and his name was Lord Skagway. He was a man of high title, a long and distinguished career, and of distinguished character. His services were rewarded by the queen, and he was made a baronet. He was the son of a nobleman, and his name was Lord Skagway.

LIFE IN A CONVICT COLONY.

New California a Delightful Place in Which to Pass an Impassioned.

The island of New California, where I have lived for the past few years, is a French penal colony," said C. W. Freeman, an English gentleman, "I went there for my health, expecting to stay only a short time, but went into the business of raising coffee, for which the country is well adapted, and finally concluded to stay permanently. New California is 1,200 miles east of Australia, and although within the tropics, has a delightful climate for ten months in the year. During January and February the weather is so excessively hot that one cannot live in comfort. It is forty miles wide by 400 long.

There are between 5,000 and 6,000 convicts on the island, and perhaps an equal number of ticket of leave men—that is, men who have served out their terms of imprisonment, but who are forbidden to leave and have to report to the authorities twice a week. They are a miserable, spiritless lot, these ticket of leave fellows, who work just enough to keep from starvation and whose highest ambition is to get money enough to get out of the island. The French officials, and I doubt if there is a penal settlement in the world where the men have the same care and consideration shown them.

"The coffee plantations are worked largely by negroes, who come from the New Hebrides under contract to stay two or three years, the local labor being very unreliable. The pay of the laborers is 52 per cent and natives, who are being the principal article of food. This cheapness of labor is the explanation of the profit in cultivating coffee. If we had to pay the wages current in the United States, there would be no money in its production. We export to France and are allowed a rebate of one-half of the entry duties, which is a considerable bonus.

"There are a few Englishmen in New California, but no Americans. I believe outside of the Consul. The French are very jealous of foreigners and discourage all outsiders from coming there."

WOMAN'S DEVOTION TO HOME.

Dear Mrs. PINKHAM—I feel it my duty to write to you to tell you that I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and think there is no medicine in the world like it. I suffered for nine years, and sometimes for twelve weeks at a time I could not stand on my feet. I had female troubles of all kinds: backache, and headache all the time. Seven different doctors treated me. Some said I would have to go to the hospital and have an operation performed. But oh how thankful I am that I did not! I tried your Compound and I cannot say too much in its praise, nor thank you enough for what it has done for me. I want you to publish this in all the papers for the good of other sufferers.

The wives and mothers of America are given to overwork. Let them be wise in time and at the first indication of female trouble write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. This advice is promptly given without charge.

The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ailments is unparalleled; for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for some time past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, advising and helping by letter as many as a hundred thousand ailing women during a single year.

BOUNDARY STONES MISSING.

County Seekers Stealing the Markers on the Mason and Dixon Line.

Mason and Dixon's line, so much heard of during the exciting anti-slavery times prior to 1861, when the great civil war broke out, passes along the southern boundary of Maryland, Delaware and West Maryland townships, York County, and at the point where it crosses the Baltimore and Hanover turnpike is seven or eight miles distant from the town of Baltimore. That portion of the line which runs through Adams County is about six miles distant.

This line was run by Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, two eminent civil engineers, who were brought from England by the lords of William Penn and Lord Baltimore to establish a true and correct boundary line dividing their respective proprietary possessions in Pennsylvania and Maryland—long in dispute, and was commenced in 1763 and finished in 1767, four years being occupied in the survey. A milestone or marker was placed at each and every mile along the entire length of the line as surveyed, and at every ten miles a larger and more elaborate stone was erected, with the Pennsylvania coat of arms on one side and those of Maryland on the other.

These stones were about three feet high, and many of them still remain in their original positions, marking the famous boundary line between the northern and southern sections of the country—a special line made famous and historic by the anti-slavery and pro-slavery forces and the national halls of legislation by the statement of the North and South in their heated discussions of the slavery question in the ante-bellum days.

These stones are of a peculiar species of granite, and were brought from Scotland in vessels at the time the survey was made and transported the entire length of the boundary line by pack mules, a slow and tedious job, and it is to be regretted that any one should have been so valuable as to remove any of them, even for relics, or to utilize them about their premises, but unfortunately this has been done, and a number of them are missing and have totally disappeared and their whereabouts are unknown. The County Commissioners of York and Adams Counties have been endeavoring for some time past to locate these boundary stones, and passed along the line of their respective counties to note their condition and as far as possible remove and replace them in their original locations. Some of the stones have been found by the ground, and here and there others removed and carried away, leaving a gap several miles in the line unmarked.

An effort should be made to discover the whereabouts of the missing stones, and the persons in whose possession they are and the parties compelled to restore them, if still intact and perfect in this historic boundary line, which should be faithfully preserved.—Hanover (Pa.) Record.

SEERMONS OF THE DAY.

Preached by Rev. Dr. Talmage.

Copy-right, Louis Klopsch, 1899.

Subject: "The Path of Safety"—Memorial to Our National Existence—The Danger of Monopoly, Nationalism and Adultery Pointed Out.

Washington, D. C.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage speaks of some of the perils that threaten our American institutions and points out the path of safety. Talmage said, "I, 'This land shall be married.'"

Another peril for the hand of the nation is infidelity. When the midnight ruffians despoiled the grave of A. T. Stewart at New York, they were not only robbing a man, but they were robbing the nation. It was a robbery of the nation's soul. It was a robbery of the nation's soul. It was a robbery of the nation's soul.

NEW MISSION SOCIETY.

Formed by Baptists to Establish Foreign Missions.

A new mission society has been organized among Baptists. Rev. Dr. George C. Lorimer, of Tremont Temple, Boston, is one of its organizers. It aims to put into foreign mission efforts a new idea—that of mission stations, which, after having been given three or four years to get started, must be self-supporting thereafter. The field secretary of the new society is Rev. Charles S. Morris, a grandson-in-law of Frederick Douglass, starts shortly for Liberia.

SLEEPING BAG LIKE A HOUSE.

Porter's Shelter that is Rich in Comfort and Convenience.

Hunters, prospectors, and persons coming to move from day to day have found the sleeping bag the most convenient form of bed and these are now in general use among this class of people. They are extremely comfortable and at the same time offer absolute protection from the elements, as they are generally lined with some soft material and have an outer covering of leather or rubber to keep out the wet. Their form is generally well known, but what seems to be a great improvement in these has been recently patented in this country by Alford Lapierre of Montreal. His invention consists of a rigid frame, collapsible when not in use, and covered with some material adapted to withstand the weather. The whole top is removable on a hinge to admit of entrance, while at the upper end of this lid is a smaller opening, also covered with a similar material.

Dr. Mark Nilsson, a prominent physician of New York city, died last Friday morning at the residence of his sister, Dr. Anna T. Nilsson, in Newark, N. J., aged 60 years. The funeral was held last Sunday afternoon, and the remains were brought to Hammonton for interment in the cemetery.

Dr. Mark Nilsson was the youngest brother of the late Dr. Nelson Nilsson, of Burdett, He belonged to a family of physicians, and was also a brother of Miss S. N. Nilsson M. D., who is well known as the proprietor of the Dryden Springs Place, and also of a Sanatorium at Hammonton, N. J.—Weekly Mirror, May 25, 1899.

A Valuable Publication.
On June 1st, the Passenger Department of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will publish the 1899 edition of its Hammonton-Eckhardt's Market Book. This work is designed to provide the public with short descriptive notes of the principal business concerns of Hammonton, and routes for reaching them, and the rates of fare. It contains all the principal business and commercial concerns of the city, and over fifteen hundred routes of communication for reaching them. The book has been compiled with the utmost care, and is the most complete and comprehensive handbook of Hammonton ever offered to the public.

It is bound in a handsome and striking cover, in color, and contains several maps, presenting the exact routes over which travelers should go. It is profusely illustrated with fine half-tones, and is one of the most valuable and useful books of the season. It is sold at the various news-stands and along the lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

On and after June 1st it may be procured at any news-stand, or by mail, at the nominal price of ten cents, or by application to the general office, Broad Street Station, by mail for 20 cents.

AUGUST FLOWER.

"It is a surprising fact," says Prof. Houtor, "that in my travels in all parts of the world, for the last ten years, I have not more people having used Green's August Flower than any other remedy for dyspepsia, deranged liver and stomach, and for constipation. I find for tourists and salesmen, or for persons filling office positions, where headaches and general bad feelings from irregular habits exist, that Green's August Flower is a grand remedy. It does not injure the system by frequent use, and is excellent for sour stomachs and indigestion." Sample bottles free at Crowell's Pharmacy. Sold by dealers in all civilized countries.

The Boys' Brigade presented a fine appearance, Tuesday, with their neat uniforms,—white pants, blue coats, and white helmets with spikes and eagle. They have improved very much in drill under the teaching of Lew Allendar, late of Company F, 4th N. J. V., and received many compliments.

A change of time on the W. J. & S. Railroad took effect on Thursday. Up trains now leave Hammonton at 6:55, 7:11, 9:30 (exp), a. m.; 12:30 and 5:30 p. m.; Sundays, 7:41 a. m., and 4:50 p. m. Down trains arrive,—6:50 (not scheduled to stop), 9:16 a. m., 12:03, 2:41 (exp), 5:53, 7:30 p. m.; Sundays, 9:40 a. m., 5:42 p. m.

Mrs. Oakleigh had a nearly full hall, Tuesday evening, at her phonograph concert. That same phonograph is one of the mysteries of the age,—that a little cylinder, containing on its surface a few nearly invisible scratches, attached to a bit of a machine, should so perfectly reproduce the human voice in song or speech, or the music of an orchestra or band, is what puzzles the average hearer. They all appeared to enjoy the entertainment, and frequently applauded. The proceeds must have been sufficient to substantially relieve the needy family for whom they were intended.

And still the boom goes on. Hammonton is keeping pace with her sister towns. E. W. Strickland has a contract to build a very convenient and cozy cottage for Mr. J. A. Cunningham, on his farm, to be 24x28 feet, with large porches extending around two sides,—roof of porch to be a continuation of the main roof, concealed at plate, which will give a very pretty effect. The main room will have a large open fire-place, of stone, and rustic stair-cases. He has also a contract to erect a hall, 23x40 feet, for the Hammonton Italian Benevolent Society, on Main Road, and a six room house for Wm. Schneider, of Philadelphia, on Walker Road, with out-buildings, barn, sheds, etc.; also an addition to Mrs. Miller's house near Egg Harbor Road; besides a number of smaller jobs. It is certainly encouraging to see the time when you cannot hire another carpenter in town.

Miss Nilsson, M. D., will open her Dryden Springs Sanatorium this season on June 6th, and will this year make a special effort in the development of an industry in its making and shipping of the well known Dryden Springs mineral waters to Philadelphia and other points. She has secured the services of a competent and experienced manager to take charge of the natural water plant, and a carload of packages for use in putting up the water has already been received. The curative properties of the water of the natural springs is well known, and the proof of their popularity at home is presented in the unanimous record of over three generations, testifying to their helpfulness in kidney trouble, rheumatism, skin and blood diseases, etc. The Springs extend over an area of several acres, varying depths from thirty to ninety feet, and flowing at an elevation of from three to twenty feet above ground. The medicinal properties of the water are more or less distinct, dyspepsia, neuralgia and toothache, the spring has special qualities, while there are number less highly charged with minerals, which are unexcelled as table waters.—Weekly Mirror.

The C. C. Club ran, last Friday night, was the most successful one held this season. There were thirty-six participants, every one out for fun, and I believe had it. We rode to Spring Garden, and dismounted while the Captain went into what was once the Spring Garden tavern and secured permission to sit on the porch and eat our lunch. He was very courteously received, and we were soon comfortably seated. At a previous meeting the ladies proposed to provide a lunch if the gentlemen would carry it. This being agreed to, on this occasion each gent was presented with a box containing dyspepsia, insomnia, etc., which he tied to his wheel for transportation. The old tavern is a short distance above Avenue, and was at one time a stage coach station. It is safe to say that the house is over a century old. There is an acre in front, which makes it an ideal place to spend a pleasant time. I cannot now state when we will have our next run. SEC.

AN OLD TALE RETRIMMED.

At twenty-six the maiden fair,
With many lovers busy
Will sit her nose up in the air
And ask with quite a haughty stare,
"Who is he? Oh, who is he?"

At twenty-five she's more subdued—
With sweethearts and admirers
Still doubtful men must not intrude,
She asks—with no wish to be rude—
"What is he? Oh, what is he?"

But at the age of thirty-five,
With hope deferred quite dizzy,
She works on quite a different plan
And cries when hearing of a man—
"Where is he? Oh, where is he?"

Barnaby's Escape.

NEVER had a nephew better reasons for striving to keep on good terms with his uncle. There was the profitable business in the city which John Goldy had promised should be his when he retired, and there was Bessie. Barnaby Morton thought a good deal more of his pretty cousin than of the business—naturally, for the business had no mind to change, and Bessie had.

They were not engaged. John Goldy, perhaps, for reasons of his own, possibly in Bessie's interest, had forbidden him to ask the momentous question until she had seen a little more of the world.

"There's plenty of time for that," he said, and refused to listen to argument. But his answer had been favorable, most likely Bessie would have laughed in her lover's face; but she had so long been as brother and sister. But she liked him better than any one else, she had told him so.

Such was the situation when Barnaby was requested to look after his uncle's house during the absence of the family at Brighton.

"I don't want you to neglect the business, you know," John Goldy exclaimed. "You can leave an hour sooner, then you'll get here at 4. Don't be absent at night on any account; and if you go out for a walk, mind you come in early. The parlor maid goes with us, but the cook will be there to attend to you."

His concluding words were: "Now don't let there be another burglary." Barnaby promised to obey every injunction faithfully. But he wouldn't have believed that Bessie's absence could make such a difference in the family. Seven of them he bore, then tempered his solitude with friends, to whom he gave little dinners in return for their companionship.

One afternoon the most obliging of these young gentlemen, a doctor whose practice had scarcely begun to sprout, called at Mr. Goldy's office in the city.

"I want you to do me a favor, Mr. Morton," said he. "You know Miss Trevelyan, I've persuaded her to let me take her to the theater to-night. Her aunt goes, of course. I should be eternally obliged if you would contrive to meet us—quite by accident, you know—and take charge of the old lady. She's spoiled every opportunity I've had so far, and I want to bring her the affair to a head."

"I'm very sorry, Sir," Barnaby replied. "You know I promised the governor I would spend every evening at his house."

"Yes, but you're the only fellow I'm acquainted with who knows Miss Trevelyan and her aunt. I'm afraid a stranger to them wouldn't be able to help me much. When is the governor expected back?"

"To-morrow," said Barnaby. "And he has been away three weeks. Bessie doesn't work but she's a stranger to them wouldn't be able to help me much. When is the governor expected back?"

"To-morrow," said Barnaby. "And he has been away three weeks. Bessie doesn't work but she's a stranger to them wouldn't be able to help me much. When is the governor expected back?"

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

THIS IS THEIR DEPARTMENT OF THE PAPER.

Quaint Sayings and Cute Doings of the Little Folks Everywhere, Gathered and Printed Here for All Other Little Ones to Read.

The life of an African boy contrasted with that of an American Indian shows a striking difference in the manner of the cultivation of children by barbarians and civilized people. The however, are hardy youngsters and the neglect they suffer while infants is a benefit to them physically in later life.

Making Steel Pens. Briefly described, steel pens are made as follows: First, a steel rod is rolled into thin sheets and then cut into strips about three inches in width. The strips are heated to a bright red and are then allowed to cool gradually, which anneals them. They are next rolled to the necessary thickness, and are cut into blank flat pens, and are made while flat, are usually stamped with the brand or the name of the manufacturer.

To shape the pens is the next process. The rounding makes them bend the ink and distribute it more gradually and evenly than could be done if they were flat. To harden them they are heated to a cherry red, and then suddenly cooled. This not only hardens them, but makes them elastic. The polishing, slitting, pointing and finishing come next, and then they are ready for use. The little holes in the pens at the end of the nibs serve to guide the ink from the first ink a stream again breaks forth from the side of a nib, and it has been established beyond all doubt that this is a continuation of the famous Lost River.

After running through a natural bed for a distance of two miles it again disappears. Eight miles southwest it comes to the surface as abruptly to flow on for another mile or so, and then disappears in another sink. It rushes forth again from under a bluff, and continues as a modest, unassuming, every-day stream to its junction with White river a few miles distant. There are indications that at one time in the past there was a regular surface bed over which the stream flowed. But this bed is now dry and overgrown with trees and brush. Still during the freshest seasons the underground caverns are evidently overtaxed, and the overflow runs down the old bed to the second sink, and then to the third and the fourth, and then joins the lost stream.

But Lost River is simply the parent of numerous remarkable surface and subterranean streams. A year ago it was found that there was a subterranean stream running under Rush County, almost seventy-five miles northeast. It was discovered in a rather remarkable way. William Barton, a visitor at a public school, being requested to address the pupils, spoke of the necessity of obeying their teachers and growing up to be useful, loyal and patriotic citizens. To emphasize his remarks, he pointed to a large national flag that almost covered one end of the room, and said: "Now, boys, who can tell me what that flag is there for?" One little fellow, who understood the condition of the room better than the speaker, replied: "I know, sir. It's to hide the dirt."

There is a Difference. "Tommy," said the teacher, "there are many differences between words 'ful' and 'enough'." "Yes'm," replied the youngster. "Sufficient" is when mother thinks I have eaten enough pie, and 'enough' is when I think I have eaten sufficient."

Something Forgotten. Little 4-year-old Edith had often observed her mother, when compelled to take bitter medicine, utter and say "Ugh" after swallowing it. One day, Edith failed to make the usual exclamation, and Edith said: "Mamma, you forgot to make a face out loud."

A Nice Evening. Chinese customs and comestibles are so very queer that we never fail to find a Chinese bill-of-fare an interesting document. Three cyclists in the land of the Dragon Flag recently attended a full-dress Chinese dinner, with chopsticks in place of forks and spoons, festive Chinese music and music, and green jackets over their gayest frocks, and a menu of which they have given the benefit to the public in Travel.

The meal was of the usual Chinese variety. It began with sweets and ended with soup. First there was served a liquid like warm sherbet, with little jam dumplings and a vermicelli concoction called almond tea. Then was set down to the table a bowl of rice, with sugar cane, cherries, shrimps, dates, cuttlefish, oranges, slices of preserved duck, preserved walnuts and so on, every one helping himself by means of chopsticks and a pair of silver tongs. I found the cook asleep and was unable to arouse her, and I drank a glass of wine to steady my nerves. I must have dropped almost instantly. But we'll say no more about it."

The cook also recovered quickly. She slept about 6 o'clock the previous evening. Of course, she declared that she never would have thought of touching the wine if Barnaby had not asked her to do so.

John Goldy never told Barnaby what had passed between the bogus captain and Bessie at Brighton, nor has Mrs. Barnaby Morton yet found out. The story was told to the author by a friend of the author.

An Old-Fashioned Custom. The practice so common among merchants and clerks of placing the pen behind the ear is a very old one. According to accounts, the scribes in ancient Egypt would clip their red pencils behind their ears, while listening or resting from their work. In the middle ages also, pen-clerks and scribes would be accustomed to carry the pen behind the ear.

INDIANA'S LOST RIVER.

Breaks Out on Surface in Spots and Then Disappears. Geological explorations and recent floods have brought to light many interesting facts concerning the "lost river" of Indiana and lead to the belief that hundreds of feet under the ground in the State great rivers are gushing toward the sea, appearing at the surface here and there in Southern Indiana to again lose themselves farther on. The most wonderful of the surface indications are found in the southwestern portion of the State, says a correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean, especially in the vicinity of Orange County, where the famous Lost River is formed by a half dozen of the world's most wonderful creeks and brooks.

Lost river rises all of a sudden in Washington County. It rather gushes from a bank a mile or so, and after running a mile or so, it suddenly disappears from view. Near Orleans it suddenly sinks into a great cavernous hole. The passage is black and unfathomable, and even in the driest of seasons it never has been explored. A mile from the first sink a stream again breaks forth from the side of a bluff, and it has been established beyond all doubt that this is a continuation of the famous Lost River.

After running through a natural bed for a distance of two miles it again disappears. Eight miles southwest it comes to the surface as abruptly to flow on for another mile or so, and then disappears in another sink. It rushes forth again from under a bluff, and continues as a modest, unassuming, every-day stream to its junction with White river a few miles distant. There are indications that at one time in the past there was a regular surface bed over which the stream flowed. But this bed is now dry and overgrown with trees and brush. Still during the freshest seasons the underground caverns are evidently overtaxed, and the overflow runs down the old bed to the second sink, and then to the third and the fourth, and then joins the lost stream.

But Lost River is simply the parent of numerous remarkable surface and subterranean streams. A year ago it was found that there was a subterranean stream running under Rush County, almost seventy-five miles northeast. It was discovered in a rather remarkable way. William Barton, a visitor at a public school, being requested to address the pupils, spoke of the necessity of obeying their teachers and growing up to be useful, loyal and patriotic citizens. To emphasize his remarks, he pointed to a large national flag that almost covered one end of the room, and said: "Now, boys, who can tell me what that flag is there for?" One little fellow, who understood the condition of the room better than the speaker, replied: "I know, sir. It's to hide the dirt."
